last Monday that he was convinced it was his duty to present his evidence and his "leads" to the state's attorney. The examination of witnesses proved that operations of the ring were not confined to the pharmacy field by a long ways. The trail led to special "schools" and there, it was found, the "fixers" dealt not only in druggists' certificates, but also in physicians' licenses and other permits.

All these examinations are centered in the department of registration and education, the director of which is William Henry Harrison Miller of Champaign, the Small ticket candidate for lieutenant governor in 1920, a race in which he was badly defeated.

Within his department are grouped fourteen examining boards. They include among others in addition to the pharmacy and medical boards, the boards that examine dentists, architects, optometrists, nurses, veterinarians, horseshoers, and chiropodists.

The majority of these fields have not been touched by the investigation, but so many of them were affected by the inquiry that it was evident the weakness did not lie in an examining board or two. The investigators are unanimous in the opinion that the trouble lies somewhere in the department itself, which is superior to the boards in some things, including its opportunities.

Board Blames Department.

That is the attitude of the pharmacy board, which now consists of Isaac Platt, Chicago; Charles Vlçek, Cicero; R. R. Barnes, Bushnell; Dwight D. Moore, Bloomington, and W. S. Denton, Sterling.

These examiners, like a great many other people, had heard whisperings concerning state examinations and, in particular, the one that began last Tuesday. Therefore, they say, they were on their guard so that when, on Monday, V. C. Michel, superintendent of registration, a subordinate of Director Miller, arrived with special orders, they were not surprised.

Michel said his orders came directly from Gov. Small. He said the governor ordered that the questions already prepared for the examination be discarded and that an entirely new set be prepared. He quoted the governor as saying that if possible 100 questions be prepared on each of the four subjects in the examination, that these one hundred be dropped into a box, and that twenty be drawn out by chance so there would be no one who could have advance information concerning the tests.

Prepare New Questions.

The board found it impractical to follow this method, but its members worked until after 4 o'clock Tuesday morning preparing an entirely new set of questions.

When the applicants arrived in the lecture room at the University of Illinois school of pharmacy Chairman Platt addressed them and read an emphatic statement warning them that the examination was to be conducted honestly and fairly and telling them that if any one had paid out money in hope that this would carry him through he had been the victim of fraud.

And almost the minute the distribution of the new questions had been completed and the applicants had looked at them several arose and walked out of the room. They gave no explanation for their departure. Some one said no diagram was necessary.

Platt and Miller Clash.

Somewhere during this stage of the proceeding Director Miller is said to have attempted to take charge of the examination. Chairman Platt stopped him.

"I'm in charge," Platt said. "I'm chairman here."

The narrative goes on that Director Miller made what seemed to be a threatening step toward Chairman Platt. And the story goes on like this:

"See that big fellow up there?" asked Platt, pointing to a "husky" near the top of the amphitheater seats. "Well, take a look at that hospital across the street. Take a good look now, because you won't be able to see when they carry you in if you lay a hand on me."

This exchange was carried on quietly, but something similar, although milder, is said to have occurred later. It is reported that Director Miller told Supt. Michel there was "no need" of his remaining at the examination any longer, that he could return to Springfield. But Michel told him he had received his orders from Gov. Small and intended to carry them out.

Fixes Meeting Date for Small.

Michel brought another message to the examiners. He said Gov. Small had told them to hold themselves in readiness for a meeting with them Saturday—yesterday—at 10 a. m. The examination, largely because it was so carefully conducted, dragged out to Friday. Thursday night in a session which again lasted until 4 a. m. the board determined to lay all they knew before the governor and ask him to force Director Miller's resignation. The alternative was their own resignation in a body.

But at 10 a. m. the governor was not to be found. Chairman Platt, with Moore and Barnes, was seen going into the Great Northern hotel twice during the day. But their inquiries were fruitless. In the evening Moore and Barnes returned to their downstate homes.

Director Miller was found at his Chicago office in the afternoon. He made a flat denial that he knew of any of the alleged violations of law that have been uncovered. He said he was going to Champaign in the evening.

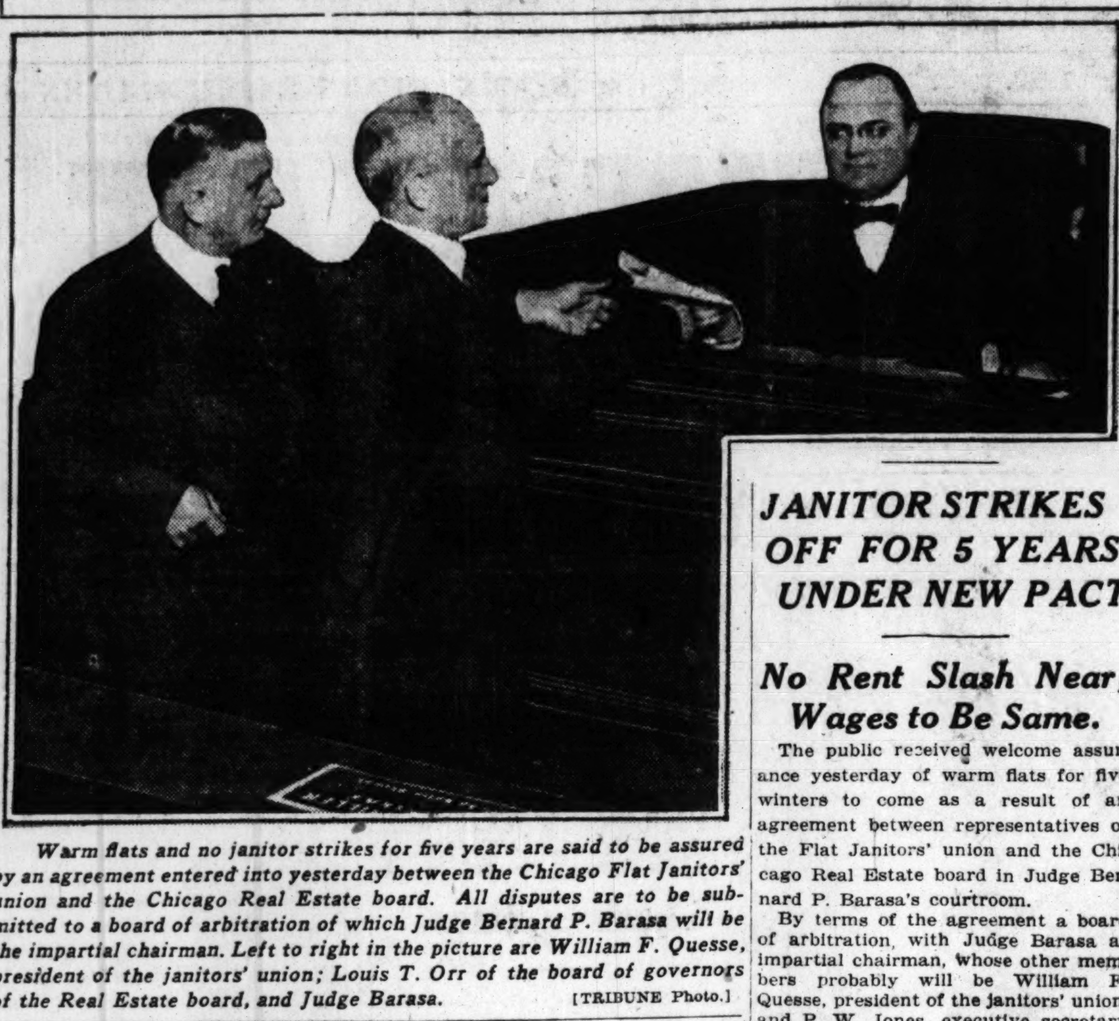
THEY'LL KEEP THE HOME FIRES BURNING



Warm flats and no janitor strikes for five years are said to be assured by an agreement entered into yesterday between the Chicago Flat Janitors' union and the Chicago Real Estate board. All disputes are to be submitted to a board of arbitration of which Judge Bernard P. Barasa will be the impartial chairman. Left to right in the picture are William F. Quesse, president of the janitors' union; Louis T. Orr of the board of governors of the Real Estate board, and Judge Barasa. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

N. Y. MENUS THE SAME YESTERDAY, TODAY, FOREVER

New York, March 18.—The quick lunch, the chain grocery and the self service restaurant have created a "homogenic appetite" among the 8,000,000 persons who eat three meals a day in the district embraced by the port of New York.

This is the conclusion of the port of New York authority, which has just concluded a survey to evolve an emergency plan for distributing foodstuffs by truck, automobile and airplane in the event of a strike.

Sectional and racial differences of diet are fast disappearing and a more and more standardized menu is being ladled out, the report says.

Altogether inhabitants of the New York port district eat 8,500,000,000 pounds of food each year, or 1,375 pounds each.

In terms of pounds per adult consumer it was learned that each persons disposes of 153 pounds of meat; 26 of fish; 277 of sweet milk; 8 of cheese; 30 of eggs; and 38 of fats, including butter; 320 of bread and other cereals; 333 of vegetables; 120 of fruits; 55 of sugar, and 15 of tea and coffee.

Gopher and Badger States Buried Under Sleet, Snow

St. Paul, Minn., March 18.—Minnesota and upper Wisconsin were sheathed in ice today for the second time within a month. Hundreds of telegraph wires and telephone and power poles broke under the weight, and thousands of lines went down.

St. Cloud and forty-five towns and villages in the vicinity were without light and power from Friday night until tonight.

Divides East and West.

Omaha, Neb., March 18.—A heavy sleet and wind storm in the vicinity of Grand Island, Neb., crippled wire communication to the west tonight. Points west of Grand Island to the Pacific coast were without communication with eastern points, officials said.

New York Papers Refuse to Postpone Press Ruling

New York, March 18.—New York newspaper publishers tonight refused a last minute request from George L. Berry, president of the International Pressmen's union, to postpone further the putting into effect of the conditions of Federal Judge Manton's award as arbitrator in the recent dispute with Newspaper Web Pressmen's union No. 25. The new conditions will be put into effect Monday morning.

JANITOR STRIKES OFF FOR 5 YEARS UNDER NEW PACT

No Rent Slash Near; Wages to Be Same.

The public received welcome assurance yesterday of warm flats for five winters to come as a result of an agreement between representatives of the Flat Janitors' union and the Chicago Real Estate board in Judge Bernard P. Barasa's courtroom.

By terms of the agreement a board of arbitration, with Judge Barasa as impartial chairman, whose other members probably will be William F. Quesse, president of the janitors' union, and P. W. Jones, executive secretary of the real estate board, will hear and decide all complaints concerning wages or service.

Under provisions of the agreement read by the arbiter, no changes in the existing wage scale and working conditions will be made this year. They will remain the same as in 1921.

Puts Ban on Strikes.

There are to be no strikes during the five years of the agreement. Furthermore, at the end of that period, the matter of a new agreement for another period is to be submitted to arbitration without the calling of strikes.

"Any janitor who is incompetent will be discharged by the arbitration board," read Judge Barasa. "If he is giving poor service by reason of attempting to handle too many buildings, he will be restricted to such buildings as he can handle properly.

"If he has a number of flats requiring the services of more than one man, he will not be permitted to employ any janitor and pay him below the union scale. I desire to eliminate the feeling that has existed on the part of some janitors, that 'his job was secure, no matter what kind of service he rendered.'"

Rights of Public Considered.

Judge Barasa declared throughout his reading that the rights of the renting public must be considered, even before the interests of the other two parties. The fact that the agreement ends on March 1, 1927, was an important point, he said, because it eliminated the danger of warfare on Jan. 1, the middle of the winter and holiday season.

"You have conferred a great honor upon me," Judge Barasa concluded, handing copies of the treaty to Quesse and to Louis T. Orr, a member of the board of governors of the Chicago Real Estate board, "but you're letting me in for a lot of hard work at the same time.

"I have learned that there will be no reduction of rents in the coming year, and I felt it would be unfair to reduce janitors' pay for that reason. According to this award, wages will be reduced at the same rate as there is a reduction in rent. The tenants are entitled to this consideration, and should be given it in many cases of overcharging."

CALL STRIKE ON BUILDING SWEPT BY RECENT FIRE

Jensen Orders Walkout of Carpenters.

A strike of carpenters, employed to work under the terms and provisions of the Landis award, yesterday halted the work of rehabilitating the fifteen story office building of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, which was partially destroyed by fire last Wednesday morning.

The strike was called at noon yesterday by Harry Jensen, president of the Carpenters' District council, who said that the contractors who hired the union carpenters didn't live up to their contract.

Here's Jensen Statement.

"Shortly after the fire Jack Cameron, a superintendent for the John Griffith & Son Construction company, made arrangements to hire members of our union," asserted Jensen last night.

"He agreed to pay the carpenters at the scale of $1.10 an hour. When the men were paid off it was learned that they were being paid $1 an hour. Then I called the eighty-five men who were on the job out on strike."

Officials of the Burlington said the strike will prevent 2,500 of their employés from returning to work.

Last night the following statement was issued by the railroad company:

"The destruction of the fifteen story general office building of the Burlington railroad was one of the greatest catastrophes in the history of Chicago.

"This building, as fireproof as science and money could make it, was damaged by a fire of an outside origin.

"The management of the Burlington took emergency steps to rehabilitate the lower eight floors of the building, contracting with John Griffith & Son on the basis of the conditions of the Landis award in accordance with the expressed preference of the representative interests of Chicago and with the understanding that all haste possible, working day and night, was to be made in order that the hundreds of employés could get back to work Monday morning.

Calls Condition "Lamentable."

"In face of these conditions President Harry Jensen of the Carpenters' District council called a strike.

"While the crafts as a rule accepted the conditions of the Landis award, it is true, nevertheless, that the carpenters did not accept these conditions.

"It is lamentable, however, in view of the size and the importance of the building to the interests of Chicago, with every effort being put forth to restore normal conditions, that any group of men can delay work of such magnitude and prevent thousands from returning to work."

CLEANERS MAKE 25 PER CENT CUT IN PRICE RATES

A 25 per cent slash in the cost of cleaning and pressing men's suits and overcoats was announced yesterday by Russell J. Poole, city Hi Cost expert. The price cut is effective tomorrow.

The reduction was decided upon at a meeting of the Master Cleaners and Dyers' association at the Hotel Sherman. Mr. Poole has been conducting a campaign for lower prices of cleaning and dyeing for six months.

The cleaners and dyers, it is said, believe that the reduction from $2 to $1.50 for cleaning and pressing suits and overcoats will mean more business and fewer baggy trousers.

"This item is the biggest one in cleaners line of business," Mr. Poole's letter to Ald. Kaindl, chairman of the council living cost committee says. "The reduction means a saving of $12,000 a day to Chicago, as there are about 24,000 suits and overcoats cleaned daily. The cleaners have considered the unemployment situation in Chicago and hope to make up their losses in increased business."

DELAY ON BONUS OR CREATE A TAX, HARDING INSISTS

His Mind Not Changed; "Present Bill to Lose."

On Board President Harding's Special Train, En Route to Washington, D. C., March 18.—[Special.]—President Harding's first conference on his return to the White House tomorrow will be on the relief measures for ex-service men, and may be accepted as an indication that his position of help to the disabled before granting a soldier bonus is still unchanged.

It was said officially tonight that the president will not be able to receive the legislative leaders to confer on the bonus bill until Monday morning, as he already has an appointment with members of the Illinois department of the American Legion. When the members of congress do call Mr. Harding will urge them to give up the bonus bill until a way can be provided for its payment.

It was strongly hinted that the President has in mind a scheme whereby the funding operations of the British war debt to this country ultimately might be used for this purpose. At all events, the President is of the opinion that a continuance of the bonus agitation, pro and anti, would have an ill effect on the country.

Thinks Present Bill Will Not Pass.

It is understood that the President does not believe the present bonus bill will ever reach the White House. He is known to share with Secretary Mellon the conviction that the bonus measure affords no immediate financial relief to ex-service men, that the 50 cash payment would go to the men in the least need of the money—men who served in this country only two or three months, and who sustained little financial hardship through their short term of duty.

It can be said with authority that President Harding stands by his campaign declaration that some measure of financial assistance is due former service men when the financing can be found; that he has not changed from his letter to Chairman Fordney, wherein postponement or a sales tax was proposed; that he does not hold the present bonus bill as applying to these two previous positions, and that he holds many of the provisions of the bill do not afford proper financial relief to the veterans.

G. O. P. PLAN MASS PLAY

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., March 18.—[Special.]—Republican house leaders who insist upon immediate passage of a soldiers' bonus bill and in the form submitted by the ways and means committee are going to make one more appeal to President Harding to yield in his opposition to the measure as now drafted.

This was determined upon at a conference today of leading Republican members and Speaker Gillett in an effort to work out a satisfactory program for consideration of the proposed legislation.

The conferees agreed that President Harding should again be appealed to, and a conference has been arranged at the White House for tomorrow night. Some of the house leaders persist in the belief that the President may offer no serious objection.

Speaker Revives Decision.

The question discussed at today's conference was whether the bill should be taken up under a suspension of the rules on Monday, with no opportunity for amendment, or considered later in the week under a special rule, with a longer time for debate and an opportunity to vote on a motion to recommit and possibly also on a sales tax amendment.

Speaker Gillett, who has indicated his opposition to consideration of the bill under suspension of the rules, indicated that he would make no definite decision as to granting recognition for a motion to suspend the rules on Monday until after the conference with the President.

One of those participating in the conference was Representative Lineberger of California, who has indicated that he would not press the demand for a general meeting of all house Republicans if the leaders provide an opportunity for a vote on a sales tax amendment to the bonus bill.

Representative Hawes of Missouri, a Democrat, in a speech in the house opposed the bonus bill in its present form. Mr. Hawes is a member of the American Legion.

"The government does not know where the money is coming from to pay its present bills," said Mr. Hawes. "It does not know what real value can be attached to its $10,000,000,000 loaned to our allies—whether it will be paid even in part, or when, or even if the interest will be paid.

"This bill will not satisfy the soldier. It will not fool the taxpayer. It will not improve a critical national situation."

FINANCING BONUS IN EUROPE; CAN'T PAY OWN MEN

McCormick Tells Why We Are Short.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 18.—[Special.]—While the United States withholds adjusted compensation from its own ex-service men it is financing the payment of bonuses by Great Britain, France and other nations to their world war veterans.

Senator McCormick of Illinois made this assertion today in a statement issued in reply to Stephane Luzanne, who declared yesterday that American bankers and producers profited largely from the French loans.

Paying European Bonuses.

The Illinois senator pointed out that American taxpayers have to carry the burden of raising revenue sufficient to pay the interest which European debtor nations are failing to pay to the United States. Referring to the question of financing the bonus, he continued:

"Let us consider the question of interest in another light. The British and French governments have paid to their soldiers a bonus, or rather we lent them the money so to do when we agreed to postpone the payment of interest. That is to say, the credit of the United States has been used to pay a bonus to foreign soldiers, but not yet to pay soldiers of the United States.

Why We Cannot Pay.

"We cannot but realize that when continental Europe owes us $25,000,000 a month and has 2,000,000 men under arms we are, through non-collection of interest, maintaining European armies which our treasury cannot find the means for adjusted compensation.

"Drastic curtailment of expenditure, both civil and military, by most of the states of continental Europe will serve as nothing else can to improve the financial situation."

5 ALDERMEN TO VISIT CAPITAL TO URGE BONUS

Five Chicago aldermen will leave early next week to add Chicago's bit to the pressure which is being put on congress to enact bonus legislation at once.

Mayor Thompson, at the request of the city council, named Ald. Jensen, Crowe, Lyle, Madderom, and Touhy to make the trip and present the council's resolution favoring a bonus to congress.

A special meeting of the city council has been called for tomorrow afternoon to provide money for the expenses of the trip.

It was the original intention of the aldermen that their expenses should be paid out of Mayor Thompson's contingent fund. The money was not forthcoming, and the call for the special meeting was the result.

IT'S A JOKE, BUT WHOM ON IS WHAT WORRIES POLICE

Meanwhile Girl Is Held on Forgery Charge.

Whether the "joke" is on Miss Margaret Murray, 912 Oakdale avenue, or whether it is on Morris Reingold of the Reingold Jewelry company, with offices in the Mallers building—that, well, that is the question.

While the police were trying to decide, Miss Murray was held for a time in the South Clark street annex last night and detectives were searching for Reingold to see whether he intends to support a charge of forgery which he placed against the girl early in the afternoon. Failing to find him, Miss Murray was finally released.

Reingold Asks Arrest.

Early in the afternoon a call was received at the detective bureau from the Reingold offices. Lieut. Edward Murphy and Sergts. Leo Carr and Ray Crane hurried over.

"Arrest this woman!" cried Morris Reingold.

"What for?" demanded Lieut. Murphy.

"For forgery!" said Reingold. "She gave me a bum check for $25. I took out a warrant for her."

So they took the young woman to the detective bureau, after which Lieut Murphy looked at her in his sternes manner.

"Now, then, young woman?" he demanded; at which Miss Murray laughed musically.

"It's All a Joke."

"Well, I'll tell you," she said. "It' all a big joke. You see, I went to th Reingold offices day before yesterday t have a pair of small diamonds set in cameo ring. Morris Reingold was alor in the office when I entered. He ra up to me. 'Why, hello, Miss Fai banks!' he said. I told him my nam was not Miss Fairbanks. 'O, yes it is he said. 'You're Dolly Fairbanks one of the "Two Little Girls in

"So I thought since he was so fresh, I would teach him a lesson. The ring was to be $25. I had the money to pay him in my purse; but since he insisted I was Miss Fairbanks, I thought I would just give him a check and sign it 'Dolly Fairbanks.' Which I did and that was all there was to it.

Fails to Press Charge.

"I had an appointment to get t ring today and I was going to car the joke just as far as it would g When I called he called the police."

Miss Murray said her stepfather name is John C. Murray and that sl lives with her parents at the Oakda avenue address. She said also she a tended St. Mary's of the Woods Cat olic seminary from the time she was years old until 1917.

BOMB WRECKS LOOP OFFICE OF MUSICIANS

Union Secretary Believed Explosion Target.

Explosion of a "labor war" bomb in the loop last night was the latest act in defiance of State's Attorney Crowe, Judge Kickham Scanlan and other civic leaders who are endeavoring to curb the lawlessness of labor leaders.

The bomb was thrown through a transom of the office of the financial secretary of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, at 175 West Washington street just after he had left the place. No one was injured, but considerable damage was caused to the building.

The bomb is believed by the police a result of the recent troubles which have been seething among the members of the musicians' organizations, in which President Joseph F. Winkler was stabbed and Business Agent Ralph O'Hara pulled away from the organization to open a rival union.

Blast Starts Fire.

Police and firemen believe the bomb was composed of dynamite with an incendiary content as a small blaze started immediately following the explosion. The desire for fire by the bombers is ascribed by the police to an intention to destroy the records of the musicians' union.

Charles Runge, financial secretary of Local No. 10 of the union, had been working in his office until twenty minutes before the blast. At 9:15 he departed to eat his lunch at a nearby restaurant. The clock on the wall was stopped at 9:35 o'clock by the explosion.

A hole about eighteen inches in diameter was torn through the floor by the bomb, sending a sheet of flame into the room below, occupied by the kitchen of Thompson's restaurant.

Restaurant Chef Injured.

The chef, Warner Thieman, 5151 South Halsted street, was slightly injured by being thrown against an icebox by the explosion. James Coyne, 570 North Clark street, the dishwasher, was plunged forward into the sink.

Twenty musicians in a hall on the third floor fled to the street. Guests in the Washington hotel, two doors west, felt the explosion, and considerable commotion was caused among members of the Elks' club, just across the street.

Windows were broken and a large crack was made in the wall running parallel to the stairway from the first to the second floor.

The bomb caused a total confusion among the records of the union, as cabinets and filing cases were burst open by the explosion. Some were pushed through the hole in the floor made by the explosion as firemen worked to keep the fire from spreading.

All three of the attorneys involved declared ignorance of any breach of ethics to which Mr. Crowe could refer.

QUESSE WITNESS HELD

State's Attorney Crowe announced yesterday that he had another witness under arrest in connection with the investigation being carried on before the special grand jury in regard to acquittals in recent labor cases tried in the Criminal court. At the same time, he said he had called the attention of the bar association to the conduct of George [illegible] counsel for the defense, and Joseph Z. Willner, an attorney and witness for the defense in the first Walsh trial, and to that of Attorney William W. O'Brien, chief counsel for William Quesse in the flat janitors' trial.

THEODORE LODIN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The man who is now in the custody the state's attorney's office is Theodore Lodin, 5959 South Wabash avenue, a juror in the Quesse trial.

Ex-Convict, Crowe Says.

The state's attorney stepped from his office with a picture from the rogues' gallery of the bureau of identification in his hand. Holding up the picture he declared, "This is the type man we get on the juries."

The picture proved to be that of Theodore Lofton, 24, arrested on Oct. 7, 1918, on a charge of burglary. State's Attorney Crowe declared that "Lodin" and "Lofton" were the same man. Lodin had admitted, said Mr. Crowe, to having been arrested several times on suspicion. He was acquitted of the burglary charge.

Despite his police record, said the state's attorney, Lodin was admitted as a juror in the Quesse trial. The specific charge against Lodin in the present investigation was not disclosed. It is expected he will be brought before the special grand jury when it convenes again next Monday.

Crowe Silent on Charges.

The state's attorney asked John L. Fogle, chairman of the grievance committee of the bar association, to take cognizance of the conduct of the lawyers in recent labor cases in which they have taken part.

ITALIAN TROOPS IN FIUME; SERBS TOO POOR TO WAR

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TRIEST, March 18.—Italian troops ocucpied Fiume and adjacent territory today. Gabriele d'Annunzio published a proclamation from Gardone ordering the mobilization of his former legionnaires. A Fiumian government may be formed tonight, although efforts today were fruitless.

Jugo-Slavia Satisfied.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BELGRADE, March 18.—The government made the following announcement today:

"Jugo-Slavia is satisfied that Italy intends to restore the status quo in Fiume. We therefore intend to take no action in the matter."

An explanation of this attitude is that the Radical Democrat coalition government believes Jugo-Slavia is in no position economically or financially to wage war, hence it intends to keep peace at almost any price. A large and active irredentist group, including the military, exists here, but the government is stronger than the war party.

RELEASE DRIVER OF AUTO.

Leonard Hansen, 4544 North St. Louis avenue, was released by the Summerdale police yesterday following the recommendation of a coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of John Anderson, 40 years old. Anderson was struck and killed Friday morning by Hansen's automobile at Granville and North Western avenues.

MANIAC, RUNNING AMUCK, SHOOTS 2; HIMSELF SHOT

Threatens Scores with Shotgun Fire.

A maniac with a shotgun ran amuck in the northwest part of the city last night, shot two policemen, menaced several citizens and was probably fatally wounded when he was brought to bay by the police on the Division street bridge.

GEORGE SCHULFORSKY.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Policeman John T. Grace, 3736 Claremont avenue, of the North Robey street station, was walking on the street near his home. A man carrying a shotgun stepped from an alley. Without saying a word he fired. The load of buckshot passed through the policeman's arm. The man fled; the officer fired after him, but missed.

Demands Money; Refused.

A few minutes later the same man walked up to the back porch of the home of Samuel June, 3243 North Oakley avenue, called Jyne to the door and demanded money. Jyne slammed the door; the man fled.

Fifteen minutes later the man entered the drug store of Stanley Kniecke, 1053 Milwaukee avenue. Terrorizing the proprietor and several customers with his shotgun, he emptied the cash register of $163 and disappeared.

JAMES LA PORTE.

An hour later Sergt. George Schulposky, 2648 Crystal street, was standing at Milwaukee and Austin avenues. He was in full uniform. A man carrying a shotgun walked up to him and opened fire. Schulposky, shot through the leg, dropped.

Police Take Up Trail.

A few blocks away Lieut. James Fleming of the West Chicago avenue station and four policemen were in their flivver. They heard the shooting and sped to the scene. They found Schulposky staggering along the sidewalk. They took him to the county hospital and took up the trail of his assailant.

Hiding behind the girders of the Division street bridge their found their man. He at once opened fire with the shotgun. The policemen replied. Fifty or sixty shots were fired between them. Then the man staggered out, wounded.

Shoot to Kill.

Lieut. Fleming and his squad charged, but again the man opened fire. This time the officers shot to kill. The man was hit three times in the face. At the county hospital he said his name was William Cummings, that he was 35 years of age, and that he "lived nowhere." Physicians said he appeared to be demented. His victims will live; he may not.

William Moore, 918 North Hamlin avenue, a collector for the National Tea company, was kidnaped by four automobile bandits last night, robbed of a satchel containing between $1,800 and $2,000, then thrown out of the automobile. Moore told the police that the license number on the robbers' car was 362117. The police are checking.

Pies Save Pay Roll.

Other incidents of the crime news during the day were the burglary of the home of Robert Mandel, 5018 Woodlawn avenue, vice president of Mandel Brothers; the return to Chicago of Jimmy La Porte, "pal" of "Lucky Tommy" O'Connor, with whom he escaped from the county jail, and a slapstick crime comedy in which a Greek restaurant keeper saved a payroll by smashing pies in the bandits' faces.

Mr. Mandel and his family are in Europe. The bandits entered the house while the two caretakers were absent. Furs comprised most of the loot.

La Porte and George Benfield, arrested in Milwaukee a few days ago for the alleged robbery of the Palm Olive Soap company, were brought back to Chicago for possible identification in other crimes.

DODGE CLINCHES $1,600,000 AS HE WORKS IN PRISON

Shovels Coal While Will of Father Is Probated.

Detroit, Mich., March 18.—[Special.] While John Duval Dodge was shoveling coal today at the Detroit house of correction his counsel were taking the last steps in the process by which the youth became a millionaire. The proceedings took place before Judge Jayne, who admitted to probate the will of the late John F. Dodge, father of the prisoner. Amended by agreement among the heirs the will grants John Duval Dodge $1,600,000 in a lump sum, instead of the $150 a month originally provided.

Young Dodge early this morning was given a shovel and wheelbarrow and shown the coal pile at the house of correction where he is serving a five day term for driving his automobile at an unlawful speed on one of Detroit's thoroughfares.

Declines to Join Strike.

His duties for most of the day were definite and simple. He shoveled coal—soft coal—from the great supply pile within the prison walls into a wheelbarrow, taking it from the pile to the furnace room, where he dumped it within easy reach of the stokers.

These trips continued from early morning until 2 o'clock this afternoon, when he was given an inside job. Fellow prisoners were indignant. They charged that Dodge was being favored, but the physician said John had been ill when he was admitted at the house of correction Thursday night and showed great pluck in working at all.

During the morning hours Dodge was given some bad advice by his fellow prisoners—a various assortment of thieves, murderers, pickpockets, etc., who suggested that he strike. In that event he would have nothing to do but sit in the dungeon for the day and thereby escape toil. But he preferred work.

Likes His Prison Bread.

The young millionaire slept last night with twenty-two other speeders and arose at 5:30 o'clock and took a bit of pork sausage, brown gravy, and bread and coffee. The bread, he declared, was better than bread he got at home.

Young Dodge will undoubtedly have to serve his full five days in the house of correction. Then he must hurry to Kalamazoo and answer to a charge of fast driving which nearly resulted in a co-ed of the Western Normal school jumping from his automobile; also a charge of driving while drunk, as well as the transportation and possession of whisky.

ANNA PAVLOWA AND LAURENT NOVIKOFF.

The "incomparable Pavlowa," on the eve of a three year tour of the Orient, will come to Chicago for her farewell appearance with her Ballet Russse at the Auditorium theater for one week, beginning Sunday night, March 26. Pavlowa's latest creation, "Dionysus," will be presented for the first time in Chicago as a feature of the opening night's performance. "Dionysus" is a Greek fantasy in one act and two scenes by Ivan Clustine, in which the scenic changes are wrought by mysterious lighting effects.

GUNS, KNIVES, AND OTHER RELICS OF TEDDY REVEALED

New York, March 18.—A collection of guns, knives, chaps, and cooking utensils—the original equipment used by Theodore Roosevelt during his cowboy days in the Dakotas—was placed on view here today by the Roosevelt Memorial association for the first time.

A relic of the colonel's first experiences in big game hunting is an old 40-60 caliber rifle, known to old frontiersmen as a "bear gun." It is decorated with engravings of an elk, a bear, and a Rocky mountain sheep.

There is a queer looking weapon which Roosevelt had made to order, a three barreled combination shotgun and rifle, and while old timers shook their heads and questioned its usefulness, it was an effective instrument in the colonel's hands.

The first pair of chaps worn by Roosevelt when he was a "tenderfoot" is also on view. They show hard usage and have a hole burned in one knee. With the chaps is an old hat, sporting a braided horsehair band.

The smaller relics include a pocket compass, and a silver drinking cup made from the top of a whisky flask.

RESTRAINS SALE OF SECURITIES BY SYNDICATE

Holding that the Diversified Banking Syndicate of Illinois, with offices at 63 East Adams street, was barred from selling its securities by failure to register with the secretary of state, Judge Friend yesterday issued an injunction restraining the firm from marketing securities.

Petition for the injunction was filed recently by Attorney General Edward Brundage, who asserted that the firm had procured no "blue sky" license and had failed to register as required by law.

Robert S. Lee, president of the syndicate and an attorney, appeared in behalf of the syndicate and argued that, inasmuch as the company is organized under the "limited partnership" plan, it is not required to register and may legally sell securities to banks and corporations.

$275,000 Wool Customs Plot Against U. S. Hunted

BUENOS AIRES, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—Investigations of the alleged plot to defraud the United States government of $275,000 in wool duties have been conducted by the United States consulates at Buenos Aires and Montevideo, it was learned today. It is claimed that better class wool, subject to a 30 per cent duty, was wrapped inside of layers of the coarser class and then shipped to a big American concern.

EX-BANDIT CHIEF MAY BE CHINA'S NEW PRESIDENT

Dr. Sun Offers the Post to Millionaire War Lord.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922. By The Chicago Tribune.]

MUKDEN, March 18.—A bandit chieftain twenty years ago may soon be president of China. This is the prospect ahead of Gen. Chang Tso-ling, the multi-millionaire war lord of Manchuria.

GEN. CHANG TSO-LING.

THE TRIBUNE learns from reliable sources what are believed to be the terms of President Sun Yat Sen's government for a coalition with Gen. Chang Tso-ling, which, if accepted, will compel Gen. Wu Pei Fu, who controls the central provinces, either to acquiesce or to meet an attack from both sides. The atmosphere at Mukden indicates that hostilities will be avoided unless Gen. Wu Pei Fu assumes the initiative.

An important conference is being held here attended by all the tuchuns of north China, and also by personal representatives of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, Gen. Wu Pei Fu, and President Hsu Shih-chang.

Offers Chang the Presidency.

It is stated that the southern government, in exchange for a coalition, has offered Gen. Chang Tso-ling a chance to run for president, this being conditioned on the installation of the Canton parliament, which is now pending. The leaders conferring at Mukden view the offer suspiciously, asserting Gen. Chang Tso-ling's power might wane during the year required to install the parliament, whereupon a Cantonese would capture the presidency.

PRESIDENT HSU.

Gen. Chang Tso-ling sent a reply to Canton which, THE TRIBUNE learns, suggests the best way for securing the unification of China is to call a conference to discuss the disputed legal questions, including parliamentary legality, with an immediate revision of the electoral laws and afterwards the summoning of a new parliament. This plan is reported to be acceptable to Gen. Wu Pei Fu.

President Hsu Ready to Quit.

In the meantime President Hsu Shih-chang has wired all provinces requesting views as to the advisability of calling an election for parliament to choose a new president, although his term still has eighteen months to run. President Hsu fears the Canton parliament, which is a remnant of the last legal parliament, has more authority than the one electing him, hence his desire for a new parliament.

Simultaneously the conference here, which includes the most powerful leaders of the Gengtien and Chihli factions, is moving to force the retirement of President Hsu because of his refusal to remove Premier Liang Shih-yi, to whom he gave a sick leave. Pao Kwoi-ching, minister of war, is now here endeavoring to secure Gen. Chang Tso-ling's approval for his appointment to the premiership, but Gen. Chang is gunning for bigger game. He is set on unification, provided he reaches a common ground with Dr. Sun Yat Sen.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen wishes to save his face by getting the presidency with Gen. Chang Tso-ling as vice president and thereupon immediately resigning in favor of Gen. Chang. If he succeeds in this Dr. Sun insists that he be made premier and that the Canton parliament be recognized. However Dr. Sun Yat Sen is wholly unacceptable to Gen. Wu Pei Fu.

"CLEAN UP OR QUIT"—NEW ORDER

MAY FACE TRIAL

Chicago's thirty-five ward superintendents were called "on the mat" before Deputy Commissioner of Public Works William Burkhardt yesterday and told that unless the city's streets and alleys are "as clean as whistles by April 1" superintendents will face trial board action.

"This is not an annual pre-primary cleanup," Mr. Burkhardt told the gathering. "The council has appropriated enough money to clean up the city and keep it clean, and no alibis go.

"On April 3 an inspection will be made and if any dirty streets and alleys are found you men may as well hand in your resignations."

In anticipation of a need of new ward superintendents the city civil service commission yesterday sent out a call for applicants for an examination to create a new superintendents' eligible list.

GERMANY'S GOLD RESERVE IS GONE; BANKERS GLOOMY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, March 18.—The dollar today reached its highest quotation for this year, bringing 283 marks to the dollar. Persistent rumors were circulated on the bourse that the reichsbank has reached the bottom of the gold in its purse.

The depletion of the reichsbank's reserves is not only important on account of the increasing difficulty of the government in paying the 31,000,000 gold marks [$7,750,000] reparations installments every ten days, but it removes the most important means of keeping up the value of the mark.

The previous policy of the reichsbank in dumping foreign currency for the purpose of holding up the crumpling mark is now impossible, and bank circles, which previously were optimistic, are now uttering the most dismal prophecies, partly propaganda and partly real, that the mark will collapse entirely unless immediate relief in the shape of a moratorium is forthcoming.

Genna Brothers Dismissed as Slayers of Paul Notti

James and Anthony Genna, brothers of Angelo Genna, who was named in a dying statement as the slayer of Paul Notti, were dismissed yesterday by Judge Fetzer. They had been held in connection with the murder of Notti.

WOMAN IN AUTO HURT AS DRIVER SWERVES CAR

Mrs. Eva Tolka, 2236 Clybourn avenue, suffered a possible skull fracture yesterday when she was thrown against the side of the automobile in which she was riding as the driver, Charles Perlman, 900 Margate terrace, swerved into a curb to avoid a collision. She was taken to the Illinois Masonic hospital.

Godfried Stinke, 1127 Dodge avenue, Evanston, was injured internally when he was thrown from his automobile which was struck from behind by a car driven by Miss Helen Torrison, 1636 Hinman avenue, Evanston, daughter of Circuit Judge Oscar M. Torrison. She was not held. Stinke was taken to the Evanston hospital.

Fred St. John, 60 years old, 1132 Lyman avenue, Oak Park, was probably fatally injured at State and Randolph streets, when he became confused by the large number of car tracks and stepped in front of a car which struck him.

WIFE'S PLEA MAY BAR SIBERIAN CHIEF FROM U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, March 18.—Zenaida Semenoff, a beautiful woman of about 30, who claims to be the legal and undivorced wife of Ataman Semenoff, formerly anti-bolshevik leader in Siberia, submitted to Ambassador Warren documentary proofs of her marriage today.

She says the woman now accompanying the ataman, who is now at Vancouver, is named on his passport as his wife, is Helene Tersitsky, with whom he has been consorting for about a year and a half.

"I married the ataman at Chita in January, 1914, and I have a son, aged 7," Mme. Semenoff said today. "I have been a resident of Japan since October. I am not divorced and I am Semenoff's only legal wife, therefore his second marriage is bigamy under civilized law. But law does not exist in Russia, so consequently I can protect myself only through an appeal to the American people."

GANDHI SENT TO PRISON; TERROR REIGN FEARED

Pacifist Indian Rebel Gets Six Years.

LONDON, March 18.—[United Press.]—Mohandas K. Gandl, Noncoöperationist Indian leader, has been tried and sentenced to six years' imprisonment, according to a news agency dispatch from Ahmedabah, received today.

Viscount Peel was today appointed secretary of state for India, succeeding By the appointment of Viscount Peel Edward S. Montagu. to the Indian post it is believed the government has chosen a secretary who will follow out the cabinet's plans for India. Montagu was in constant revolt against these policies.

Keep Up Spinning Wheel 'War.'

AHMEDABAB, British India, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—The arrest of Gandhi and the restraint placed upon the country have considerably advanced the Khalifat and Swaraj causes, and the Noncoöperationist leader's arrest will not alter the program outlined at Bardoli recently, which includes individual civil disobedience, according to the working committee of the all-India congress committee, as expressed in a resolution carried today.

The committee says that it considers universal adoption of the spinning wheel and the use of hand spun materials essential to attainment of the country's goal.

DECLARES VIOLENCE NEAR.

While Gandhi, the noncoöperationist leader of India, pleaded with his followers after his arrest to avoid all forms of violence, Taraknath Das, international secretary and Chicago representative of the Friends of Freedom for India, predicted yesterday the sentence of the leader will lead almost immediately to violent outbreaks.

"With the removal of Gandhi, the moderate leader of the nonviolent, noncoöperation movement, from the field of action by his prison sentence, India enters into a new stage of political unrest," he said. "There will be more general unrest, more nonpayment of taxes, and more vigorous boycott of English, and this will bring forth a reign of terror in India under the direction of British cabinet, dominated by conservative leadership of Curzon and others. Gandhi has been put in jail, not because he was preaching sedition, but because he was taking all precaution against the British plan of bringing about a civil war in India."

Gentlemen:—

For the last year and a half I have used a Steger Piano in my studio for teaching and accompanying the voice. During this period the piano has been subjected to the most exacting tests and strenuous studio usage.

It has easily met every demand made, proving its artistic and rugged construction and retains the wonderful quality of tone which is the heritage of Steger-built pianos.

It is a pleasure to use a piano with such exquisite quality of tone, dependable action, in fact—a piano that is so all-satisfying, and I recommend it most heartily to musicians and music-lovers.

Sincerely,

LeRoy Irving Wetzel

CALLS 4 POWER PACT GREATEST MOVE FOR PEACE

Wickersham Pleads for Senate Approval.

Ratification of treaties drafted at the disarmament conference is an obligation the United States senate must meet if this country is to justify its claim to world leadership, George W. Wickersham, former United States attorney general, said yesterday at the Hotel La Salle in addressing the initial meeting of the Chicago council on foreign relations.

If a suggestion urged by Mr. Wickersham were adopted Washington would be bombarded with peremptory messages reading something like this: "Stop your talking and ratify those treaties."

The former attorney general referred to the work of the Washington parley as the "most remarkable body of agrements that has ever been reached by an international conference in history."

Must Know the Author.

His comment on the attitude of those opposed to ratification was caustic. Of the four power treaty, Mr. Wickersham said:

"This treaty has been attacked in many ways. What is the first ground of attack? It is very much like that play of Bernard Shaw's 'Fanny's First Play.'

"You remember he did not let any one know he was the author, and the critics began to ask, 'Who wrote it? Who wrote it?' Somebody said, 'What do you think of it?' and a critic replied, 'How can we tell what we think of it until we know who wrote it?'

"It was rumored that Balfour wrote the four power treaty. Next it was the product of oriental cunning and British diplomacy. The most uncomplimentary conception of the intellectual capacity of our representatives was exhibited on the floor of the senate.

"My own experience in a personal acquaintance in which I have rejoiced for some forty years has led me to regard Elihu Root the intellectual equal of any member of that conference. A somewhat shorter but equally enjoyable acquaintance with Charles Evans Hughes has led me to regard him as quite able to take care of himself in any conference.

Party Many Alliances.

"Next it was asserted that this was an alliance and the bells were rung on the word 'alliance.' When was an alliance not an alliance? What was an alliance? Why we ever should go into an alliance; why we never should go into an alliance; why an alliance was prohibited by the fundamental law of our being, and so forth. Why, in fact, the United States should ever enter into any treaty.

"We are already a party to treaties with twenty-five different nations to the effect that if any question shall arise between us which is not settled by diplomacy, or submitted to arbitration, we will submit it to a commission and we will wait until that commission reports its opinion before we take any hostility against any other power growing out of that controversy."

After defending France's refusal to agree to a ban on submarines, "because she is still confronted with the same people, utterly unregenerate, wholly unrepentant, who have assailed her twice within the memory of living man," Mr. Wickersham added:

"Then Senator Root proposed what was accepted and has been embodied in the treaty, a code of international law for the regulation of the use of the submarine, in which it was agreed that no merchant ship should be attacked and destroyed in the infamous fashion in which German submarines attacked and destroyed the Lusitania, under peril of outlawry, under peril of having any member of the attacking crew punished for the offense of piracy by any nation into whose hand he came.

"This agreement has been criticised on the ground that in time of war people do not pay any attention to these limitations on the use of weapons. They will pay attention in any future war if that treaty is ratified, because there will be no defense left an officer or member of a crew when he is caught in any other nation and indicted for the crime of piracy."

Anglo-Jap Alliance an Obstacle.

Mr. Wickersham said all efforts to gloss it over having failed, the question of China stood out in the conference as the crux of the Pacific problem. He referred to the Anglo-Japanese alliance as an obstacle that had to be removed before any settlement of the Pacific question in general was made.

Tracing development of the limitation of armament idea from what he called its inception, in 1817, when the United States and Great Britain agreed to curtail naval equipment on the Great Lakes, Mr. Wickersham referred to the late czar's invitation to a conference at The Hague in 1897, a subsequent call from Nicholas for another conference in 1908, the treaty of Versailles and the covenant of the League of Nations, which he said was a "much abused and much misunderstood document"—all culminating in the Washington conference.

"Shall we justify our claim to be an enlightened, a civilized, a Christian people?" he asked. "If so, then we will throughout this land send this message to Washington: 'Stop your talking and ratify these treaties.'"

Dickinson Leads Council.

Jacob M. Dickinson, former secretary of war, presided at the meeting of the council of which he is head. A resolution calling upon United States senators from Illinois to support the treaties and resolutions of the disarmament conference, "without amendment or reservation," was adopted.

COUNSELORS OF PEACE

George W. Wickersham, attorney general in the Taft cabinet, who praised the four power disarmament treaties as the "most remarkable body of agreements ever reached by an international conference," and Jacob M. Dickinson, secretary of war in the same cabinet and president of Chicago council on foreign relations before which Mr. Wickerham spoke.

Ends Quarrel in Hospital with Three Stab Wounds

IS IT OR ISN'T IT? IS WHAT? TREATY SAFE FOR NATION

Senators Talk Pro and Then Talk Con.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 18.—[Special.]—An unexpectedly vigorous assault on the four power treaty, in which the three senators—Borah, Robinson, Johnson—who were directing the assault on that compact took part, enlivened the debate in the senate today. Evidence is accumulating that the treaty battle will not end with the expected ratification of the four power treaty next Friday, but will be prosecuted with vigor when the naval treaty and the two Chinese agreements are placed before the senate.

The purported utterance of Sir Auckland Geddes in Los Angeles yesterday, in which the British diplomat was quoted as saying that the negotiation of the four power treaty had averted a conflict in the Pacific, was referred to by Senator Robinson, who said he wanted to know if "a menace such as the British ambassador referred to" existed when the conference was called by the President.

Arkansan Has No Fear!

If such a menace did exist and the treaty was negotiated through fear of that menace, he would be inclined, said the Arkansas senator, to vote against the naval treaty, and to join in a campaign, not to reduce, but to increase the navy.

Senator Borah, assailing the Chinese treaties in particular, contended that those treaties do not restore the sovereignty of China. Senator Lenroot replied that the Idaho senator was looking at the situation from the viewpoint of the world of twenty years ago and not from that of a world whose conscience has been awakened as a result of the world war.

Senator Robinson started the debate, in which a score of senators joined before it was ended. He charged that so far as he had been able to find out the conference, while expressing its anxieties as to the continuance of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, had not even considered the abrogation of the Franco-Japanese agreement, which compact, he said, still exists and covers the interests of the two nations not in the Pacific, not on the Asiatic mainland, but throughout the continent of Asia.

What Sir Auckland Said.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 18.—[United Press.]—Transcripts of the speech of Sir Auckland Geddes revealed the fact that the British ambassador did not definitely assert that Japan was preparing to attack the United States at the time the four power Pacific treaty was being made.

"Ratification of the treaty would remove the menace to world peace now seen in the Pacific," Geddes said. "It was only a few months ago that serious minded men of affairs looked out over the Pacific with grave doubts as to what might happen there. Approval of the treaty would remove the Pacific menace during our time at all events, and I believe forever."

HUSBAND SLAMS WIFE WITH SOAP; SHE GETS DECREE

"Because I wished to go to a movie and he did not want to see me enjoy myself he threw a bar of soap at me and hit me in the eye. I had a black eye for nearly a week," said Mrs. Florence Joyce, 5030 Winthrop avenue, testifying yesterday before Judge Charles A. McDonald in her suit for divorce from Thomas Joyce, a soldier assigned to recruiting service in Chicago.

"We were married on Feb. 10, 1913," continued Mrs. Joyce in answer to questions by her attorney, Cameron Latter, "and I was forced to leave him on Feb. 13, 1922, because he persisted in beating and choking me if I refused to give him my hard earned money for liquor."

Judge McDonald awarded her a decree and $7 weekly for the support of Thomas Joyce Jr.

RICHES USED BY JOYCE TO STEAL LOVE, ESCH SAYS

Declaration Filed in Suit for $500,000.

"Clandestine meetings—secret correspondence and presents of great value" were the means used by David Gage Joyce, millionaire lumberman, to win the love of Mrs. Beatrice R. Esch, former wife of Edward E. Esch, automobile dealer at 2216 South Michigan avenue, according to declarations in his suit for $500,000 damages against the lumberman. The declaration was filed yesterday in the Superior court by Attorney Stephen A. Day, attorney for Esch.

The præcipe in the suit was filed on Feb. 8, one year to a day following the granting of a decree of divorce to Mrs. Esch. Joyce answered the filing of the damage suit three days later by announcing his marriage to Mrs. Esch at Miami, Fla. Joyce was divorced in 1920 by Mrs. Roberta A. McAcuff Joyce of St. Louis, who was awarded $50,000 alimony, $15,000 solicitors' fees, and the income from a $200,000 trust fund.

Daughter Named as Reason.

Esch at the time his attorney filed the præcipe asserted that the suit was based on Joyce's attempts to alienate the affections of Esch's daughter, Elita, 17 years old, who at the time was living with her mother in Miami, a few doors from the Joyce home.

Little mention of the daughter is made in the declaration however, which is based entirely on Joyce's alleged alienation of Mrs. Esch's affections.

According to the declaration, Joyce "contriving and wickedly intending to injure Esch, and to deprive him of the society and assistance of Beatrice R. Esch, on Feb. 1, 1919, and divers other days since, did wilfully and maliciously destroy and alienate from Esch the affections then and there had by the said Beatrice R. Esch."

The declaration further asserts that Joyce "carried on a secret correspondence with Mrs. Esch, flattered her, made her many promises of love and held clandestine meetings with her and gave her many presents of great value."

Says He's Been Disgraced.

In conclusion, it is asserted that because Esch has "been deprived of her society, affections, assistance and comfort, and because he has been caused to suffer great mental angish, humiliation, distress and pain, and great annoyance and suffering in his household and is wholly humiliated and disgraced among his neighbors, he brings suit for damages in the sum of $500,000."

"We were pals once," said Esch, shortly after the filing of the præcipe. "Then he won my wife away from me. After Joyce and his wife were divorced he schemed to have my wife divorce me.

"I want to make it plain that it isn't money I'm after; in fact I'll give anything the court may award to the Salvation Army. Joyce now has my wife, and I'm informed that there is grave danger of his alienating the affections of my daughter. That's the only motive I had in filing the suit."

Joyce is a brother of J. Stanley Joyce, recently divorced by Peggy Hopkins Joyce.

CHILDREN CHOOSE ANIMALS AS THEIR FILM FAVORITES

Sardines, monkeys, dogs, and "drunk" ducks won over W. S. Hart, Theda Bara, and "Hoot" Gibson at the "movie" test which school principals and teachers gave pupils of six south side schools at the Tivoli theater yesterday. A diversified program of subjects selected by Supt. Mortenson was given the audience of 4,500 children, the object being to select by practical experiment the picture material which can be developed and used to wean children away from too much enthusiasm for Wild West and for sex pictures.

"The animals won," said Miss Grace Reed, principal of the Willard school. "Film makers can start working with dogs, monkeys, sardines, turtles, poultry, and be sure that the children will revel in such pictures. Today's experiments proved that."

"Being admitted free by the Tivoli, the children came in thousands, which was what we needed for tests," said Frank Mayo, principal of the Wadsdorth school. "Animal subjects were of supreme importance to the children. Travel scenes, no matter how beautiful, fail to have the animation needed. Egyptian tombs put the children to sleep, but views of turtles in action, snapping, eating, walking, delighted the children. Princess Mary's wedding procession bored them, but views of sardine fishing and canning held them intent. They cheered more loudly for a dog and monkey picture than I have ever heard them cheer for a cowboy film."

Pupils of six schools, the Wadsworth, Scott, Fiske, Willard, McCosh, and A. O. Sexton, attended. Each Saturday morning during the next month will be given to other schools by the Tivoli, no admission fee being charged and all pictures selected by the school authorities furnished without cost by the management.

WILSON HERITAGE DRAGS ON G. O. P., SENATOR CLAIMS

Washington, D. C., March 18.—Confirmation by the people next November of the "verdict of the last election" was predicted by Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, in a speech in the senate today, in which he asserted that the work which his party had been able to accomplish was done despite the heritage of the last administration and persistent Democratic obstruction.

"The American people, in reaching a conclusion as to how they will vote next November," Senator Jones asserted, "will take into account not only what we have done and the conditions under which we have done it, but also the results of the first years of the Democratic administration under Woodrow Wilson.

"We had business depression, idle labor, curtailed markets, reduced revenues, greater appropriations, increased transportation rates, special direct and multiplied taxes, and a higher and increasing cost of living. The party that made such a dismal failure then and showed such poor leadership after the war cannot be trusted to solve the great and difficult questions that face us now."

REGISTRATION DAY TUESDAY.

All voters who are not registered in the precincts in which they now live must go to their polling places and register on next Tuesday or they cannot vote at the April 11 primary or the June 5 judicial election. Tuesday is the only registration day for those elections.

THE TRIBUNE PROGRAM FOR MIDDLE WEST DEVELOPMENT

1. A Square Deal in Congress for the Middle West.

ENSLAVED DEMOCRACY.

Assistant Attorney General Crim of Washington represented the department of justice at a meeting of federal, state and city law enforcement officers of this region held in Chicago at the request of the attorney general. In the course of his appeal for coöperation and support Mr. Crim made a protest against the centralization which he says has "staggered the department of justice."

"Unless there is a halt in this tendency to saddle all responsibilities on the federal government the time will come when we have in Washington a bureaucracy knowing no master—and one day the country will be in ruins."

The American idea twenty years ago left great flexibility and independence to states and localities. It gave them responsibility. The federal government confined itself to national administration. It protected the coinage, operated and protected the mails, administered the revenue acts, etc., and the states had the police power which protected public morals, public security and governed the conduct of citizens according to their wishes and accepted standards. This was a scheme of democratic liberty. It permitted variations of life with certain limitations. Utah could not have polygamy, but social customs could vary from state to state and responsibility was on the people.

We are discarding principles of democratic liberty and by centralization of authority establishing bureaucratic despotism. Jefferson, opposed to centralization under an aristocratic government, said that the least government was the best government, but he did not see the tendency of a democracy which he wanted to release from the aristocracy to enslave itself. Herbert Spencer did when he said that the trend of democracy was towards slavery.

We had a protection against this in the retention of police powers by the states and we break down the protection when we seek to take away from the states the control over morals and habits and give it to the bureaus of a central government.

Probably the first break in the protections was made when the theory of applying the interstate commerce act was brought into action, morally and economically, to take the place of local police power. The Mann act did this. It was designed to break up a traffic so vile that only the vilest and most abandoned of persons engaged in it. It was to prevent and punish the trade in white slaves. The traffic was so hideous that the supplanting of local police power was condoned, but the supplanting did not stop there.

A perversion of the original purpose of the act placed the federal government in control of the private morals of citizens not engaged in the business to be suppressed. Immorality is not condoned but the offenses which the Mann act reached out to punish were offenses controlled by the state and they were not aggravated if the offenders went from one state to another.

The federal government thus undertook correction of private morals and the beginning of a bureaucracy with no limitation of authority was had. The interstate commerce law, a start having been made, was used to prevent other evils, such as child labor, the regulation of which is a state function.

It ought to be. Conditions of life are various in a country of such an expanse of resources and activities. They should be controlled by the governments intimate to them. Because some states were backward, social reformers demanded that responsibility be taken away from them and given to the federal government. One encroachment after another has been made upon the independence of the states and thereby upon the independence of the democracy.

Bureaucracy is the enemy of democracy. It is the substitution of regulation for free will. It is unintelligent, unresponsive, hide bound and inconsiderate. The purpose of a bureaucracy is to make positions for bureaucrats. It is a world within itself, expanding and pervading activities in which it is given a chance. It clutches whatever it touches and reaches out new creepers constantly.

When a democracy begins to appeal away from its natural sources of power and responsibility to a far away core of authority it is like a fly appealing to the spider in the nest of the web. If it is the destiny of democracy to try to reduce all its elements to a dead level of uniformity it may be its destiny to reduce itself to a species of slavery, the slavery of the individual to the mass.

If Washington is to take control of the private lives of all American citizens it will be necessary to do more than call law enforcement meetings. It will be necessary to send out procurators and viceroys to take over the administration of states.

This may not be the ruin Assistant Attorney General Crim predicts, but it will not be free democracy.

BUILDING—HOUSES AND COMMUNITIES.

Flat and home hunters, wearily tramping the streets of Chicago in search of better quarters, cheaper quarters, or possible quarters, may not be finding any comfort in the rentals asked or the accommodations offered, but they are finding comfort in the proofs of building activity visible in all sections of the city. Though there may not yet be a real building boom in Chicago there is encouraging promise of one.

Few things better for the welfare of the city could be imagined. There is no better sign of returning economic and social health possible than the impulse to build. A man who sets out to build adds a new zest to life. He may become irritated, even infuriated, but he is not likely to be morbid. He is a more substantial citizen, and faces the future more serenely.

But while we are building, whether it be a garage, a home, an apartment or an office building, it is well to remember that we are building not only a single structure but a community. We should build strongly and well, and remember that our structures will look better and be more valuable in a street of good buildings, in good taste, than as an outstanding example of individual caprice in decoration. By some coöperation in design and construction with those about us who are moved by a similar impulse to build we will enhance both the beauty and the value of our own effort and the beauty and value of all Chicago.

CHICAGO AS A FLYING CENTER.

Edward Stinson's preparations to establish an aerial transportation service from Chicago to New York, and perhaps to the Pacific, should have the support of Chicago. We are not acquainted with Mr. Stinson's connections, nor the practicability of his plans, but anything which makes for development of interest in aviation is good, and anything which tends to make Chicago an aviation center is good.

Mr. Stinson says he hopes Chicago will ride in his airplanes. "If it does, the biggest passenger carrying line in the country will make its headquarters here." We hope so, too. But we see two reasons why Chicagoans may hesitate to ride. One is fear; the other is cost.

The first can be eliminated only as we become accustomed to riding in the air, and gain faith in the safety, speed, and comfort of aviation as a means of transportation. That will take time and experience. The other perhaps can be eliminated only through a subsidy. England and France have eliminated it in that manner. They maintain a highly successful daily air service between Paris and London. It is supported largely by the two governments, who recognize the importance of aerial activities to both the commercial and military advantage of the countries. The subsidies have made aerial transportation comparatively cheap. They have put it within the reach of ordinary travelers, and have given the governments a part in the control of the flyers which makes for safety. Thus the public has learned to fly and has become accustomed to the advantages of flying. Eventually the service will build itself up as the demand grows with the education of aerial travelers.

A similar arrangement is worth consideration in the United States. We are preparing to grant a heavy ship subsidy. The other is even more necessary if commercial aviation, with all its potential benefits, is to be developed.

If Mr. Stinson, or any other flyer, can develop a service without such help, so much the better. In any event, he is welcomed to Chicago to make the effort, and anything in reason which Chicago can do to assist him, or any other flyer, should be done.

ARMY NEEDS.

The house appropriations committee, in its great effort for economy, has cut the army bill to the extent of reducing the army personnel to 115,000, or 35,000 below the minimum for national safety estimated by military experts. The officers are reduced to 11,000, or 1,000 below the number asked by the war department. Incidentally, the provision is for 85,000 fewer men than were declared by former Chief of Staff March to be necessary.

THE TRIBUNE believes military science is in truth a science, and its necessities therefore can be determined better by experts than by laymen. For what purpose do we maintain a war department if not to provide for the military needs and safety of the nation?

These experts insist that these needs can be determined with mathematical accuracy. A certain number of men and officers, they say, are required to garrison the Panama Canal Zone. Certain numbers are required to man the defenses of Hawaii. Certain numbers are required to maintain the efficiency of both our Atlantic and Pacific coast defenses. Certain numbers are required for police duty at home and in our dependencies.

Others are needed to maintain and develop the efficiency of various branches of the service which require carefully trained experts. The tank corps, the signal corps, the aviation service, the service of supply, etc., each needs the services of men highly trained. Such services cannot be performed by volunteers without training. Instruction of a citizen reserve demands others. And with it all a skeleton organization upon which a citizen army can be built in time of emergency is necessary. With the requirements of each of these branches carefully estimated, the experts insist we cannot safely operate with less than 150,000 enlisted men and 12,000 officers.

The ideal arrangement would be to take the young men of the nation in their period of least economic value, give them the rudiments of military training, register them, and have them available for immediate mobilization in time of need. With an adequate army framework, with regular privates all capable of assuming the duties at least of sergeants, this arrangement would make this country invincible, and beyond any danger of war. Incidentally it would strengthen and improve the bodies, minds, and spirit of the nation's young men. It would not have the evils of long periods of barracks life, but the good of vigorous outdoor exercise, training and discipline for a few months for each class of the rising generation.

But even lacking that ideal arrangement, the country's minimum requirements are definite and ascertainable. The army experts, whom we educate and pay to defend us, put this minimum at 150,000. The house appropriations committee puts the maximum at 115,000. Between the two, we believe, the confidence of the nation's voters in the trained military authorities is greater than the confidence in the committee.

CLOTHES AT $80 A YEAR!

[Rockford Register-Gazette.]

Kansas is deeply engrossed in a controversy as to how much girls who work for wages should spend for clothing. Certain merchants submitted to the Industrial court figures designed to show that $80 to $90 a year would suffice. Topeka girls are up in arms about it. Three hundred marched to a store and demanded to see the outfit that $80 would buy. Their verdict was, "Not fit for a dog."

Many a wage earner is forced to dress on some such sum. The average income per capita in America is somewhere between $300 and $500 a year. The average working girl receives less than the average man, and probably somewhere near the average individual income. But she inclines to place her standard of dress as near as possible to that of the wealthy woman.

Dress is, of course, important to a girl. Custom has made it so. But her earning power is relatively low, and if she insists upon considering silk hose a primary necessary she is likely to neglect other needs that are even more important.

STRATEGY.

Wife—I wish, dear, that you'd settle my last year's milliner bill. I really can't sleep for thinking of it.

Hub—Your conscience pricking you, eh?

Wife—O, no; but I need two more hats right away.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

THE ROAD TO ANYWHERE.

Across the places deep and dim,
And places brown and bare,
It reaches to the planet's rim—
The Road to Anywhere.

Now east is east, and west is west,
But north lies in between,
And he is blest whose feet have prest
The road that's cool and green.

The road of roads for them that dare
The lightest whim obey,
To follow where the moose or bear
Has brushed his headlong way.

The secrets that these tangles house
Are step by step revealed,
While to the sun the grass and boughs
A store of odors yield.

More sweet these odors in the sun
Than swim in chemists' jars;
And when the fragrant day is done,
Night—and a shoal of stars.

Oh, east is east, and west is west,
But north lies full and fair;
And blest is he who follows free
The Road to Anywhere. B. L. T.

ROSEMARY.

True friends and faithful come in sorrow's day
To take us by the hand and give us aid.
But few, oh, all too few men God has made
Who share our pleasure when the heart is gay.
The little joy, the unexpected way
A bird-note calls, or sunset colors fade
Along the west, the green surprise of blade
In early spring, young laughter's sunny ray—
These were the things, dear friend, we brought to you!
The memoried song we brought, the random jest,
Knowing your mind a mesh to sift them through,
Giving the world again only the best.
So, in our happiest moments it may be Somewhere you still laugh with us, B. L. T.!
ANCHUSA.

MRS. FREDERICK D. COUNTISS had her picture printed yesterday showing herself giving a shampoo in her new shop to a rather scared-to-death looking young man. We are going to hurry right over for a hair cut, tonic, singe, and shave. But, Eleanor, you've got to use a safety razor. We admire you immensely, but, nevertheless and notwithstanding, there isn't a single debutante or prominent society matron from the South Shore club to the northern city limits of ultra-exclusive Lake Forest that is going to fool around our Adam's apple with an old fashioned razor. And that's that!

THE LAMP-LIGHTER.

When dad was a little boy,
Years ago,
Wasn't any 'lectric lights—
Dad says so;
Lamp-posts stood along the street,
For the lighter-man to keep—
And the lamp-post man would light them just before boy went to sleep—
Years ago.

When the sun set, and the dark
Grew and grew,
Then the light-man with his stick,
He came, too;
Came out of the night somewhere.
With slouch hat and queery air,
And a ladder, and he climbed each post, and lit the lamp, that's what—
He'd do!

When the evening hour came,
And twilight,
And the stars began to shine
In the night—
Everything was mystery;
In his dreamy thoughts he'd see
This old queery, funny lighter-man come sailing 'cross the sea!
At twilight.

When the lamp-post man came 'round,
Years ago,
Then the Sand-Man, he came, too—
He did so!
When the lamp-posts all were lit,
Boy began to doze a bit,
For the Sand-Man and the lighter-man were brothers—guess that's it!
Dad says so! R. N. RISSER.

SOMEBODY'S ALWAYS GETTING MIXED UP ON ST. PAUL.

R. H. L.; And just as I had sworn off on running the risk of wearing out my welcome to Ye L., comes this from Ye W. G. N.'s usually so seriously reliable editorial page of Thursday in the campaign for bringing together Ye White Hope & Ye Dark:

"Tom Gibbons of Minneapolis was carefully pointed for a number of months for a match with either Carpentier or Dempsey."

Now Tommy, like the capitol, Fair Grounds, Auto Show, Tractor Show and other things (including Bro. Mike the w. k. "Phantom" and a legion of other successful swatters) is of Sinpoll, not Minoplis. How can serious minded editors mistake the word Sinpoll for Minoplis (tho never vice versa)? It marveleth me greatly! GROUCH.

P. S. The Merrygarden troupers is at our biggest opry house this wk. Our Sinpoll papers even allude to her as "Our Mary." And Gosh! How that do please Minoplis! G.

"NO HOOTCH, no poetry!" declared Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch yesterday, shaking a mournful finger at the United States. We immediately wired to Prof. Milton Fuller-Prunes, who said: "Quilter-Botch correct, except that hootch and poets do not go hand in hand, or if so, only for short distance. Then one empties into the other. Moonshine great for poets but bad for historians. Appreciate now fully handicaps of Colyum conducting under dry régime. Suggest contributions to Line in future be inclosed in bottles instead of envelopes. Art is in danger! Congress must pass law permitting sale cocktails to persons suffering from poetry in aggravated form or in throes of novel writing."

A PROTEST.

Dear R. H. L.:
Why all the rhyme about us janes?
And our designs on bashful swains?

We've done our stuff since Eve held sway,
And men who fell would never say
A word to bachelor brothers.
But some weak boobs in Married Lodge
Do now renig and help men dodge;
The password's slipped to others.

Please pass our secrets down the spout
And make the bashful Dumbs find out!
RUTH, CLARA, AND ALICE.

BESIDES, Sir Quiller-Couch, although you may regard that grand old American classic, "The Face on the Barroom Floor," as directly due to the inspiration of the strong drink era, wait until you hear "The Vision of the Nut Sundæ Nut," which one of our rising poets of the Sarsaparilla or Buttermilk School is now composing. DANGER OF GARAGE FUMES.

THE affinity of the blood for carbon monoxide gas is 300 times that for oxygen. In consequence, whenever air contains any carbon monoxide, persons inhaling it will have their blood more or less soaked with this harmful gas. Once it gets into the blood it holds on to the gas carrying hemoglobin for hours, making it difficult for the tissues to get the oxygen they need.

Among the causes of carbon monoxide in the air are the following:

Automobile exhausts, leaking furnaces and gas stoves, leaking chimneys and stove pipes, leaking water gas mains, leaking blast and coke furnaces, furnaces and rolling mills, various manufacturing processes, and shot firing in mines.

When a person is found unconscious from acute carbon monoxide poisoning, as, for instance, in a closed garage in which an automobile is running, the first thing to do is to get him out of the fumes and into the fresh air. Remove him in such a way as to keep him flat. It is better to drag him along the floor than to raise his head and try to carry him upright or half upright.

Keep him warm, quiet, and flat.

If any oxygen is present, let him inhale pure oxygen.

If respiration is weak or irregular, do artificial respiration by the Schaefer method, as follows:

Place person on abdomen; turn the head to one side and rest on forearm; remove all foreign bodies from the mouth.

Kneel, straddling the person's thighs, facing his head. Place your hands on the lower part of his ribs, with your thumbs parallel with his backbone and two or three inches apart, the fingers spread out over the ribs, the little finger lying on the last rib.

Slowly and evenly bring the weight of your body forward and downward, so as to cause your hands to compress the lower part of the man's chest.

This takes two seconds. Swing back slowly, permitting the man's chest to expand and thus to draw air into his lungs. Wait two seconds. Repeat about fifteen times a minute.

Continue this for several hours if necessary. If natural respiration starts up, stop artificial respiration, but watch the man lest he discontinue breathing. If natural respiration stops, start artificial respiration. In the meanwhile some helper should have loosened clothing and applied heat.

The after treatment consists in keeping the man quiet in bed for hours or days. Small exertion might cause the heart to stop without warning.

Foreign writers tell of chronic carbon monoxide poisoning, especially among cooks, bakers, laundresses, ironers, pressers in tailor shops, painters, and men who work in rooms that are being dried by salamanders and men working around automobiles.

Among the symptoms are headache, dizziness, weakness in the legs, constipation, and nausea. The symptoms are worse in winter because in that season the windows are closed.

There are not many reports of chronic poisoning coming from American cources.

BABIES NOT FRIGHT MARKED.

Anxious Mother writes: "You say in your column that it will not cause a birthmark for an expectant mother to become frightened at an animal or something else and cover her face.

"If that doesn't cause a birthmark, will you please advise what does?"

REPLY.

Fright—or other mental shock—experienced by a pregnant woman cannot register on the body of her unborn child. There is no anatomical machinery for doing this.

A birthmark means that at some place on the child at some time during its development something went wrong.

In some instances it is the result of disease which the child had, for such children have diseases.

In some it is the result of physical injuries. In some no cause is known.

HARD ON THE LUNGS.

D. S. writes: "I am working as polisher or buffer on metal work. Will you please advise me if that dust is going to the lungs. In the middle of the day I feel a lump in my throat and chest."

REPLY.

Metal polishing and buffing is the hardest of all trades on the lungs.

Many polishers and buffers die of consumption.

Have your chest examined.

What does the factory inspector say about your work place?

MOTHER SHOULD EAT FRUIT.

Mrs. J. C. H. writes: "My 3 months old breast fed baby is very constipated. He goes three or four days without a movement and then I have to give him a laxative or use a soap stick.

"1. Is he too young to be given orange juice?

"2. Could this constipation be caused by my drinking freely the milk from a Jersey cow that will be fresh in a few months? I have been told that would cause it.

"The baby weighed 9½ pounds at birth and at the age of 3 months weighs 13 pounds."

REPLY:

1. No. Orange juice does not always act as a laxative, however.

2. No. You should eat more vegetables and fruits.

LET DOCTOR ADVISE YOU.

M. G. writes: "1. What is mitral heart murmur?

"2. Is it true what doctors say that one can live through life with the above defect, if proper precautions are taken?

"3. What would you suggest for 'proper precautions'?"

REPLY.

1. A sound caused by blood leaking through a crippled mitral valve.

2. It is.

3. Have your physician tell you how to live. In heart disease the exercises, diet, and all habits must be based on the endurance of the heart and other muscles in that person.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters for this department must be signed with names and addresses of the writers.

THE WORST ROAD.

Chicago, March 10.—[Friend of the People.]—The writer makes use of 111th street from Western avenue to Mount Olivet cemetery every Sunday. By reason of this fact I am greatly impressed with the outrageous condition of the pavement between Western avenue and Mount Olivet cemetery and believe that if those in charge of the pavements of our Chicago streets were compelled to ride but once over this stretch of road they would agree with the writer that it would be a matter impossible to find a more villainous piece of roadway anywhere in the country. G. T. T.

We will soon hold a public hearing on paving 111th street between Western and California avenues. The property owners will be notified as soon as the date is set for the hearing. EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary Board of Local Improvements.

WISHES TO REMARRY.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Can a woman marry again without a divorce from her husband whom she left sixteen years ago? She does not know where he is nor whether he is alive. C. J.

She should first secure a divorce.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PROBABLY FERTILIZING THE GROUND.

Chicago, March 10.—[Friend of the People.]—On a vacant lot on Clyde avenue, south of 77th street, some one is dumping a lot of decayed fruits and a large amount of waste paper, making a very insanitary and unsightly condition. If this matter could be remedied it would be a great favor to the whole neighborhood. NEIGHBOR.

A family in that vicinity say they are using this property for garden purposes and are about to have it plowed. Notice has been served on them to stop dumping garbage there and clean up, which they have promised to do. THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

SEE YOUR ATTORNEY.

Chicago, March 10.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—When obtaining a divorce from my husband last fall he was ordered to pay $15 a week alimony for the support of myself and baby girl. He has paid me nothing. He is a baker and a member of the bakers' union and is working right along. The union refuses to give me his address. What can I do to make him pay? P. H.

The attorney who secured the divorce for you is in a better position to follow up the matter for you than we are.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CONFEDERATE CURRENCY.

Chicago, March 13.—[Friend of the People.]—A friend of mine insists in good faith that confederate currency can be exchanged for United States currency at any subtreasury of the United States. Is there any truth to his claim?
H. V. S.

No.

MUCH MORTGAGED TRUCK.

Chicago, March 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A has a mortgage on a truck dated more than a year ago. B now takes out a lien against the truck, which is in B's garage for repairs. B says that A cannot remove the truck from his garage to sell it until his claim is settled, although the owner wishes to sell the truck. 1. Is not the oldest mortgage given the preference? 2. If the sale price does not come up to the amount of the mortgage, isn't A entitled to all of the proceeds? A. P. B.

1. Yes, if properly recorded.
2. Yes, on same condition.

"THE CRIPPLED ARM OF JUSTICE."

Chicago, March 10.—Apropos your editorial of March 10, "The Crippled Arm of Justice," the writer should like to ask a few questions and make some pertinent comment:

To whom should the prospective juror look for maintenance of his family or other dependents while serving the ends of justice? Rents are still going up, food isn't cheap, and taxes have been raised 100 per cent. Are we to donate our services?

What is the duty of a judge? They sit and yawn through a trial while the defense conceives and executes as rotten a mess of perjury as it pleases, while some of the jurors, working another job to keep the home going, are probably half asleep. And it is a well known fact that it behooves any judge to keep mum in certain cases, no matter of what moment to the public, if he would be returned to the bench at the next election. Judges are particularly oblivious around election times. If a judge is defeated he retires to his law office. May the Lord pity him if he were obstreperous while "sitting" and "could not be reached" by his legal colleagues for some "small favors."

"The Crippled Arm of Justice" may also be affected by the knowledge on the part of the average citizen that the rich, powerful, influential citizen or corporation is always represented by the very best legal talent, who are in turn aided by the intricacies and complexities of the law, of which the ordinary man, and not a few of the ordinary lawyers are ignorant. Possibly a simplification of the legal code, if permitted by the various bar associations, would help that "Crippled Arm of Justice."

However, it is a pretty safe prediction that there will be no simplification. Fees are too fat to permit that.

It is also a pretty safe prediction that Cook county citizens will continue getting the same kind of justice they have been getting until some change in the system is made which will remove some of the kinks in that atrophied arm. And that justice is the present law of the gun and intimidation. A rich man won't convict a rich man and it should not be expected that a poor man or a laboring man will convict his own kind—not if he thinks.

THE TRIBUNE knows that; what is it beating around the bush about?
AN EX-JUROR.

UNION LABOR'S HANDICAP.

Chicago, March 14.—The actions of Ald. Byrne's committee and the remarks of Mr. Mader raise very acutely the question whether law or anarchy is to prevail in Chicago. Any one who knows this man's record and the inside workings of the union he represents has a very good idea of how hard he is striving for industrial peace. What sympathy can union men expect when so many important union officials have criminal records?

So long as labor allows itself to be exploited by a mere handful of crooks and politicians it cannot expect the support of law abiding citizens. These men are now exposed for what they are, and it remains to be seen whether labor unions will act to get rid of them or forfeit the confidence of the public. AMERICAN.

THE UNITED STATES OF EUROPE.

Pacific Grove, Cal., March 4.—Mr. Lloyd George, under war's pressure, turned prophet.

Said he: "We are learning many things in this war . . ." Speaking of Britain's allies, he continued: "We shall never meet as foreigners again. Foreigners no more; there is a common cause, a common table, a common larder, a common coal cellar . . . and from the common cause we shall have a common brotherhood, which will be the surest guarantee for peace on earth and good will among men of all races, creeds, and nationalities, to the end of all time. Here we are daily sharing our bread . . . sharing our GOVERNMENT, sharing even our heart's best blood with nearly the whole world," etc.

How delightful, how possible that sounded! Yet hardly has reconstruction time come but here are these same everlasting friends "snarling at each other's heels," insulting and defying their "heart's best brother."

What's the remedy?

One of extreme simplicity and proved efficiency!

In five words, "the United States of Europe"!

The simplicity and efficiency of uniting has been abundantly proved on this continent, proved in Canada, proved in Australia, proved wherever tried.

Present diversity of governmental forms need be no insuperable bar. States overflowing with loyalty to their royalties could elect their present monarchs their future governors and their present nobles their coming senators.
EDWARD BERWICK.

MOTOR VS. HORSE.

Chicago, March 11.—In this morning's TRIBUNE W. D. writes that I doubtless knew the suggestion to prohibit the use of horses on Manhattan Island, as proposed by the New York police department, was received with ridicule by most papers, I know no such thing, nor is such the case. Perhaps it was ridiculed by some of the publications devoted to the interests of the horse and feed dealers, or others interested in the horse business, but by the general public the sound common sense and real value of the suggestion were so apparent that the proposal was heartily endorsed. I have heard and read many comments on the subject, and all were favorable except one written by a man connected with the horse business.

As to figures comparing costs of trucks and horses, if any case has occurred within the past three years where a modern truck, handled by a driver who gave it half the care and attention he would have to give to a team of horses, has failed to haul at less expense than with horses, it must have been over a route congested with horse drawn vehicles, which represents the greatest handicap under which trucks and autos work. For every horse user who claims horses are cheaper than trucks, there are ten truck owners who will contradict him.

Some horsemen may ridicule New York's plan to do away with horses, but the public will put it through. They will in Chicago, too, after New York has shown them the way, as usual. A. P. Y.

THANKS TO CROWE AND SCANLAN.

Chicago, March 13.—More power to the state's attorney and the Hon. Judge Scanlan.

If the investigation is sifted to the bottom and the ex-convict labor leaders made to understand that all pull and fixing will not save them the crime problem will be near solution.

Labor leaders always meddle in politics. They must be in right to fix things for the gunmen and sluggers. Gunmen and sluggers take no chances unless positive of protection. That's why they are bold.

I hope the investigation does not end as many others have. I hope they go through with it. I am not accusing all labor leaders of being crooked, but there are too many crooked labor leaders and politicians. TED PAUTER.

WHAT DO THE "IRRECONCILABLES" WANT?

Joliet, Ill., March 11.—Will you please tell what those men in the United States senate who are kicking on the four power treaty want? It appears to a layman who tries to keep posted somewhat on governmental affairs that each time a proposal for something worth while is offered in the national halls of legislation that senators try to defeat it. The four power treaty is surely on the right lines. Why don't they adopt it and quit kicking? JOHN B. MECHAM.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE FOUNT OF CASTALY.

By Joseph O'Connor.

I would the fount of Castaly
Had never wet my lips;
For woe to him that hastily
Its sacred water sips.

Apollo's laurel flourishes
Above that stream divine;
Its secret virtue nourishes
The leaves of love and wine.

. . . . .

Its joyous tide leaps crystally
Up 'neath the crystal moon,
And falling ever mistily
The sparkling drops keep tune.

The wavelets circle gleamingly,
With lilies keeping trysts;
The emeralds glisten dreamily
Below, and amethysts.

Once taste that fountain's witchery
On old Parnassus' crown,
And to this world of treachery
O, never more come down!

Your joy will be to think of it,
'Twill ever haunt your dreams;
You'll thirst again to drink of it,
Among a thousand streams.

BOMBER'S DEATH AT MIKADO GATE STUNS JAPANESE

Round Up Reds; Regent's Democracy Curbed.

BY RODERICK MATHESON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PRINCE HIROHITO.

TOKIO, March 18.—The tragedy yesterday at the main bridge entrance of the imperial palace, when a man blew himself to pieces while attempting to place a bomb in the palace, has impressed the authorities more than anything else that has happened with the seriousness of the national unrest.

Assassinations of ministers and riots around the diet have been regarded largely as evidence of factional political fervor, but the hand raised against sacred persons of the imperial family strikes the very foundation of the Japanese national fabric, stunning the officials' minds.

Heretofore, assassins invariably have attempted to extenuate their acts by declaring that they were in defense of the throne and were patriotically inspired, while demonstrators always routed their march past the imperial palace, where they stopped to cheer the emperor. It has been many years since violence against the imperial house was planned.

Round Up All Radicals.

The first consequence of yesterday's incident was the throwing out of a dragnet against all known Socialists and Radicals, many of whom undoubtedly will be severely questioned and their activities repressed. The recent democratic movements of Prince Regent Hirohito will be checked if the young potentate follows the advice of the authorities, while police regulations will be stiffened during the visit of the Prince of Wales.

The police have notified the press that under no circumstances may it publish the details of the letter found in the blood drenched rags of all that was left of the bomber's coat.

Asked Imperial Intervention.

This letter deplored the official acts suppressing the growth of democratic thought and denounced the recent police suppression of manhood suffrage demonstrations. It requested imperial intervention in favor of the peoples' rights. The letter contained fifteen articles, including denunciation of the political corruption and a demand for the abolishment of the house of peers.

The opposition party is expected to make an issue of the incident, showing the general distrust of the nation for the diet majority. The sentry who stopped the bomber and wrestled with him is highly eulogized by the Tokio press.

'COMMON PEOPLE' ORGANIZE IN EAST FOR PROTECTION

Boston, Mass., March 18.—A petition for the incorporation of an organization to be known as "The Common People, Inc.," whose purpose is to "provide the adjunct to public progress that political parties stifle or lack at present," has been filed with the secretary of state.

The founder is Alexander Paul Connor of Springfield. The aims as set forth include the following:

"The corporation is constituted for the purpose of evolving political and civic betterment, for that class of people known as the common people, and for providing for its members, investigation, reports and advice on legislative matters, candidates for office, expenditures and use of public or quasi-public funds. It is an organization of practical ways and means for protecting the common people and promoting their real interest and welfare."

Mother of Ald. Powers' Wife Dies After a Long Illness

Mrs. Mary Hoar, 75 years old, mother of Mrs. Mayme Powers, wife of Ald. John Powers, who during the early years of her life played with Indian children at what is now Kinzie and State streets, died at the home of Mrs. Powers, 4500 South Michigan avenue, yesterday, after a lingering illness.

Mrs. Hoar, a daughter of the late Michael Murray, is survived by Mrs. Powers, Mrs. William Hurley, Mrs. John McGeoghan, daughters, and John Larrabee, a son.

She was a member of the Winfield Scott post, Women's Relief corps, G. A. R., the Schiller league, Ladies' Catholic Benevolent association, St. Lucius court, and the Women's Catholic Order of Foresters.

FINED FOR MISREPRESENTATION.

George Chamberlain, 77 years old, 2035 Prairie avenue, appeared before Judge Haas in the Englewood court yesterday on a charge of soliciting funds for a society which does not exist. The case was continued until May 1.

CENTURY TO SEE WORLD UPHEAVAL—NORTHCLIFFE

CENTURY TO SEE WORLD REMADE —NORTHCLIFFE

Summarizes Views After Visiting Most of It.

with which Northcliffe, a generation ago, aroused the England that was.

U. S. Transformed in 30 Years.

Lord Northcliffe said:

"The knowledge possessed by most of us of other countries is nearly always out of date. The United States, as I first knew it some thirty years ago, is now almost another country, though the basic element of American character is the same.

"I go to the United States often and can watch the gradual changes. Other countries, and especially those which have only lately been affected by the newspaper, the moving picture, the professional propagandist, and the automobile, have changed much more suddenly.

"It had not occurred to me when I entered India that Kipling's pictures of Anglo-Indian life, which seemed to me so accurate when I went to India to read them thirty years ago, are almost as unlike modern Anglo-India as Dickens' descriptions of England are unlike the England of today. Even the very word 'Anglo-Indian' has changed its meaning. 'Anglo-Indian' in India is now the official term for the half caste, known as the Eurasian (short for European-Asian).

Superficial First to Meet Eye.

"Many of the world's changes are superficial and the superficial is that which first meets the eye everywhere. But there are certain vast world movements that have begun to show themselves, just as the geysers in the Yellowstone park make manifest that there is a big something inside the earth that we do not see.

"When I set out last summer from Washington, inspired by bracing conversations with President Harding and Mr. Hughes, I had one or two objects in view—health, visits to British territories likely to suit immigrants, a further study of the movement of which the world is about to hear so much—namely: Pan-Islamism, Moslemism, or Mohammedanism, or whatever you choose to call it, but very much 'Pan.'

"Two farseeing books, the 'New World of Islam' and the 'Rising Tide of Color,' both by the same American author, should be in the library of every one who wants to know something about the world of 1950. I had already on several occasions dipped into the questions dealt with therein in visits to the chief Mohammedan countries—Turkey, India, French and Spanish Morocco, Egypt, Palestine, and elsewhere.

ISLAM REAWAKENED

"We are inclined, I think, to attribute too much of what is happening in the world to the war. The war, for example, did not create labor unrest throughout the world; it merely accelerated it. Mohammedanism as a religion was spreading much more rapidly than Christianity before the war. But what the Moslems consider to be the ill treatment of Turkey since the war has bound them more closely together and quickened that which has been crawling along for centuries.

"The world is now face to face with a body of earnest believers, some of them fanatics, numbering, according to their own estimate, between 300,000,000 and 400,000,000; according to conservative European and American estimates, 250,000,000.

"You ask me for an account of my travels in general. Well, Washington was Washington in July—hotter than I felt it anywhere except in Siam and Indo-China. Vancouver was the same Vancouver that I remember on previous occasions, other than the fact that there were Japanese reporters quartered in the city—very busy and bowing.

Praises U. S. Rule of Hawaii.

"The first place that I struck with which I was unacquainted was your delightful Honolulu, which, except for the embarrassing amount of alcohol that was proffered, was very much as the movies depict it—only better.

"From the point of view of order, organization, fine roads, beautiful homes, and wonderful gardens, it seemed to be an excellent specimen of American overseas administration.

"The preponderance of Japanese surprised most of the visitors.

"A little further on I came to the Fiji islands.

"Here I saw my first sign of Mohammedanism—a mosque.

"Here I began to learn of the influence of Mahatma Gandhi, who, for the moment at any rate, has united some of the Mohammedans, Hindus, and Indians. There is a large labor colony from India in the Fiji islands.

Strikes Trail of Gandhi.

"Right across the world Gandhi—a mysterious ascetic agitator—has sent his agents to Fiji, where they had successfully assisted in stirring up trouble. As to Gandhi himself, I did not see him in India, though I heard much of him at first hand. His object—to put it briefly—is to remove the white man from India, and to unite Indians, Mohammedans and Hindus alike in working for this purpose, whether they be resident in that country or South Africa or in Fiji or elsewhere.

"In the good old times, dark colored agitators contented themselves with stirring up the folks at home; today Gandhi and his lieutenants carry on their agitating everywhere they can organize a meeting or subsidize a newspaper.

"You have had Hindu and other manifestations of something like Gandhiism in several parts of the United States, particularly in San Francisco, you will remember.

"But I find that even after these years of experience in bolshevik, German and other propaganda, the average American or Briton seems surprised that the man with the yellow skin or the dark skin should be going about spreading his doctrines with the facility and often the capacity of a white missionary.

New and Dark Alliances.

"Among the chief trouble centers of the world, some of which I had visited before, are Japan, China, India, Egypt, Palestine.

"The main difference I have found in my revisits was that, whereas before they were separate and isolated, today they are becoming increasingly closely connected.

"Looking at the map, you would not imagine that the Fiji islands have any connection whatever with the Holy Land, but I find that they have. Unhappy little Palestine has a population of about 770,000; of the 770,000, 700,000 are Mohammedans. It is quite a mistake to suppose that it is, or ever has been, a predominantly Jewish country. It is true that most of the Indians whom I saw in the Fiji islands were Hindus, but Mahatma Gandhi has, for the time being at any rate, linked up his Hindus with the 700,000 Mohammedans in Palestine, thus forming part of the great Islam chain of power across the world, stretching from the Moros in your Philippine islands to the Moors on the Atlantic coast of Morocco.

Resent Jews' Intrusion in Palestine.

"Do these people communicate? Certainly they do. Their chief means of communication is the same as ours—their newspapers, which have multiplied like mosquitoes. Other means of communication are letters read in mosques. The great pilgrimage to Mecca is their congress or meeting place.

"Just as the Irishman in Chicago or in Melbourne, Australia, sympathizes with his kinsman in County Cork, so I find does the Mohammedan in India sympathize with what he regards as an intrusion of Zionese Jews into one of his home countries, Palestine.

"The average Moslem seems to have a more or less intense regard for the sultan of Turkey as the pope of his faith, and one of the reasons the British empire is at loggerheads with the Mohammedans in India and Egypt and a score of less known parts of the world is the belief that we continue to aid and abet the Greeks, the natural enemy of the Turk."

THE PHILIPPINES

Lord Northcliffe then recounted his impressions of the Fiji, of the two islands of New Zealand, "perhaps the most beautiful, comfortable, and prosperous of countries," and of Australia, "a magnificent country, with every sort of wealth except population." He then said:

"It was after I left Australia and began to go north across the equator that I came to the country whose latent nationalism has been stirred by the war, by President Wilson's 'self-determination speeches, and by the example of Ireland. It was under the Stars and Stripes that I first met, among the Filipinos, agitators for independence.

"In most parts of the western world and in the African world are people who are being led to school by the Europeans and Americans.

"Uncle Sam has broken all educational records, as to time, in that wonderful country comprising the many hundreds of Philippine islands. There the Americans have lavished care and attention upon these many kinds of natives with their eighty languages and intense internal dislikes. You have given the unselfish service of gentle school ma'ms and hospital nurses, of engineers and road makers, architects, scientists, doctors, agriculturists, administrators, business men. Money has been poured out with both hands.

Sees World Turnover

Spoiling the Filipinos.

"Smallpox, malaria, and graft had at one time almost disappeared. School buildings and hospitals are better than many I have seen on both sides of the Atlantic.

"The young Filipino boys and girls, favored by perpetual sunshine, are pampered to an extent that would make the New or Old England father squirm. I do not know whether, as in Egypt, you have prohibited spanking, but heady young men there gave me that impression. The object has been to give the Filipino (whatever the term may mean, for there are so many kinds of people there) independence as rapidly as possible.

"Heaven forbid that I should butt in upon American politics, but I may perhaps be permitted to report what I heard from disinterested Englishmen, Scotchmen, Irishmen, and other foreigners living under your flag in Manila. It was to the effect that during the late Democratic administration the work accomplished since 1898 began to go back very rapidly in the matters of public health, public finance and public honesty.

Germ of "Independence."

"During most of my journey, beginning in London, I have been spoken to by elegantly dressed and well booted young Filipino paid agents on the need of independence for the islands. When I got near the Philippines I found the subject a very complicated one. There are virile people in that part of the world, Moros and others, who greatly distrust and despise the talkative Spanish Filipinos. A deputation of them informed me that they were entirely opposed to self-determination. But among the Spanish Filipinos President Wilson's words have sunk deep down.

"I did not find that among them there is any admiration for what the Americans have done and there is certainly no gratitude therefor. Among those I talked to in Manila and elsewhere in the east the view was that the wonderful progress of their islands was due to their natural adaptability now that they had got rid of the Spaniards.

"When I suggested that if the Americans left the Japanese would arrive I often received the surprising reply: 'We Filipinos have no quarrel with the Japanese. The presence of the Americans in our islands is a danger to us. The Japanese do not like the Americans and the presence of the American navy and army is always a temptation to the Japanese to attack us.'

"It is interesting to talk with British lookers on, many of whom have been connected with the islands since before the Americans arrived. A Scotchman who had been there for a number of years said to me: 'These Filipinos are only too anxious to get at each others' throats and pockets. When the Americans leave the islands I go with them. They will almost at once become a more ferocious type of the worst South American republics.'"

China a Puzzle, Japan——.

The noted publisher then told of his impressions of faction-split China, and quoted an old time American there as saying he had "come to the conclusion" that he "knew nothing of the Chinese," as if he (Northcliffe) believed that would be the general opinion of any stranger long in the celestial "republic."

His visit to Japan was brief. "Externally with the appearance of a democracy," efficient in many lines, but "really with no parliament or free press, no one can foresee the future of Japan."

In Java he found that the Dutch had established "an orderly people who had waxed fat and the population increased twentyfold," but "self-determination was in the air."

Again on Gandhi's Trail.

"I came again within the orbit of the influence of Mahatma Gandhi and President Wilson's self-determination. I remember that when I was in India some years ago people said, Now, if you want to know how natives should be ruled, go to the Dutch possessions—kindness and firmness is the motto, chiefly firmness.'

"But before I landed at Batavia, the beautiful capital, there were rumors of strikes, semi-political in nature. There is a 'volksraad,' or people's parliament. The newspapers had said things they should not say, people began to talk about Ireland and British India, a little uneasily I thought.

"There are 5,000,000 Mohammedans here, and they are in touch with their brother Moslems in Palestine, Turkey, and elsewhere. There is a curious similarity in the fact that old Batavia, like old Bombay, is building out in every direction, great business buildings and the rest of it, and, like old Bombay, there is the desire for self-determination and talk of President Wilson and Ireland."

Then came Indo-China, Malaya, and Ceylon.

"The self-determination movement is quite alive in Ceylon at the moment," he found. "A propagandist, an Indian barrister trained in England, had just arrived from the Fiji islands and was, I thought, very properly expelled by the Ceylon government. Many years ago I saw a man try that kind of talk on Boston common and I doubt whether at any time afterwards he was in a condition to make any kind of appearance anywhere.

INDIA

"From Ceylon I went to India, naturally very anxious and very interested to see what changes had been brought about since my previous visit by the war and by President Wilson's announcements.

"Altogether there are some hundred and eighty thousand white people in India among three hundred and twenty million colored. In recent riots at Bombay, Hindus and Mohammedans alike attacked the Parsees, the clever traders originating in Persia, who are only sixty thousand in number but who have much business in their hands. They killed also British and an American.

"We know very little of racial fanaticism in England. I was through East St. Louis after the race riots there—your East St. Louis. You are really in a better position to understand the color question than we are in England. You are in a better position to know what would happen in your southern states if your state and federal control of them were removed.

"But the situation in India is much more complicated. Many of the Indian races are on a higher level of intelligence than your Negro. The Guparatis, of whom Mahatma Gandhi is one, are able men of business. As money lenders their transactions extend throughout the whole of the east.

"As fighters, some of the Mohammedan peoples of India and on the frontier of India, and some of the other races, are as indomitable, skillful, and courageous as any white people. A further complication is the number of Hindus highly 'educated' in the matter of book learning.

Doubts Wisdom of Retention.

"Whether the retention of our possessions in India is an advantage to Great Britain is a question much debated.

"India is not and cannot be ruled by the sword," is his conclusion. "The small handful of white men there could be wiped out in a moment if India were united, which it obviously is not."

Then he went to Egypt, "linked to India by the tie of Moslemism." He found the "desire for self-determination in a much more acute form," which has been offered (by Great Britain) "the largest measure of self-government we have offered to colored people anywhere."

PALESTINE A PROBLEM

"An entirely different problem, in which the United States is considerably interested, is the governing of Palestine. As a result of the war the ungrateful and unprofitable task of looking after that unhappy country devolved upon us. Exactly why any one should desire to emigrate to Palestine, which largely consists of stones, is difficult to fathom.

"Some Jews, who have the support Palestine as their natural home. Our government has issued a declaration that under certain provisions Palestine shall be a home for the Jews. I did not in my visit there discover one single English or American Jew who had gone there to take up his residence. I did find that there is a Mohammedan and Christian population numbering 700,000, with a Jewish population, very much divided, numbering about 70,000.

"The very day I dictate these lines I read that there have been riots among the Jews themselves. In Jerusalem the orthodox Jews explained to me that they resented the incoming of the bolshevist Jews; the old resident Jews had lived for centuries peacefully in Palestine and they wished to live in peace.

World Ignorant of Situation.

"One part of the world is so badly informed about the other that few people in England realized when the promised home for the Jews was advocated that there are already 700,000 inhabitants who would violently object to the sudden incursion of central European Jews to what has been hitherto a peaceful country. The bloodshed at Jerusalem and Jaffa of which you have read is, I believe, indicative of much more that will happen unless the extreme Zionists display more regard for the feelings of the industrious and orderly people who are already occupying Palestine.

"The main effect of my journey on my mind is that though one may read books, magazines, and newspapers dealing with these places far from home, actual personal contact is essential to understand them. The Chinese have a very wise saying to the effect that to see once is better than hearing a dozen times."

BIG REGISTRATION ON TUESDAY GOAL OF ALL FACTIONS

Cease Primary Work to Get Names Enrolled.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Leaders of all factions of all parties are figuring upon a record breaking "off year" registration next Tuesday. It will be the only chance for nonregistered voters to get their names on the precinct books if they wish to vote in the April 11 primaries and in the Superior court election next June.

Estimates of the possible registration all were over the 125,000 mark and some ran as high as 300,000. Because of the unusual features connected with the primary campaign, a 200,000 "new" registration is considered a reasonable estimate and it will be no surprise if the figure is 100,000 higher.

City Hall Cohorts Busy.

The city hall organization, working quietly as it has been all through the pending campaign, is ready to deliver every available vote for its legislative candidates and for the county slate it will announce later in the game.

The three active Republican factions have put aside organization work until after registration day and the Democratic regulars have stopped everything to bring out the unregistered vote. The "citizens" Democratic plan, fighting the "regulars," insists the normally Democratic wards will turn in surprising new registration through efforts of the anti-slate candidates.

Chairman Martin J. O'Brien, in charge of the regular Democratic campaign, issued a bulletin directing particular attention to the fact that those who voted in the judicial election last June by affidavit, are not thereby qualified to vote in the coming primaries.

O'Brien Warns to Register.

"The affidavits made last June are effective for the purposes of the April primaries," Chairman O'Brien said. "Men and women who have moved since Feb. 21, 1921, or who have become qualified voters since that time, must register in their proper precincts Tuesday if they wish to vote in the primaries.

"The affidavits of last June do not permit such voters to cast their primary ballots. Our information is that there was an average of fifteen votes by affidavit to a precinct last June, which would mean a total of 35,000 votes in Chicago that will be ineligible to be cast in the primary unless such voters are properly registered next Tuesday. That will be their only chance to get straight with their precinct books. We have stopped the campaign temporarily while our ward organizations are concentrating in getting this unregistered vote to the polling places Tuesday."

ASSAIL BRENNAN FOR QUIZ SENT TO JOBHOLDERS

The Democratic primary campaign, as between the regular organization and the "Citizens'" committee, became an old-time family row last night with the issuance of a statement signed by Henry Stuckart and James T. Igoe, for the "Citizens" faction, charging a campaign of intimidation of county employés by the regulars. The statement in part follows:

"This morning every man and woman employed in county offices received a questionnaire which is nothing more than a threat against the job of the one who dares vote against any candidate not on the Brennan hand picked slate. Half of them came out of headquarters with the cowardly threat.

"Part of the blank carries space to be filled out by the jobholder with information on the job held, the precinct and ward for which he is responsible and the amount of money he is allowed to earn.

"Underneath the employé's signature is provided space for a certification by the ward committeeman.

"Mr. Brennan might just as well come into the open and say to the workers, 'if you want to continue to earn your salary to feed the mouths at home you must swallow the entire ticket of servile candidates which I have named for the coming party primary.'"

BELIEVE MAN'S DEATH ACCIDENTAL.

Frank Peropulos, 42 years old, 5404 West Van Buren street, was found dead yesterday in a gas filled bedroom at the rear of his restaurant at 217 North Peoria street. A gas jet in the room was open. It is believed death was accidental.

WIN 30 POUNDS OF CANDY

Three University of Illinios co-eds shown in the photo (left to right) are Miss Frances Dittman, Helen Bridge, and Geneva Koehn. They won a bet of thirty pounds of candy from university men yesterday when they completed their hike from Champaign. The trio started Friday morning at 9 o'clock and reached the home of a friend, Miss Alice Notter, 5752 Dorchester avenue, yesterday afternoon. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

POLITICAL NOTES

All candidates on the Deneen organization ticket for county offices will participate in a massmeeting this afternoon at Taylor and Halsted streets, in the Nineteenth ward.

George T. Kersey, listed on a so-called "colored slate made up of colored candidates in a colored district" as a candidate for the Illinois house in the Third district, yesterday said: "I am unalterably opposed to an issue of race lines in politics as well as in public affairs. I am supporting Madden for congress and Ettelson for state senator. I have no connection with such a slate or movement, and the use of my name is without my consent or authority."

The Brundage Republican group has initiated a series of "ward days" at central headquarters on the third floor of Hotel Sherman, starting tomorrow with a roundup particularly for the Sixth and Seventh wards. Between 12 and 2 o'clock Charles S. Peterson, candidate for president of the county board, is to be the guest of honor.

State Senator Willett H. Cornwell, in the Thirty-first district, is announcing he has been indorsed by the Woman's Roosevelt Republican club.

At the regular weekly political round table at the Woman's City club, 16 North Wabash avenue, yesterday Edward J. Tobin, Miss Ellen Foster, and Orville T. Bright, candidates for superintendent of Cook county schools, and Edward R. Litsinger and James M. Slattery, candidates for board of review, were speakers.

2 HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS HELD BY HAMMOND POLICE

Hammond, Ind., March 18.—[Special.]—With a copy of F. Scott Fitzgerald's "The Beautiful and the Damned" as their only baggage, two pretty Hyde Park High school girls were held at the Hammond police station last night until they revealed their identity today. They had tramped from Chicago to Hammond and were headed, they said, for Cincinnati. They gave their names as Peggy Wernz, 1526 East 65th place, Chicago; Hazel "Joe" Beagle, 1436 East 65th place, Chicago. The two girls sauntered into a Hammond loan shop last evening and tried to pawn a wrist watch one of them owned. The pawnbroker called the police.

"Your father will be after you," said Chief of Police Bunde to the girls this morning. "O, dear; its going to be terrible," said Peggy, and begged the chief to see her father first and placate him.

WALKOUT AT ALL MINES PLANNED FOR 1ST OF APRIL

Output of Coal Is Greatly Increased.

New York, March 18.—Six hundred thousand union miners in the anthracite and bituminous fields will quit work April 1, unless some unforeseen solution of the present wage controversy is offered in the meantime, John L. Lewis, president of the international organization of United Mine Workers, announced today.

Plans for a Walkout.

Plans for evacuation of the mines already are under way, Mr. Lewis said. In the event of a walkout crews of pumpmen, engineers, firemen, watchmen, and helpers will remain at their posts to prevent flooding of the mines and maintain the properties, he said. He estimated that 1,000 men would remain on duty in the anthracite and 3,000 in the bituminous mines for such purposes.

An arbitration committee of eight, composed of operators and miners, will meet here Tuesday to discuss a new wage scale for this field.

Production Shows an Increase.

Washington, D. C., March 18.—[Special.]—Production of soft coal passed the 11,000,000 ton mark during the week ended March 11, a marked increase taking place as a result of a greater demand due to the threatened coal strike. The present course of production is like that in late September and October, when consumers were purchasing in anticipation of a possible railway strike. Production is now much above consumption, and the excess is largely being accommodated in storage by consumers.

Loadings of anthracite reported by the nine principal carriers continue to increase. In the week ended March 11, a total of 37,903 cars was originated, an increase over the preceding week of 1,414 cars, or 4 per cent. It is estimated that the total production, including mine fuel, local sales, and the product of dredges and washeries, was about 1,982,000 net tons.

ARCHBISHOP IN PARADE AS IRISH DEFY AUSTRALIA

ARCHBISHOP MANNIX.

MELBOURNE, Australia, March 18.—In defiance of an order by the city council a monster procession, headed by the Australian flag, marched through the streets of Melbourne yesterday in celebration of St. Patrick's day.

Archbishop Mannix and other prelates took part in the procession here.

The authorities decided that the police, despite the order against the parade, should not interfere with it except to regulate traffic, but the municipality, it was stated today, would probably prosecute the leaders.

Cellar Full of Hootch No Tennessee Crime, Ruling

Nashville, Tenn., March 18.—"The bare possession of such a quantity of liquor in one's residence is not an offense under the laws of Tennessee," the Tennessee Supreme court announced today in reversing and remanding a case.

YOU may be an expert in furniture, and know exactly what you want; you'll find it here. But if you're not expert, you may select here what you think you want; and if you decide, after you get it home, that you don't want it, return it and get your money back.

You can't make a mistake buying furniture that way; it is our desire, as much as yours, that you get only such things as you want.

If we sell only the best that the price will buy, and do our best to help you get what you really want, we've done you a real service. Our business is built on service.

Our furniture is just as good after you buy it as it is when you look at it in our store; we don't hesitate to take it back, if for any reason at all you want us to take it back. Even if you had to pay more for it than in any other store, you'd be safer to do business our way. The mere fact that you say you'll take it, or that you have paid a part or all of the price, or that we have actually delivered the goods, doesn't change the situation any. We want you to want our furniture; if you don't, then we'd rather not keep your money.

LABOR SURVEY SHOWS A GREAT BUILDING BOOM

Work Is Lifting Business from Winter Slump.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Signs of a spring awakening in business and industry are noted by the monthly survey of the United States department of labor, just issued.

At the beginning of March nearly all the basic industries registered a slight recovery from the year-end dullness which comes even in normal times.

Iron and steel plants increased their operations slightly, railroad repair shops took on more men, while automobile plants topped the list in increase of men on the pay rolls.

A great activity in building operations is noted the country over. According to trade figures, more actual construction work is now going on in some sections than during the corresponding period of any former year.

60 Per Cent Jump Over 1921.

One trade authority places the construction volume for the first two months of 1922 as 60 per cent greater than for the first two months of 1921, while contemplated work is double that of a year ago.

The survey, in taking up conditions in the middle west, says retail buying in general is showing improvement. The awakening is slow, but emphasis is thrown on the fact that the curve of industrial activity and employment is now headed upwards again after its regulation winter skid.

A call for farm labor is now appearing. Yesterday the state employment offices had requests for fifty experienced agricultural hands and for two married couples. Supt. Boyd sent agents over to Canal and Madison streets in a search for men, but only a few skilled hands could be found. The jobs are still open. They are listed as paying $30 to $45 a month and board for single hands and they are all within short distances of Chicago.

Situation in Illinois.

Concerning the situation in Illinois, the federal survey includes the following observations from towns outside Chicago, one comment being that the smaller communities in general seem to be picking up faster than the big centers:

Peoria—Several hundred buildings are being erected, including public schools, business blocks, factory additions, apartment buildings, and private residences. A million dollar hotel in the heart of the business district is to be started soon. One manufacturing concern which has been closed down all winter is now employing 400 men. A large tinware manufacturer is running full time. Coal mines in vicinity are working full capacity, employing practically all miners.

Decatur—Overtime prevails in corn products, paper and brass industries. Manufacturers of ladies' ready to wear dresses are running normal. All other plants, including iron, steel, and lumber, are running three to five days a week. Public improvements of $2,500,000 will be started soon, affording work for approximately 1,000 men. Recent advance in grain prices, especially corn, brought a marked improvement in business.

Bloomington — Foundries, planing mills and implement manufacturers report no improvement. Extensive paving work planned as soon as weather permits.

East St. Louis—The outlook shows an improvement. A slight improvement has been apparent in the packing industry.

Joliet—A large macaroni and also a match company are on overtime basis, while part time is still apparent in can factories, steel and wire, forge and stove works. Steel plants are opening up somewhat. A horseshoe company is working to normal capacity and full force. Merchants report marked improvement in retail trade. Rents are high with few buying.

Quincy—Poor market for real estate. One man has taken up the contractors' association's offer to build fifty houses at cost. Shortage in houses or flats with modern conveniences. A steady, solid, and substantial improvement in industrial conditions.

Rockford—The metal industry shows a slight gain, other lines seem to be marking time, but industrial plants as a whole show upward tendency. Several new plants in sight. Agricultural plants show a slight gain. Retail trade in some lines shows a gain. Renting is at a low ebb.

NOT SO DARK

CARL AKELEY.

"DARKEST Africa is the most delightful country in the world," says Carl Akeley, who has just returned from his fourth trip to the interior of the dark continent. While on his latest journey he shot five gorillas and obtained 20,000 feet of motion pictures dealing with scenes never before photographed. He was formerly with the Field museum and is now associated with the American Museum of Natural History.

MOTHER AGAINST CHAUFFEUR SON; UPHOLDS DIVA

Monterey, Cal., March 18.—Mrs. Kate Glotzbach Howland said today that the marital difficulties of her son, Floyd Glotzbach, and his wife, Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, opera singer, arose out of the activities of a Carmel, Cal., woman.

"She is a woman about 52 years old," Mrs. Howland said, "who sent my son letters while he was in the east, causing him to rush west to hush up these imaginary troubles.

"When Floyd came to Monterey on this matter the woman continued to write to him in the east, and some of these letters fell into the hands of Mme. Matzenauer. I have received heart-rending appeals from her to bring her husband back to her, and I have used every influence to bring about that result, but my boy appears to be surrounded by influences that keep him from me and his wife as well. He appears to be in great fear of this woman.

Went to New York to See Diva.

"I went to New York to meet Mme. Matzenauer and saw her there the latter part of February. We went over the whole situation, and she agreed to take Floyd back and forget and forgive everything, even offering to do anything in her power to get rid of the other woman.

"I then rushed back to California in an endeavor to bring my boy to his senses and get him out of the power of this other woman. Unfortunately he has sought to avoid me ever since, and it was only by strategy I managed to have a brief talk with him, but he has been so worked upon that I have been unable to show him the error of his ways.

"Mme. Matzenauer has acted splendidly throughout, and I in no way blame her for taking the final stand that she has after my son has been led to say the foolish things that the papers credit him with."

Confirmed by Prima Donna.

St. Louis, Mo., March 18.—Mme. Margaret Matzenauer today told the Associated Press she gave no credence to the statement issued last night in Del Monte, Cal., by her chauffeur husband, Floyd Glotzbach, that he had no part in the recent publicity incident to their marital affairs.

"Surely the newspapers wouldn't 'make up' the interviews in which he made me the laughing stock of the world," she commented.

Concerning a dispatch from San Francisco alleging that Glotzbach's mother and stepfather had sided with the prima donna, the madame said:

"Surely they side with me. They always did. Only about a month ago his mother visited me in my New York apartment and tried to bring about a reconciliation. But there will be no reconciliation. You can put that down."

A Reduction in Rates

I AM addressing this open letter to you—our guests—because by your very patronage you have made it possible for us to offer lower rates sooner than we otherwise could have done—for large patronge in a hotel, like large production in any industry, naturally distributes the cost of upkeep.

We still pay prices that are considerably above pre-war levels for food, wages, material, and all supplies. In this reduction, therefore, we are discounting the future. We should like to have done it earlier. Hotels, like all other business organizations, should reduce prices to the limit of their ability. Business needs help. Most of you come to stay with us on business trips. In our effort to help stabilize business, we are glad to do all we can do to reduce the cost of your business getting.

Our service is the same McAlpin service you have been used to—and we are constantly finding ways to serve you even better. We cannot personally meet you at the door, take your coats and care for your horses as good tavern-keepers once did, but as you have found and will continue to find, we at the McAlpin are carrying out this old time hospitality in a modern way in every department of the hotel.

So, beginning today, you may now have rooms with bath as low as $4.00; and without bath, at $3.00.

—at the Martinique—the McAlpin Annex—across the street—the rates are now from $3.50 for rooms with bath and $2.50 for rooms without bath.

BOMBS RAIN ON BELFAST; 11 DIE; WOMEN VICTIMS

Homes and Street Cars Are Blown Up.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1922.]

DUBLIN, March 18.—Ten men and one woman were killed in Belfast today, and at Keady, in County Armagh, an elderly farmer was shot dead by the special police.

BELFAST, March 18. — [United Press.]—After one of the worst days of terror in Belfast's religious warfare, four persons are dead and fully a score are seriously wounded. Three of the wounded are not expected to live.

The crash of bombs in various parts of the city began with daylight and continued until late this evening. Street fighting lasted throughout the day.

A crowded tram car was blown up by bombers this evening, one man being killed and three seriously injured.

A woman 84 years old and a girl were mortally wounded by bombs thrown into their bedroom early today, after which shots were fired. The woman died, and the girl cannot live through the night, it was reported. In another bombing outrage a woman of 47 and her grandson, 11, were struck with bullets while in bed.

Persons going to work this morning were attacked by gunmen in the streets. A man and a boy were killed. Two were wounded in a bomb explosion.

South Ireland Arms.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

DUBLIN, March 18.—Expecting nothing but trouble from Gen. Sir Henry Wilson, the new chief of Ulster's military affairs, South Ireland is strengthening its frontier. For this purpose $8,800,000 has been set aside.

The tension along the Tyrone-Monaghan border is increasing and the inhabitants are in hourly dread of hostilities. About 500 additional Irish republican troops have taken up positions along the southern side of the border between Aughnacloy and Caledon.

Fearing an attack from the northerners, a detachment of the Irish republican army opened fire on a group of men near Mullen's Hill, but there were no casualties. All the bridges north of Aughnacloy have been destroyed and the roads have been trenched. The Dublin press asks what is meant by this method of safeguarding the frontier and the answer generally given is war.

Insurgents Lose Barracks.

BELFAST, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—The conditions in the recent rivalry over the possession of the barracks at Limerick were reversed at Castleblayney, County Monaghan, on St. Patrick's day. Republican forces, adherents of Eamon de Valera, were in possession of the local barracks, but the holiday spirit being abroad, they left a force of only four men to hold the barracks while the remainder were out celebrating.

Noting these conditions, Free State forces from the border seized the barracks, locking the men of the small garrison within cells.

When the republicans became aware of the loss of the barracks they commandeered the Hope Arms hotel, named after the same family as the famous Hope diamond. They are well armed, it is said, although without their other equipment, and expect reinforcements.

Double Celebrator

MRS. ANNA NILES celebrated St. Patrick's day and her own birthday yesterday at a party at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Lynch, 6406 Maryland avenue. Ninety years ago Mrs. Niles was born in Ireland, coming to America when she was 8 years old. She has lived in Chicago for fifty-one years. Neighbors thronged the house to wish her "many more of 'em."

ADMINISTRATION AT BAY TO STEM RAIDS ON ARMY

Desperate Fight Raging as Congress Whittles.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 18.—[Special.]—With their backs to the wall in the desperate fight to prevent the house from cutting the army to pieces, Representative Kahn and other members of the military affairs committee succeeded today in postponing final action on disputed sections of the army appropriation bill until next Tuesday.

Mr. Kahn pleaded with the house, which seems to be determined to ride rough shod over the national defense, not to press the provision cutting the army personnel to 115,000, and another which would put distribution of the army under legislative control, until many absentees have returned to Washington and until President Harding can get on the field of action.

Wait for the President.

Although not very hopeful that the tide can be stemmed, Mr. Kahn and his associates, who fear the consequences of the existing house sentiment, hope that the President may be able upon his return to Washington to exert some influence that will result in saving a standing army of at least 130,000 men.

All hope will not be abandoned, however, even if the house does succeed in passing the appropriation bill as it stands, for those who believe that it is dangerous to let the national defense go to seed are confident that the senate and administration influence will eventually bring about a fair compromise in the emergency.

Figures announced yesterday by the general staff of the army to show how the United States spends only ten one-hundredths of 1 per cent of its national wealth for its land defense, whereas France spends nine times that amount and Great Britain more than four times as much, are expected to have some influence in the argument.

Pershing's Back to Wall.

With these and other striking figures Secretary of War Weeks and Gen. Pershing hope to impress upon congress the necessity of keeping the American armies at a figure higher than that contemplated by the lawmakers.

$600,000 Estate Goes to O. S. Picher's Family

Four children and the widow of the late Oliver Sheppard Picher, former president of the Picher Lead company, 208 South La Salle street, received the bulk of his $600,000 estate, closed yesterday by Phillip J. Finnegan, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner. The residue of the estate was placed in trust, the widow receiving the income during her lifetime. The principal will be divided equally among the children at her death.

THE LAST DANCE

FLORENCE WALTON.
[Kaufman-Fabre Photo.]

New York, March 18.—[Special.]—It became known today by the issuance of a final decree that Florence Walton Mouvet, the dancer, has divorced her husband, Maurice. A copy of the order showed that the final decree was entered by Justice Platt in the Westchester county clerk's office in White Plains on Aug. 26, 1921.

The testimony was taken before Oscar Leroy Warren, as referee, in White Plains, it appeared from the copy of the order, early in 1920. The interlocutory judgment was filed in April, 1920, and on June 25, 1921, an additional affidavit was filed by Mrs. Mouvet.

An unnamed woman was cited as co-respondent. It was not learned who made the application for the certified copy.

ARMY CHANGES MEXICAN BORDER PATROL SYSTEM

Washington, D. C., March 18.—[Special.]—The administration has made up its mind to abandon the practice of trying to maintain a thin line of troops all along the 1,800 miles of Mexican border.

This policy, a relic of the days of "watchful waiting," is a mistaken one, the general staff of the army is now convinced. Furthermore, the general staff is not backward now in admitting that the policy was unwise even in the period when danger of raids from Mexico was considered much greater than it is today.

Instead of attempting to patrol the Mexican border with small cavalry detachments, garrisoned in little towns on the international line, the new military arrangement will be to have a sizeable mobile force located somewhere in the rear of the line but within striking distance. Outposts on trails will be relied upon for warnings, and cavalry forces will be concentrated wherever needed.

Brig. Gen. James G. Harbord, deputy chief of staff, so enlightened the house appropriations committee today.

When Secretary of War Weeks was before the same committee, he, too, told of the change of policy on the border.

"We ought to have in the neighborhood of 25,000 men to cover the border with reasonable safety," he said.

NEW BOOZE DRIVE TAKES LICENSES OF 150 DRUGGISTS

Wholesale Violations Are Charged by Gregory.

A new prohibition problem presented itself yesterday when it became known that possibly hundreds of Chicago druggists are willfully violating the law as to the selling of liquor for "medicinal purposes."

Prohibition Director Charles A. Gregory opened a campaign against this defiance of the Volstead act by forfeiting the liquor licenses of 150 druggists. These alleged violators, many of whom are prominent wholesalers and retailers, are said to have used great quantities of fraudulent prescription blanks in the sale of liquor.

"Home Made" Blanks Used.

The law provides that each subscription blank be stamped with a serial number by the government. The March checkup by Mr. Gregory's office is said to have revealed that hundreds of numbers of which the government has no record have been filed.

"It means that druggists have been accepting, and even themselves making, 'home made' blanks," said Mr. Gregory.

Revocation of permits is the only legal step that can be taken against such offenders, Attorney Joseph H. Barnhart, legal adviser to Mr. Gregory, pointed out.

"There is no criminal action we can take and such cases therefore will not come under the jurisdiction of state and county officials, who on Monday will assume prosecution of many of the liquor cases," he said.

Chance to Explain.

"Since March 15 the druggists have been coming in for their permits to sell liquor, and many have thereupon learned their permits are revoked. I am giving each of such dealers an opportunity to make an explanation about the apparent fraudulent listing of numbers.

"The law provides that the dealer must know either the patient or the doctor, so that we have a fairly clear case against each offender."

Plans are complete for the state to take over the prosecution of liquor cases tomorrow, First Assistant State's Attorney Edgar A. Jonas, who will be in charge, said.

An Open Letter to Home Builders

YOU who are building, or have just completed your new home, are to be congratulated on accomplishing one of the most important strides on the road to permanent happiness.

YOUR next important step is equipment, and the question of what piano to buy becomes the leading one, because a home is not a home without music.

YOU have devoted your best thought to the planning of your new home, and now it is only common sense to exercise equal care and thought in the purchase of your piano.

IT is true that there are hundreds of different makes of pianos to choose from, but if you would have a really fine instrument—and nothing less is worth having—there are perhaps a half dozen different makes worthy of your consideration.

IF you will carefully compare the tonal qualities and touch of these few fine pianos, we are confident that your choice will rest with one of the five sizes and eleven styles of

Kranich & Bach Grand Pianos

LET your own judgment guide you. You may not be a highly trained musician—you don't have to be—to appreciate the marvelous tone and exquisite touch of a Kranich & Bach.

ONCE you know the magic of its voice, you will become a willing slave to its charm.

If you have an old upright or grand, we will allow the highest possible value in exchange. Terms to suit.

This Paige Six-66 is, we believe, the only car of its size and power completely designed since the war. All those important lessons in efficiency and durability have been incorporated. Small wonder it out-performs.

Its power has been demonstrated not only in speed. It has won hill-climbing contests in every important city in America. It excels especially in slow hill climbing in high gear—the most terrific test. Do you know a car you think can beat this Paige? Bring it out and let us prove you're wrong.

We picture above the Paige Six-66 with the famous Larchmont 4-passenger Sports Body. You could not dream a body type so smart and yet so comfortable. Room for a big luggage carrier on the rear. Wide running board space. Special locked compartments in rear of front seat. Full leather upholstery over special unit spring construction. Drive where you will, at the speed your spirit calls for. Paige Six-66 Larchmont will take you there smoothly, comfortably, effortlessly. And the price is $2245.

BY EYE WITNESS.

To what do you turn most eagerly in your newspapers? What do you read most carefully and what merely scan? Are you a headline reader? Does your newspaper suit you? If not, how would you have it changed?

Northwestern university impaneled a grand jury of 128 to handle the case of the American Public vs. the American Newspaper. The indictments were returned yesterday afternoon.

One hundred and twenty-eight men and women doing third and fourth year university work in general subjects and specializing in journalism were chosen. It was contended by the faculty of Northwestern, whose president, Dr. Walter Dill Scott, is an outstanding authority on that branch of mass psychology which may be described as what the public wants psychology, that thus would be obtained a jury not only of newspaper readers, but also of students of newspapers.

Represent Various States.

So the task went to 128 men and women of Medill School of Journalism. Many of them are wage earners—persons of mature judgment and with experience of practical life. In toto the jury represents a dozen states of the Union.

The replies were tabulated, with the following result:

Jury Recommends These Changes.

As to suggestions and demands for change or betterment of newspapers, here are some of the conspicuous clauses in the Northwestern jury's indictment:

"Omit all society news, as in a large city the different social groups are too numerous to have any central interest.

"Play down crime.

"Give more space to international affairs.

"Print more on business, music, and art.

"Print more education, agriculture, labor, and science.

"Print more local news and fewer feature stories, and more about civic improvements.

"Think More," One Advises.

"Be more like the Manchester Guardian in its attitude on public questions. Think more and report less.

"Print articles by experts on science, travel, politics.

"Play up good morals.

"Use larger, clearer print.

"Cater less to women and more to men.

"Sign the editorials.

"Think more of the effect on the public of a newspaper story.

"Restrict display advertising to 30 per cent of the paper and increase the rate accordingly.

In summing up the report for President Scott and Director Harrington, the jury said there was an almost unanimous return on newspaper accuracy, in the sense that newspapers "at least try to be accurate."

LEADERS OF BOY SCOUTS WORK TO MEET HERE MCH. 29

Men interested in boy welfare will meet in Chicago March 29 in a two day gathering when the twelfth annual convention of the Boy Scouts of American convenes. It is expected that this convention will far exceed, both in numbers present and influence, any of its predecessors.

One of the principal features of the convention will be three addresses, delivered on the evening of March 29, at the annual Scout banquet, to be held at Hotel La Salle, by three leaders of modern churches. These will be the Rev. Fr. John Cavanaugh of Notre Dame university, representing the Catholics; the Rev. Cleland B. McAfee of the McCormick Theological seminary, representing the Protestants, and the Rev. Emil C. Hirsch of Sinai temple, Chicago, representing the Jews.

Another speaker will be J. H. Beveridge, president of the National Education association and superintendent of schools of Omaha. Among other noted men expected to attend are Gen. George W. Goethels, builder of the Panama canal; Daniel C. Beard, noted boy writer; Dr. John H. Finley of New York; Frank Presbrey, former president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt Jr.; James J. Storrow of Boston; Milton A. McRae, publisher of Detroit; and Harold F. McCormick of Chicago.

The Egyptian army was reviewed by the king today. As he was returning to his palace a demonstration by students took place in which, according to reports, shots were fired by the police or soldiers, wounding three of the demonstrants.

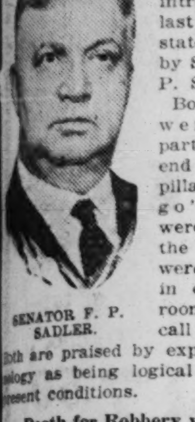
CITIZENS PONDER DEATH OF BILLS ON PISTOL TOTING

Two Measures Killed in State Legislature.



SENATOR F. P. SADLER.

Judges and civic leaders interested in the suppression of crime and the traffic in guns yesterday began a study of two bills introduced in the last session of the state legislature by Senator Frank P. Sadler.

Both bills, which were designed particularly to end much of the pillage of Chicago's citizenry, were passed by the senate. Both were killed either in committee rooms or on roll call by the house. Both are praised by experts in criminology as being logical remedies for present conditions.

Death for Robbery with Gun.

The first—senate bill No. 5—provided a sentence of from fourteen years to the death penalty for burglary or robbery with a deadly weapon. Senator Sadler, in support of the death penalty clause, said:

"Our judges have said—our chief of police avers—that time and again criminals who are released on bail immediately go out and commit other crimes. A judge under the present statutes must admit a criminal to bail. The only crimes in which bail can be disallowed are capital crimes — crimes where punishment may be the death penalty. If the death penalty is included in the statutes covering burglary or robbery our judges can then keep criminals awaiting trial in jail where they belong."

Senate bill No. 5 was killed in the house committee rooms after it had passed the senate. Senate bill No. 6, introduced by Senator Sadler, Feb. 1, 1921, was a revision of the statute covering paroles. The bill included robbers or burglars among those who must serve the minimum amount of their sentence before being eligible to parole.

Killed by Committee.

This bill, also, was killed by a house committee.

"Either of these bills, if passed, would have done much to alleviate crime in Chicago," said Senator Sadler, who is now a candidate for congress. "We have been hammering for years for something that would give the judges the right to disallow bail and that would make criuinals serve the sentences to which they are entitled. The senate has been passing all such legislation; the house has been throwing it down."

ALBANIA REVOLT LEADER HANGED, 2 CITIES FINED

ROME, March 18.—A Stefani agency dispatch from Durazzo states that an extraordinary tribunal convened at Shiak, northeast of Durazzo, had sentenced to death by hanging Capt. Bajramgiani, captain of the gendarmerie, for complicity in the recent revolt in Albania. The sentence was carried out immediately.

The tribunal ruled that the city of Durazzo must pay 100,000 francs damages and Shiak 60,000 francs in connection with the revolt.

A proclamation was issued threatening the death penalty for any one taking up arms in Albania.

It's Coffee, but What Kind No One Seems to Know

"What's that?" Judge Morgan in the Chicago avenue court inquired yesterday of Louis Flossi, proprietor of a sofe drink parlor at 1234 Clybourn avenue, when a bottle of "evidence" taken by policemen in a raid on his place, was presented at the bar.

"That's coffee, your honor," said Flossi.

Judge Morgan uncorked the bottle and smelled the contents. He then continued the charge of violation of the Illinois prohibition law until March 29 and city chemists will endeavor to determine what kind of "coffee" is in the bottle.

MILLIONS READY FOR SUBWAY USE IF CITY DESIRES

$5,238,153 of Traction Fund in Treasury.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The total funds in the city treasury on March 15 were as follows:

Kind.	Amount.
Cash	$14,882,584.23
Securities	37,717,900.00
Total	$52,600,484.23

This indicates that the form of the city's funds is 71 per cent in securities and 29 per cent in cash.

It has been the practice for several years, authorized by law, for the city to invest its surplus and trust funds—which are not temporarily needed—in the city's own securities. In doing that all of the trust and surplus funds have been dumped into one pot, and the investments are made from it.

One of these trust funds is the traction fund. This totaled $27,274,007 65 on March 15. From that amount there has been invested direct $1,083,000 in city bonds. The remainder has been placed in the general pot which has been invested in city securities.

$5,238,153 for Subway.

This remainder of the traction fund, $26,191,007.65, may be segregated as are all of the funds of the city—71 per cent invested in city securities and 29 per cent in cash. On that basis the remainder of $26,191,007 is composed of $20,952,854 in securities and $5,238,153 in cash. That cash item is the point.

That is regular money, without any provisos or qualifications whatsoever which is available at any hour to construct subways. It is cash which can be used immediately—not next month or next year, but tomorrow—to aid in giving Chicago better transportation

That is probably much more than could be properly economically spent this year.

But make the extravagant assumption that more than $5,238,153 can be properly and economically spent this year, more than $1,000,000 additional will be available before the $5,238,153 can be spent.

$1,000,000 More Soon Available.

As related above, $1,083,000 of the traction fund is invested in city bonds direct. That is only a temporary investment. These bonds have been sold to a New York concern and are waiting to be delivered More than ten weeks ago the city sold $7,200,000 worth of Chicago city bonds in New York. All of those bonds have been delivered except $1,083,000—and they may be delivered this week. So that there is practically $6,321,153 in cash in the traction fund which can be used for the improvement of transportation facilities.

Still More to Be Had.

Still more real cash could be obtained and placed in the traction fund within a short time. From the general pot the board of education has borrowed $15,000,000 on tax anticipation warrants. Before May 1 all taxes are due and payable, and the board of education will then be in a position to reduce its borrowings from the general pot. The traction fund's share of that could be placed in the traction fund.

It cannot be claimed that the city's traction fund is so tied up that enough of it is not available to pay the first year's expense of getting rapid transit facilities for Chicago.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Mr. Nicholas Wronski, 2020 Howe street, representing Rose Wronski, states that the property covered by the eighteen flat building at the southeast corner of Ashland avenue and Juneway terrace measures 148x150 feet and not 133x128, as stated in THE TRIBUNE on Friday.

Through a typographical error Mr. Bernard C. Roloff was mentioned as "doctor" in THE TRIBUNE last Tuesday morning. Mr. Roloff is not a physician and does not hold the degree of "doctor."

On Friday morning THE TRIBUNE stated that the Hamilton club would hold a circus and ball in Medinah temple last night. This is incorrect. Thursday, March 23, will be known as Hamilton club night at the Medinah temple circus.

Through an error it was stated in Saturday's TRIBUNE that James A. Patten, a member of the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award, spoke at the Evanston Woman's club. Mr. Patten spoke at an open meeting of the Evanston chapter of the Unitarian Laymen's league. The women who attended were there as members of the congregation of all Souls' Unitarian church of Evanston, not as members of the Evanston Woman's club. The correction was asked by Frederick West, chairman of the publicity committee of the Evanston chapter of the Unitarian Laymen's league.

Offer to Draw Check on Lisle Bank Refused

"I have a $3,000 certified check here in my stocking," Mrs. Regga Astrahan, 3109 West 19th street, told Judge Fetzer in the South Clark street station yesterday. "I believe you," said the judge. "Exhibition of evidence is not necessary." Mrs. Astrahan complained that Louis B. Stein, 29 years old, 371 East 55th street, had taken $100 from her.

"Are you sure you had $100?" asked the judge. It was at this point Mrs. Astrahan wished "to submit the evidence." The case was continued to March 25.

MR. WILLIAMSON FLAYS U. S. FOR BOOZE SITUATION

Condemns 'Buck Passing' on Prosecutions.

The Rev. John H. Williamson, city hall super law enforcer, yesterday scored the switch of bootleg prosecutions from the federal to the state courts as a "sign of weakness on the part of the federal authorities."

"Primarily it is the duty of the federal government to punish violations of the constitution of the United States and federal laws," Mr. Williamson said.

Cites Tax Collections.

He cited the large tax collections of the federal government in the Chicago district, and said that therefore the national government should be able to provide funds for the enforcement of all its laws.

"Transferring the cases to the state courts handicaps the enforcement of state and local laws and is detrimental to them," Rev. Williamson said. "The change tends to create contempt for the law."

The mayor's law enforcer, however, thinks that ultimately prohibition will be enforced, though there will always be those who will object to it.

"Slavery was abolished in 1865 but there are still some in the south who think it shouldn't have been done," he declared.

Got Final Paper in 1918.

The mystery with which the Rev. Mr. Williamson has chosen to surround his citizenship status was solved yesterday when records of the Superior court of Cook county were found to contain an entry on June 21, 1918, showing that the Rev. John Henry Williamson, minister, renounced his allegiance to the British crown and on that date became a full fledged American citizen.

"Inside Man" Sought as Theater Safe Robber

Police are seeking the "inside man" who robbed the safe in the Studebaker theater of $623. Albert Eckardt put the money in the safe Friday night. When George A. Doyle, treasurer, opened the safe yesterday the money was gone.

BOARD TO TEACH PUBLIC THE FOOD VALUE OF MEATS

Object Is to Increase Sales, Cut Cost.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Farmers, live stock commission men, packers and butchers have joined in a campaign to disseminate information on the correct food value of meat and promote the maximum efficiency in its handling from the time livestock leaves the farm until it reaches the consumer's tables in the form of pork and lamb chops and beefsteaks.

Representatives of the American live stock and meat industry have formed a national live stock and meat board, Everett C. Brown, president of the National Live Stock exchange, announced. Financing of the movement by having the local exchanges collect 5 cents from the shipper and 5 cents from the buyer on each car load of live stock has been approved by the executive committee of the national exchange. The exchange was the only factor in the industry which had not previously approved the plan.

Membership of Board.

The new board is composed of Howard Leonard, president of Illinois Agricultural association; Thomas E. Wilson, packer and president of the Institute of American Meat Packers; W. J. Carmichael, secretary of the National Swine Growers' association, and Mr. Brown.

The organizations joining in the movement represent every angle of the live stock and meat industry, from the feed lot to the consumer's platter.

How It Will Function.

In outlining proposed activities of the board, Mr. Carmichael said its purpose is to conduct an educational campaign designed to increase meat consumption by effecting a saving in the handling of both live stock and meat and to tell about the value of meat and its place in the diet, rather than by disparaging other food commodities.

If the consumption of meat per capita is increased one-half pound a week it would put meat consumption back on the 1900 basis, Mr. Carmichael said, thus adding many millions of dollars to the value of the producers' live stock and providing a market for millions of dollars worth of additional meat animals.

DIES OF AUTO EXHAUST FUMES.

A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of Harry L. Clark, 42 years old, 4313 North Lincoln street, superintendent of the Fulton Market Cold Storage, who died from fumes from the exhaust of his automobile.

Merchants and Manufacturers, Read This

Richmond is expanding rapidly and we urge manufacturers who desire branch plants on the Pacific Coast, and merchants in all lines of business, to come in and meet R. D. Holdrege, Vice-President and Sales Manager of The Richmond Company, Inc., who is now in Chicago.

Now is the time to get your store and factory locations.

I Am Here With a Personal Message for You

I am a former Chicagoan—I was raised here—and when I speak of living and labor conditions here in the Middle West, I know what I am talking about—and in this you will agree with me.

To the men who have steady work every day in the year, whose cost of living does not exceed their income, who are able to save a nice little sum each week and are getting ahead, who do not mind the thermometer running up or down 45 degrees in one day—to these men I have nothing to say.

BUT to those thousands of others in Chicago and the Middle West, who are simply existing under unsatisfactory working and living conditions, who cannot stand the high rents and high living costs, who are compelled to live in neighborhoods where their children do not have a chance and are compelled to play in the streets—to you thousands of men who cannot make both ends meet and are going behind instead of ahead—who in good times have saved up some money but now see it dwindling away—to you men I bring a message of good cheer.

Let's Look Forward—Not Backward

Where I live now, business is prosperous. Factories and mills are expanding, adding new buildings, taking on more men. New factories are locating there and calling for more men, skilled workmen of all kinds. Every able bodied man there is drawing a full pay envelope every week in the year. And these men are saving money—most of them own their own bungalows now. We have no high rents. Living costs are low. Taxes are low. Shirt sleeve climate at least ten months in the year—no burning expensive coal, no shoveling snow.

The little tots that live there are tanned, ruddy cheeked, sturdy legged, because they are out in the open and sunshine all the year around. The wife serves fresh vegetables on the table from her own little garden back of the house. Things grow there—grow in December as well as in July.

You will be within easy walking distance of your place of work—no crowded and expensive traffic conditions. They call it "The Pay Roll City" out there—and it's the place you have been looking for, whether you work in overalls or a white collar. I came here to tell you all about it.

Your Two Hands Alone Can't Make You Wealthy

Look around you—think it over—very few men you know have ever earned enough by manual labor to get rich. To get ahead you must save money—your expenses must be less than your income if you are to own your own home.

It's only where there is prosperity, where business is expanding, where you can have steady, profitable employment, where real estate values are increasing, that you can make a little money bring big returns. "The Pay Roll City," where I live is prosperous and growing. In twenty years it jumped from four frame houses to the fourth largest manufacturing city in the state. Those who came here first have been enriched by the natural growth of the city—and you are not too late, this city is just BEGINNING to grow.

There is "Welcome" on the Door Mat for You

Every man, woman and child in Richmond, California, is inviting you. I come here backed by The Richmond Realty Board, The Richmond Industrial Commission and representing a big estate now being divided into attractive home sites. Richmond, on San Francisco Bay, just a few miles from Oakland, has a population of over 25,000 inhabitants and 1,500,000 people within a radius of 50 miles. Last year our workers in Richmond were paid over $8,000,000. Read the "Richmond Advantages" column on this page—it will give you a very definite picture of what the future offers in Richmond.

You will be dealing direct with us, the owners. The home sites in our estate are in one of the best residential sections of the City of Richmond. They are well drained, level, with all modern city improvements and from your front veranda you will have a wonderful view of San Francisco Bay.

If you are not prepared to go to Richmond at once, $25 reserves a home site for you. Prices of home sites, $500 and up. Any working man can easily meet the terms out of his pay envelope. You can buy now and build any time later. If you are in a position to do so, you can go to Richmond AT ONCE. Our "Transportation Department" will help you by arranging all details. Much of the necessary building material is manufactured right in Richmond.

Hours, Pay, Treatment—All Satisfactory

You need not accept my unsupported word as to labor conditions in Richmond, "The Pay Roll City." Here is a telegram I have just received since I arrived in Chicago from The Richmond Industrial Commission—read it for yourself:

R. D. HOLDREGE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.
LABOR CONDITIONS IN RICHMOND, CALIFORNIA, ARE NOT SURPASSED. HOURS, PAY, TREATMENT ALL SATISFACTORY. HIGHLY CONTENTED LABOR. WORKING CONDITIONS EXCELLENT AND RICHMOND A CITY WHERE LIVING CONDITIONS ARE THE BEST. WORKERS HERE ENJOY COMFORT, PLENTY AND A SPLENDID CLIMATE. HOME OWNING PERCENTAGE ONE OF THE LARGEST IN THE UNITED STATES. SCHOOL SYSTEM OF THE BEST. BEAUTIFUL SURROUNDING COUNTRY FOR HOLIDAY OUTINGS. MANY AMUSEMENTS. VITAL STATISTICS SHOW RICHMOND TO BE AMONG THE LEADING CITIES IN STATE AND NATION IN HEALTH.
RICHMOND INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION

I can't add much to the above—there it is in black and white. But let me quote from a letter from this same organization: "The Richmond Company has always been rated as one of the most stable and sound property corporations of our city and state. It has been identified with Richmond's progress from the very inception of the city and is now recognized as a leading factor here." This proves that when you do business with us you will not be dealing with any fly-by-night outfit.

Here is what Ed Downer, President of the Mechanics Bank of Richmond, writes: "The Richmond Company while marketing its properties has always worked for the interests of its clients and HAS SPENT MANY THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS IN GENERAL IMPROVEMENTS, building homes and in bringing manufacturing plants here. FORTUNES HAVE ALREADY BEEN MADE by hundreds in the growth to the present time. But aside from this consideration of profit, Richmond is a pleasant place in which to live." Pretty strong talk from the President of a bank? We have other just as strong evidence to submit when you call at our office.

You'll enjoy the Hunting, Fishing and Motoring

In Upper San Pablo Bay, within a half hour of Richmond, you will find mallard and teal duck hunting to your heart's content. And a little further on, you will be surprised and delighted with the fishing. You can in a short time catch a nice mess of gamy trout, black bass and salmon which swim around in the fresh water streams nearby. You have heard of the wonderful automobile roads in California—they radiate from Richmond in different directions—you and the family can have many a pleasant picnic. You are not living on the outskirts of civilization, enduring hardships and inconveniences. Boulevards, schools, large stores, motion picture theatres, banks, club houses, churches, public library, street cars, purest drinking water, no sudden changes in temperature—everything necessary to make a prosperous, thriving city. The stores and shops in Oakland, a city of 250,000, and San Francisco, all within easy reaching distance, by electric line and ferry.

Money Back Guarantee—You Take No Risk

You men of the Middle West to whom I bring a personal message—you two-fisted workers with the necessary "git up and git"—our industries are growing so rapidly that we need you. Here is your opportunity for better working and living conditions—and a valuable real estate investment. The people of Richmond know that if they gobbled up these home sites and held them for profit which is sure to come, they would stop the growth of the city and bar you out. That's why I am here—and you had better come and see me soon at our Chicago office, before I go back to our Richmond headquarters.

I want you to be protected in every possible way. After you have selected your Richmond home site in our office, you will have sixty days in which to investigate or inspect our proposition. If you do not find everything to be exactly as stated in our advertisements and literature, we will refund your deposits promptly and without argument.

To further protect you, a clear title to your home site will be issued to you by the Oakland Title & Guaranty Company for the full purchase price, and we do not charge you a single penny for this insurance.

Send Coupon for Our Descriptive Folder

I have prepared an illustrated, descriptive folder for you. It contains many reproductions of actual photographs, showing our properties, bungalows already built on our home sites, scenes in and around Richmond—and giving you a whole lot more information regarding "The Pay Roll City."

You have your choice of two plans. If you are ready to go to Richmond now and in a position financially to move your family there, our Transportation Department is at your service.

If you want to stay where you are and have your Richmond home site partly or fully paid for before you move, in two, three, four or five years, by all means come in and make your selection now.

These home sites are moving fast. If you live at a distance you can wire me for a reservation. If you can't call at our office at once, or if you live outside of Chicago, send in the Coupon below without delay. I would like to guarantee that the present LOW PRICES of these Richmond home sites would be continued indefinitely, but I can't.

And, get this, please: You don't have to support California. California will support you. Come in and talk it over before I leave for my Richmond office. Once you make up your mind to it, it isn't going to be a hard job to get to Richmond.

My old dad used to say to me: "Son, don't tell all you know the first time." So I am holding back a lot more about the advantages I have to offer you until I see you or hear from you. If you don't act, you will be the loser.

NEW MARCHES OF SOUSA ALMOST GOOD AS THE OLD

As Always, His Band Is Worth Waiting For.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

It took almost five months for Lieutenant Commander John Philip Sousa, U. S. N. R. F., and his band to fill a deferred engagement at the Auditorium, but he got around to it yesterday afternoon and evening.

It was worth waiting for. Sousa's band does something in music that no other organization, no matter what, is quite able to accomplish. No other band, no orchestra, no anything gets quite the stir that this joyous body of players projects as a matter of course.

Before 200 Audiences.

Sousa has been gadding around the country this season as far west as California and as far south as Mexico and Cuba, and some 200 or more audiences have been the happier therefor. No band could have been in better fettle than this one was yesterday. It played special numbers and returned to play encores; there were soloists to share the applause; the band itself would seem to be so full of Mr. Sousa's spirit that it could well nigh play without him.

At least once it did just that thing. There was a number of Mr. Sousa's arranging called "Showing Off Before Company," where man by man and choir by choir they emerged from back stage, each section playing its own ditty until all were assembled. Then the director appeared and the band crashed into a finale, one of the Sousa marches.

New Marches Good.

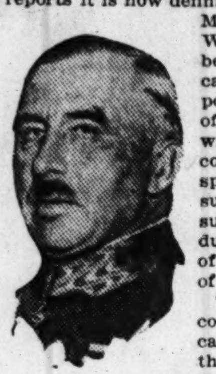
There were many marches. There always are, and there ought to be. He has a good collection of new ones, "Keeping Step with the Union" and "On the Campus" among them, and they get into the toes and into the arteries quite like the old ones. Nothing will ever quite equal "The Stars and Stripes Forever," but the new ones are sure to have their share in bringing heads up and feet out.

More serious numbers were interspersed, a symphonic movement here, and operatic selection there. Mr. Sousa is a wise showman as well as a learned musician; he is perfectly aware of what must be left to the orchestra and what will transcribe for band. He is also the modern alchemist, transmuting instruments of brass and wood into tone of gold. There is no one like him.

Two Alternate Arbuckle Jurors Will Be Selected

San Francisco, Cal., March 18.—[United Press.]—Selection of two alternate jurors to serve in case any regular jurors should be incapacitated was the task before the court in the Roscoe Arbuckle trial today. It was believed testimony would commence Monday.

WOOD TO ASSUME PROVOST DUTIES IN SHORT TIME



MAJ. GEN. LEONARD WOOD.

After many months of conflicting reports it is now definitely certain that Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, who has been acting in the capacity of temporary governor of the Philippines, will return to this country in the late spring or early summer, and assume his new duties as provost of the University of Pennsylvania.

This advice is contained in a cablegram from the general to the trustees of the university, in which he stated that as he considered the objects of his service in the Philippines accomplished, it would only be a matter of a short time before he would be able to assume the duties which he had expected to take up a year ago.

The four power treaty, discussion of which is raging in the senate at present, is the only thing, it is said, delaying the general's departure.

COMMONS GETS BILL TO AID CHILD OF THE UNWED

LONDON, March 18. — [United News.]—The status of the unmarried mother and her child is to be considered by the British parliament. Capt. George Bowyer, M. P., announces the government has promised to make his "children of unmarried parents" measure a government bill. This, if the government lasts through the year, would practically insure the bill's passage.

"The public is beginning to realize," said Bowyer in his statement, "after all these years of stigma, from feudal times to the present, that the unmarried mother and her child need as much care as the legitimate mother and infant."

He pointed out that England is almost the only country in the world where subsequent marriage fails to legitimatize the child.

Thirty-seven thousand children are born out of wedlock annually in England and Wales, according to Bowyer's statistics.

Former Naval Collier Jupiter to Boot Airplanes

Washington, D. C., March 18.—The former naval collier Jupiter, first turbo-electric propulsion vessel to be built, will be recommissioned Monday at the Norfolk naval base as the naval airplane carrier Langley. The ship has been undergoing the process of conversion for more than a year and has been fitted with a top deck, on which planes can land and with devices for starting them into the air while the ship is in motion.

WOOD VETOES 16 FILIPINO BILLS TO SAVE MONEY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MANILA, March 18.—Owing to the critical condition of Philippine finances Gov. Leonard Wood has vetoed sixteen of eighty-three bills passed by the legislature at the last session. Most of the vetoed measures affected the revenue and would have diminished the government's current income during the coming year, if they had been enacted into laws.

One of the most important bills thrown out by Gov. Wood was the appropriation of 18,000,000 pesos ($9,000,000) payable during the next nine years for the developmentof the University of the Philippines.

The veto was seldom used during the régime of former Gov. Francis Burton Harrison. Gov. Wood also has adopted a policy of either signing or vetoing all bills passed by the legislature instead of permitting many measures to become laws without signature.

A big cut of the finest Roast Beef—only 40c

Ten, fifteen and even twenty years ago the standard price for a cut of the best roast beef was 40 cents. Today the price, in the highest class restaurants, is 75 cents to $1.25, except at the North American where it is still only 40 cents.

Why? Simply because this is a restaurant conducted on a Common Sense plan. You serve yourself and pay only for the food you eat. And so food here, which is the same highest quality it has always been (under the same ownership and management as the incomparable Rector's of earlier days), costs no more than in the good old days.

As proof of this statement study the following prices. And always remember that our food can't be beaten, either in quality or size of portions (which are often ample for two), no matter how much more you might pay elsewhere.

Individual Apple, Prune or Raisin Pie—a big and delicious individual pie 10c

Honey Waffles—(for breakfast) with 3 strips of bacon, or Mickelberry's Old Farm Sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey 25c

Halibut and Peas—a big portion of the most appetizing fish you can buy 35c

Fried Chicken—Sizzling hot from the pan with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce:
Dark meat 55c
Breast of chicken, all white meat 65c

And Bring the "Kiddies"—They're always welcome

HOTEL SHERMAN COMPANY, Owner

TRIO OF CANINES GIVEN GUARDIAN IN WILL TANGLE

Realtor to Spend Income on $16,000 Fund.

Guardianship of the three canine beneficiaries of the estate of the late Mrs. Margaret Howard, 3037 Cheltenham place, was vested in Neil Lykke, a real estate operator, with offices at 9221 Commercial avenue, by Probate Judge Henry Horner yesterday.

Lykke will care for the dogs and administer the $16,000 trust fund left for their maintenance, pending disposition of litigation over the admission to probate of a copy of a will alleged to have been made by Mrs. Howard in December, 1921.

What It's All About.

About three months before her death on March 12 Mrs. Howard is said to have employed Harry C. Leemon, an attorney, to draw up a will, in which among other bequests, she provided that the income from her Cheltenham place property should be used for the maintenance of her four dogs during their lifetime. One of the dogs, Laddie, was struck and killed by a taxicab the day Mrs. Howard died.

The will also provided that a sister, Mrs. Tillie Leighton, 7712 Coles avenue, should receive $500 and directed that after the death of the dogs the residue of the estate, including the Howard home, should be given to the Arkansas Children's home at Little Rock. The dogs are now in the custody of Mrs. Carrie Bashaw, 7815 Muskegon avenue.

Rival Claims on Provisions.

Leemon claims he was appointed executor of the estate under the provisions of the will which he drew. Just before Mrs. Howard's death, it is alleged, she asked her brother-in-law, Frank A. Leighton, to draw up a new will, which was in all respects identical with the first will, with the exception that Leighton was appointed executor.

After Mrs. Howard's death the will drawn by Leighton was found to have been mutilated, the signatures of Mrs. Howard, the witnesses, and the notary public's seal having been cut off. The will drawn in December by Attorney Leemon cannot be found and he is seeking to have a copy of the missing will admitted to probate.

West Point Graduates Attend Annual Dinner

A wide span of years lay between Gen. Charles King, retired, of Milwaukee, and Lieut. Hugo Rush of Fort Sheridan, both of whom were present last night at the annual dinner of West Point graduates in the Hotel La Salle. The occasion commemorated the founding of West Point as a military academy.

Gen. George J. Bell Jr., Gen. H. F. Hodges, retired; Col. Manus McCloskey, Col. W. D. Chitty, and Col. F. B. Watson were among those present.

MURDERED BY UNKNOWN ASSAILANT. A coroner's jury investigating the death of Moses Williams, colored, 60 years old, 6945 Kenmore avenue, found that he was murdered by an unknown assailant.

WILL HAYS HERE; GLAD HE'S OUT OF POLITICS, HE SAYS

WILL HAYS.

Will Hays, former postmaster general and present head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, hopped into Chicago yesterday with Bill Jr., 6 years old, for a visit with Mrs. Hays, who has been ill at St. Luke's hospital for several weeks.

"I'm glad to be out of politics and in an activity where we're all on the same side of the table," he said.

He declared that the new association was sure to have the coöperation of the public in maintaining high film standards and that Billy already wanted to oust his namesake, "Bill" Hart, from his wild west job. Mr. Hays expected to return to Sullivan, Ind., last night with Mrs. Hays.

LAW ENFORCERS WILL DINE AND DISCUSS CRIME

City, state, and federal law enforcement officers will attend a dinner and meeting tomorrow evening at the Hotel La Salle, called by Edwin W. Sims, president of the Chicago Crime commission.

Crime commission officials will present the facts in the situation to the officials present and ask for their views. State's Attorney Crowe, Chief of Police Fitzmorris, several judges, officers of the Chicago Bar association, and others are scheduled to respond.

Two hundred business and professional men, civic leaders, and members of the crime commission have been invited.

MEXICANS BREAK YANK CONTRACT

San Antonio, Tex., March 18.—According to a telegram received today by the San Antonio Light from its Tampico correspondent, the Tamaulipas tax collector Thursday levied execution to collect 100,000 pesos against the properties of the Compania Terminal "La Isleta" and the Colonia Altavista. The former covers an important section of Tampico and the latter several of its important residential sections.

According to the message to the Light, the companies refused payment on the ground that the taxes were imposed in violation of contracts made with the state in 1918, under which for a period of eight years the government would assess the property at its unimproved value and not increase the tax rate, in consideration of which the owners would construct streets, pavements, sewers, water and light systems, etc., all of which to become the property of the city of Tampico at the end of the eight year period.

After the owners had performed their part of the contract at a cost of more than $1,000,000 and had sold many lots, principally on installments, and after many costly buildings and port works had been constructed, the government revoked the contracts and imposed taxes upon the present value of the property thus enormously increased by the urban and industrial improvements.

Holland's Appreciation Service

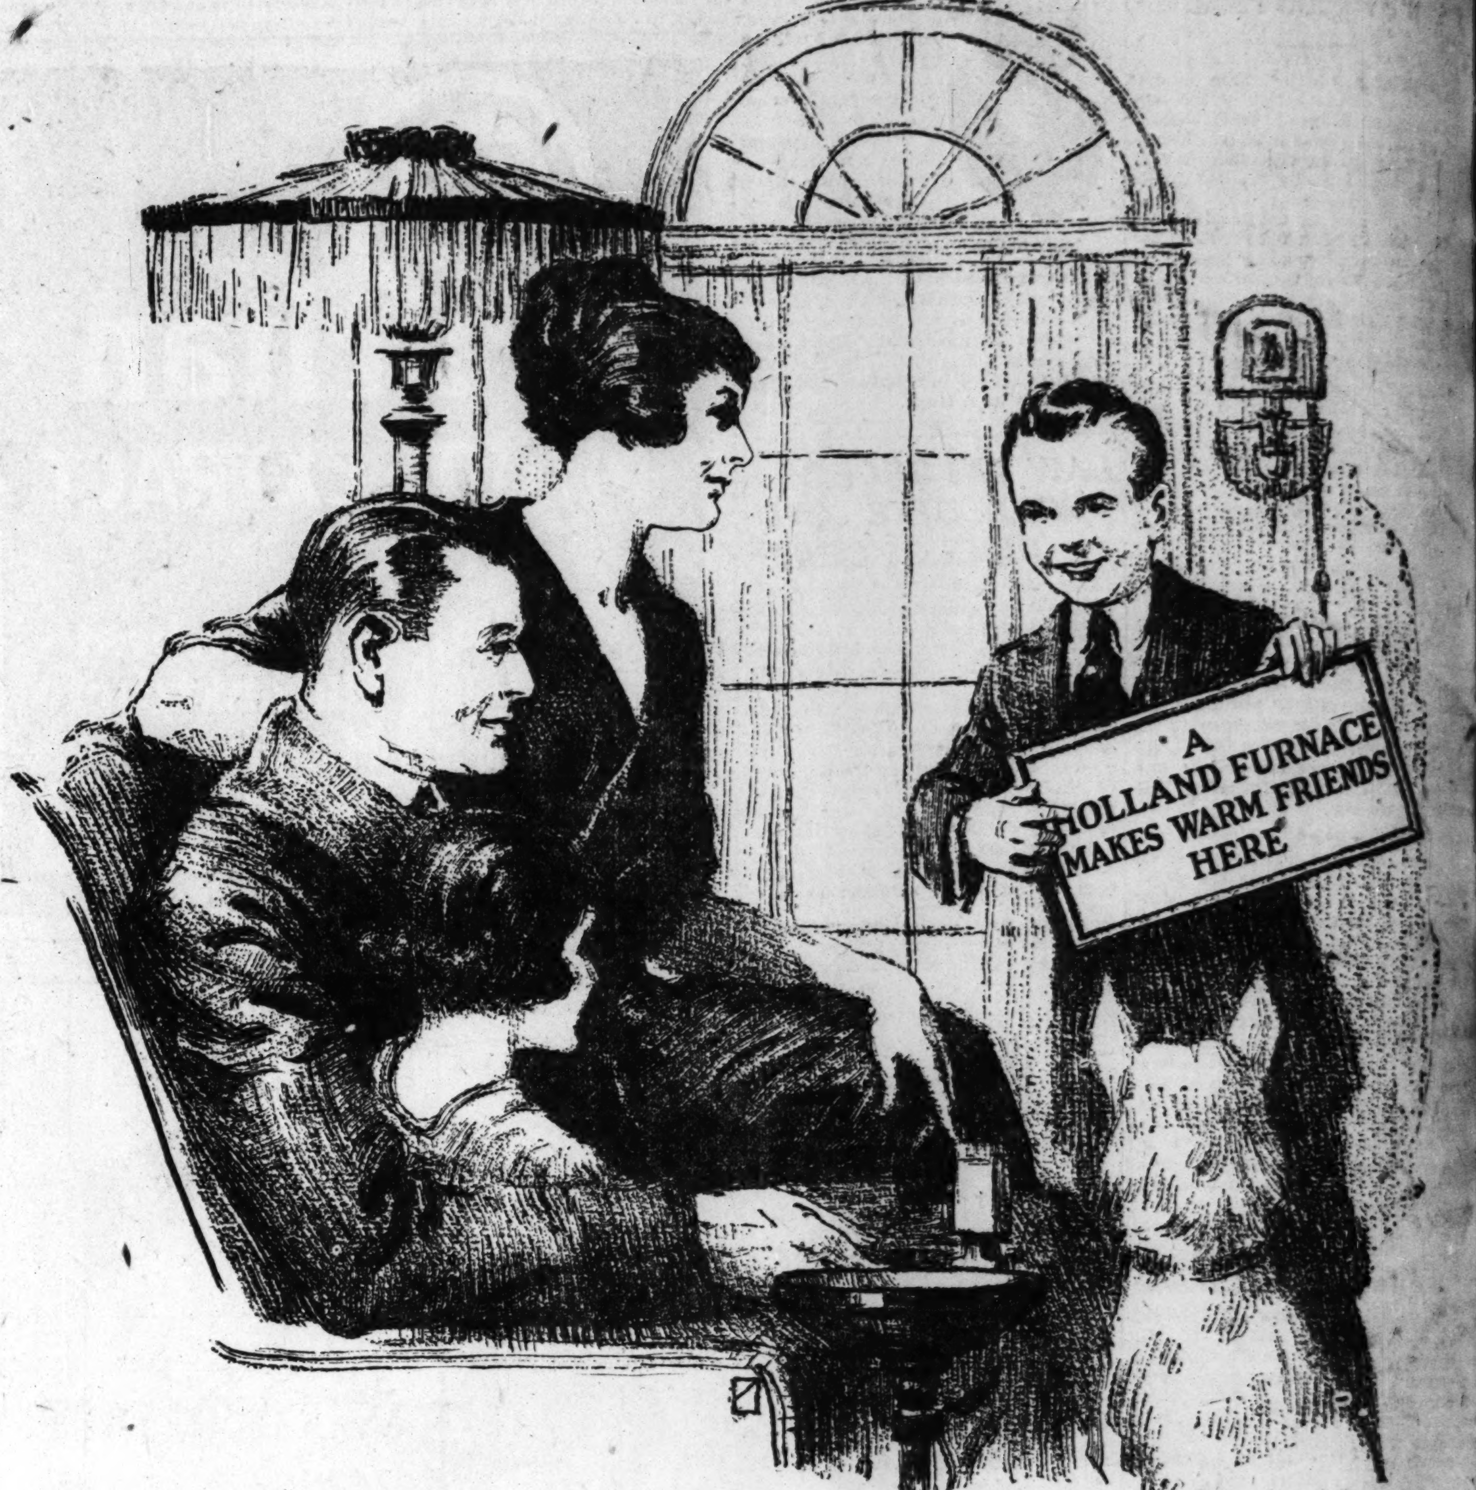
THE POWER of public good-will for a product seldom has been shown so clearly as in the history of Holland Success. Particularly was this true during the past year when, despite the general business depression, Holland sales grew enormously.

Such times and conditions point out to us the tremendous asset we have in the good-will and satisfaction voluntarily expressed by Holland owners.

Such word-of-mouth advertising is the most effective influence in the building of a business—and it is this we wish to acknowledge and reward.

To build a product and perform a service thus to merit public appreciation is something of which we feel we may be justly proud; but we are none the less grateful for the assistance this public esteem has given to the steady and rapid extension of our business, in good times or bad.

And in recognition of this friendly interest of the multiplied thousands of Holland owners, we propose to extend to each and every one of them this Spring a special additional service without charge.



A HOLLAND FURNACE MAKES WARM FRIENDS HERE

We will Clean and Inspect Your Furnace Free!

We have designated April 5th to 12th APPRECIATION WEEK. It will be given over to completing our arrangements and schedules for giving this service.

The work will be done by appointment after heating is over this Spring—and in addition to cleaning and inspection will include helpful suggestions on firing, fuels, etc.

In connection with this Appreciation Service, through a further co-operation of Holland owners, there will be evidence everywhere one goes of the unusual good-will toward Holland—an expression of the esteem to which we have referred.

And this evidence will cause you to know why it is so easy and natural for our customers to say, "HOLLAND FURNACES MAKE WARM FRIENDS." They are going to say it in a new way.

You will note that it is because they have found it to be so true that they wish all their friends and acquaintances to know it and understand.

For this phrase, "HOLLAND FURNACES MAKE WARM FRIENDS," is not a mere advertising slogan. It is a business text born of universal satisfaction, and truly expresses the consistent policy of the Holland company.

And this policy has insured to Holland owners the finest home heat in the world—the most comfortable, the most healthful, the most economical and the most dependable.

An even flow of warm, moist air to every room—the same temperature in all parts of every room throughout the house.

No cold floors—no drafts—no dead air—no chilly corners. No waste of fuel or difficult firing. No burning out, warping or upkeep expense.

These houses are worth more to live in, to rent or to sell.

Therefore, no matter what method of heating you now use, you should investigate Holland complete warmed-air heating and circulating systems.

No matter what the size of your dwelling—whether a modest cottage or costly mansion—the specifications of Holland engineers fit the exact conditions, insure the greatest economy and deliver the most scientifically fine heating service in the world.

Home heating is the basis of home comfort. And this is what Holland guarantees. This guarantee is delivered direct to each Holland owner from the largest installers of furnaces in the world—a responsible guarantee that does not attempt to evade or escape any part of the responsibility.

Talk with Holland owners. Make comparisons. Get the facts.

Join the Holland family of WARM FRIENDS before April 5th—share in the enjoyment of Appreciation Week—and have your furnace installed before Spring house-cleaning.

Write, telephone, or call upon the Holland Branch in your locality, and receive complete information without obligation.

We __also__ manufacture a steel pipeless furnace, installed complete. Price, $104.50

Prices of our complete warm air circulating system are proportionately low.

New York, March 18.—[Special.]—Selecting an all star aggregation in any line of athletic endeavor, being purely a matter of opinion, always affords a splendid chance for a rumpus. In picking the all time boxing champions in their various divisions we can appreciate the stampede by the fans, who are bound to come tearing after us with their exceptions shortly after this brief is submitted for their inspection. However, all I can do is to beg their indulgence for the moment while we trip in with our list of great ones in the boxing racket.

It is proposed in this résumé to start right off with the bantam class. Since the flyweight division is practically a new one, we do not propose to make any selection in that class, but if we were to make one offhand our choice would be Jimmy Barry, the great little Chicago boxer, who never scaled more than 105 pounds during his career and retired without ever suffering defeat.

Dixon Greatest Banty.

We find after careful thought on the bantam boys, that the prize for all-time champion should go to George Dixon, the famous Little Chocolate, who probably was the greatest fighter of his inches that ever pulled on a boxing glove. The great colored fighter never was any heavier than a bantam, but did not confine his efforts strictly to his class.

The little fellow was continually stepping out of his rank to battle with boys twice his size. Old-timers will recall his wonderful battles against such men as Cal McCarthy, Billy Plimmer, Pedlar Palmer, Young Griffo, Australian Billy Murphy, Tommy Warren, Tommy White, Frank Erne, Sal Hawkins, Eddy Santry, and other great fighters of his period.

Dixon's two fights against Cal McCarthy will never be forgotten, the first going seventy rounds to a draw, while the next time they started Dixon stopped the game McCarthy after twenty-two fierce rounds. Just glance at those names mentioned above and it is easy to appreciate the tough competition the little Negro had while he reigned at the top of the bantam crew.

McGovern Feather King.

The current crop of bantams are a very messy set, to be sure, but there is altogether too much juggling with the championship honors to settle on any one boy being the equal of Dixon.

Now we step along into the featherweight class and without much hesitancy we hit on Terry McGovern as the prince of the feathers past and present. What a fighter was that little Irishman from Brooklyn! His career was a short one, but there probably never lived another feather like McGovern. Ripping, tearing in every moment, and carrying the wallop of a heavyweight, Terence was the real terror they called him.

When he was at his best very few boys of his class could live in the same ring with him for more than half a dozen rounds. They used to say of him that he could hit an opponent on the elbow and knock him out. Like the great Dixon, he was in and out of his division at every opportunity, picking on the big boys and knocking them over with great regularity.

No Haggling Over Ounces.

We know that the boys are going to question the McGovern selection and ask why Abe Attel or some other boy representing that division was overlooked. It is not a case of overlooking; we think that Terry McGovern was the greatest featherweight that ever lived. It must be remembered that he fought the best men in the feather and lightweight classes, which included Frank Erne and the great Joe Gans, and it was not until he took that shot on the chin from Young Corbett in Hartford, that the great Terry retired from the picture. That blow finished Terry, but while he lasted he probably was the greatest hitter that the featherweight class has ever known.

Joe Gans Picked.

Joe Gans is our selection for the lightweight champion of all time. It is not that we are forgetting the wonders of Benny Leonard, but great as Benny is, we find that we are compelled to give the niche to the great colored man, Gans.

Think of the competition that Gans had to contend with when he was the

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

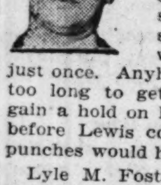
The Question.

What do you think of the proposed mixed wrestling-boxing contest between Strangler Lewis, wrestling champion, and Jack Dempsey, boxing champion?

Where Asked.

In Illinois Athletic club gymnasium, South Michigan avenue.

The Answers.

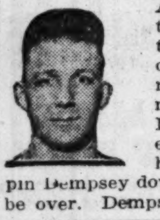


Charles A. Dean, 14 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago, manager—I think such a contest would be very much of a farce. Lewis wouldn't have a chance against Dempsey. I think all Dempsey would have to do would be to hit Lewis just once. Anyhow, it takes a wrestler too long to get started. He has to gain a hold on his opponent first, and before Lewis could get it Dempsey's punches would have him groggy.

Lyle M. Foster, 2045 McCormick building, traffic manager—Athletically speaking, I think a bout of this nature would be absurd. These great athletes labor in entirely different work, which would make a mixed wrestling-boxing bout a farce. It might be financially attractive, but scientifically it would be a failure.

John A. Breen, 5658 South Park avenue, business loans—I don't believe the proposed bout would be of public interest. These sports are different and require different methods. These famous men had better stay in their own line of endeavor. They are both expert, and a match of this kind would reflect on their distinctive abilities.

Fred Tomka, 661 Aldine avenue, assistant coach—It is belittling both sports to even attempt to bring these two men together, although it would be darned interesting. I think it would be unfair to match Dempsey against Lewis. Lewis is a big, heavy man, and if he got hold of Dempsey, Jack would have no chance to use his hands.



John Behr, athletic director, Illinois Athletic club—For one thing a bout of this type would draw a capacity crowd. If a rough and tumble match I think that Lewis would have the edge. All he would have to do would be to pin Dempsey down and the bout would be over. Dempsey can't wrestle.

CUTBILL BEATS RAY'S WORLD'S RECORD FOR THE 1,000 YARD RUN

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 18.—Hal Cutbill of the Boston A. A. broke the indoor and outdoor world records for the 1,000 yard run here tonight in the indoor games of the 174th regiment armory. Cutbills' time for the distance was 2:12. He started from scratch and passed a large field of handicap runners.

Cutbill held the former world's indoor record of 2:13 2-5. Joie Ray held the outdoor record of 2:12 2-5.

AL LEA SCORES 690; LEADS ALL-EVENTS

Toledo, O., March 18.—[Special.]—Al Lea of the Federal Markets of Chicago rolled into first place in the all events and third place in the singles as the feature performance last night at the tournament of the American Bowling congress.

He gathered in counts of 202, 232, and 256 for a 690 total in the singles. He rolled 534 in the teams event, and, mated with Stanley Kellogg in the doubles, toppled 662, while the pair got 1,232. His tournament efforts show a grand total of 1,886 for the all-events.

Secretary Abe Langtry of the American Bowling congress announced last night that the 1,101 game bowled Friday night by the Federal Markets of Chicago is a record for the twenty-two years of the congress.

There were many high counts in doubles today, among them being: R. Saple-K. Saple, Omaha, 1,231; W. Spain-G. Wessa, Pittsburgh, 1,228; E. Hesley-W. Goldammer, Chicago, 1,203; E. Votel-H. RECRUITS GIVE NO PROMISE OF HELPING TEAM

Doped to Finish Around Sixth Place.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

"KID" GLEASON.

Seguin, Tex., March 18.—[Special.]—Peering out along the big league trail that leads into next October, one can see nothing but setback on setback for Kid and what he salvaged from the wreck of the one time great White Sox machine. The few survivors are still here, probably as good as ever, but nothing new has come in, and if the pale legged athletes finish as well as sixth the venerable Kid will have performed his task well.

It didn't take more than a couple of days in camp for Gleason to see that he could expect nothing much from any of the youngsters gathered from near and far. Possibly at some future date one or two of the lads may bloom into a diamond great, but that offers no encouragement for a race about to start. The sole ray of hope is that a couple of the hurlers who have been nursed along for a year or more finally will come through.

Only Foundation to Slab Staff.

For a foundation on which to build a pitching staff Gleason has Red Faber and Dick Kerr, both ranking with the leaders in their line. Beyond this pair there are some fourteen hurlers hoping to set the world afire, but exactly half of these have as yet shown nothing. Even in the other half there are some doubtful ones, and when it comes time for the survival of the fittest it is a safe bet that only last year's men will stick.

Of the hangover mound talent Joubert Davenport, Roy Wilkinson, Douglas McWeeney, and Shovel Hodge are the best. Davenport was farmed out to Sioux City last season in the hope that he would learn to control his left handed foolers. He did fairly well, but might not act the same against big league hitters.

Russell May Make Good.

One lad who looks as if he might get somewhere in his big league quest is John ["Lefty"] Russell, a stocky athlete measuring 6 feet 1 inch. The Sox brought him in last fall from Sioux City, and in his first start he pitched a wonderful game. If that exhibition was any indication of his real worth, then Gleason will have a man who can toil regularly. Down here, however, he hasn't dazzled any one with his stuff.

The few other hurlers who may prove of some value are Charles Robertson, Jose Acosta, and G. V. Leverette. Robertson was first with the Sox in 1917, and since then has been in the minors trying to develop. Last season at Minneapolis he built up a reputation of being one of the best in the American association. Leverette is a Gary [Ind.] kid, who pitched at Fort Smith, Ark., in 1921. He has displayed promising symptoms, but, of course, has a lot to learn. Acosta is the Cuban who was with Washington last season and went to Connie Mack in the Dugan deal. Acosta never has been a whale of a pitcher.

Changes Unlikely.

In all the other positions there seems to be no prospect of changes from the 1921 lineup. A couple of youngsters who specialize in the outfield and infield may be retained, but so far none has given any indication of being able to earn a regular job very quickly.

There are two kids down here trying to do things at first base, but they haven't a chance to unseat Earl Sheely, whose only fault is lack of speed. For second base there isn't even any one around threatening Eddie Collins' reign. Ernie Johnston is just about as well off at short. Next to Collins he probably is the best all around infielder on the team. McClellan can outfield and outrun, but not outhit him. Johnston offsets some of his defects by baseball brains.

Mulligan to Stay at Third.

There is just a possibility of a new third baseman horning in, but one can feel safe in saying Eddie Mulligan will be there again. Mulligan is a long way from being a great player, but will have to do until a better man is found. McClellan would be more suitable if he could develop some hitting strength, and Red Ostergard would be a star if some gent could repair a left shoulder which goes on the bum frequently when the lad lifts his arms above his head.

It is reasonably certain that Bib Falk and Harry Hooper will hold down the left and right field posts. Falk, who is still a kid, should be a greatly improved player in view of his two years' experience, and Hooper will be able to maintain his stride of last season. Strunk and Mostil will have to take care of center field and the utility job.

Of four new infielders in the camp, Gleason favors a gent named Elmer Pence. Pence is a green cuss so far as baseball is concerned, but can be taught and there is a very good chance of his being given an opportunity to develop.

SOX SHOW PUNCH TO BEAT GIANTS IN NINTH, 8 TO 4

San Antonio, Tex., March 18.—[Special.]—Putting four singles together for as many runs, the White Sox broke a tie in the ninth inning today and defeated the Giants, 8 to 4.

Hervey McClellan was the particular star of the Sox. His home run over the left field fence in the fifth tied the score, and he belted Yaryan around from second in the ninth round with the tally that would have won.

John Russell was not effective in the second and third innings, when the Giants bunched seven hits and all their runs. Little Jose Acosta hurled the last four chapters in swell shape.

Johnny Mostil robbed Kelly of a triple in the eighth by going to the fence and taking a fly with one hand.

The Sox scored in the first when Hooper walked and stole, made third on an out and cashed on Strunk's single. A double by Hooper in the third and sacrifices by McClellan and Collins brought another. McClellan drove the ball over the left field fence in the fifth. Then in the ninth Yaryan singled, Hooper walked, McClellan, Collins and Strunk singled, the net proceeds being four. Score:

CUBS, 7; VERNON, 3

Los Angeles, Cal., March 18.—[Special.]—The Cubs, playing another errorless game, handed Vernon a 7 to 3 beating today. The majors' work sparkled, and the pitching of Martin and Cheeves was high class. Only four hits were made off them, Cheeves allowing one in five rounds. Vernon got a walk, a double, and a homer in the third, round, which accounted for all its scores.

The second inning was a corker for the Cubs. Hollocher cleaned the bases with a rousing double after two had scored. In the third Barber walked, advanced on a wild pitch, and scored on Wirt's infield hit. Miller counted in the fifth, when he doubled, and Barber and Klugmann singled.

With Klugmann doing finely at second and Friberg starring at the same place yesterday, Manager Killefer felt considerably relieved today. He hopes one of the pair will develop into a regular. Hollocher is in great form.

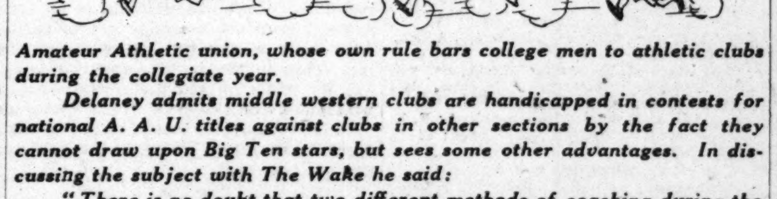
IN the WAKE of the NEWS

ATHLETIC CLUBS AND COLLEGES.

MARTIN A. DELANEY, former athletic director of the Chicago Athletic association and now its business manager, is one athletic club man who does not resent the Big Ten conference rule which forbids college athletes representing outside organizations during their collegiate career, either winter or summer.

Most critics of the rule think collegians should be allowed outside participation during the summer for the experience they would gain. Such practice is permitted by eastern and Pacific coast colleges and sanctioned by the Amateur Athletic union, whose own rule bars college men to athletic clubs during the collegiate year.



Delaney admits middle western clubs are handicapped in contests for national A. A. U. titles against clubs in other sections by the fact they cannot draw upon Big Ten stars, but sees some other advantages. In discussing the subject with The Wake he said:

"There is no doubt that two different methods of coaching during the same season would not be to the best interests of college track men. If we could use these men during the summer we would pick the stars and use them for the points they could win for us in national meets without attempting to change their form. The very fact that we cannot causes us to hold our old men longer and better instead of yielding to the temptation of taking boys in active training. That has proved an advantage, for our regulars are subject to call the entire year and have been remarkably loyal in responding.

"Of course, when we develop a junior athlete and he enters a Big Ten college we lose his services for four years. That perhaps seems unfair, as the boy is the son of a member who would like to see him wear the Cherry Circle. I do not entirely approve the summer part of the rule, but I concede to colleges the right to draw their own rules.

"Two Big Ten colleges follow practically the same coaching system as we do. I can see, however, other coaches might object to athletic clubs attempting to change the form of men where the coaching systems were not the same. I would not want another coach to make over any of our men. Many track athletes have failed to show their real ability through faulty or incompetent instruction."

And calmly accept what the showdown brings,
And, though my final chip takes wings,
I do not yield to despair.
I'll bust the pot with two tiny J's;
If it's bumped I'll bravely meet the raise,
But I drop, though ev'ry body stays,
When I catch two little pair.

If I've sixes up, I ditch my hand
With all the haste at my command;
The others cannot understand,
They say my brain is rare.
I do not attempt to explain the act,
Nor claim the method to be exact,
It's stated merely as a fact—
I cannot better two pair.

OAK PARK FIVE DOWNS AUSTIN FOR TITLE, 20-15

Displaying a great passing attack and strong defense, Coach H. R. Bunce's Oak Park basketball team, Suburban league champion, last night won the Cook county high school title by defeating Austin, Chicago league title holder, 20 to 15, at the Oak Park gym. Austin put up a stubborn fight, but was forced, by tight guarding, to make long shots.

Capt. Eddie Robinson, playing his last game at Oak Park, led the scoring with two baskets and eight free throws. Black was Austin's best scorer, with two baskets and two free throws. Three thousand fans crowded the gym and it was estimated that another 500 were turned away. Lineup:

CENTRALIA FIVE WINS STATE TITLE

Urbana, Ill., March 18.—[Special.]—Centralia won the championship in the state high school basketball tournament here tonight by defeating Atwood, 24 to 16, in the final game at University of Illinois gym. Rockford took third place by defeating Peoria, 45 to 26. Centralia and Atwood ended the first quarter, 5 to 5, and the half 12 to 12, but in the third quarter Centralia guarded closely and with three baskets in a row took the winning lead, 19 to 14. The diminutive Cox was the stellar player. Lineup:

CHARLES BROOKINS

The evenly balanced team of Illinois, capably coached by Harry Gill, romped away with honors in the twelfth annual indoor track and field games of the Western conference in Patten gymnasium, Evanston, last night, by scoring 44 6-7 points. Wisconsin was second with 18 11-21 points and Ohio State third with 8½ points.

Not alone did Orange and Blue athletes score in every event, but the two records which went by the board were smashed by them. In practically every contest some Illini was near the front and battling for one of the leading positions.

Wharton Sets Two Mile Mark.

The first record to go by the boards was in the two mile run, when R. E. Wharton of Illinois crossed the line an easy winner in the fast time of 9:41 4-5. This broke the former mark of 9:43 4-5, made by A. H. Mason of Illinois, 1916. The downstate athlete ran a beautiful race and finished with a burst of speed which carried him over the line a winner over his teammates, Swanson and Scott.

Furnas of Purdue was partially responsible for the record. He was near the front most of the distance and took the lead around the ten lap track at a merry clip for the last quarter mile. His main object was to lose Wharton, so the latter would be unable to sprint on the last lap. Wharton, however, had plenty in reserve, and not only passed Furnas on the last circuit, but pulled his teammates into second and thrid places while Furnas had to be content with fourth.

Yates Clips 880 Mark.

Capt. H. N. Yates of the victorious team then came along and clipped the half mile record. The leader of Gill's team stepped the distance in 1:58 2-5, which beat the former mark of 1:59 made by D. E. Brown of Illinois in 1920. Noll of Iowa, who had defeated the Illinois leader in a dual meet indoors, set a dizzy pace from the start of the race. In fact, he went out and ran his race in the first quarter mile, and in the final stages faded away.

In the 50 yard dash Ayres of Illinois, Brookins of Iowa, and Moorehead of Ohio State tied the conference record of :05 2-5. This record is held jointly by four other sprinters. Brookins of the Hawkeye institution won the event after a blanket finish with Ayres.

Pole Vault Stars Tie.

As expected, the pole vault resulted in an interesting duel between Merrick of Wisconsin and Landowski of Michigan. This pair of sterling vaulters cleared each succeeding height until the bar rested at 12 feet 6 inches. Each took three trials at the height and failed by the narrowest kind of margins. As a result they will have to await the outdoor season to finish their argument.

This pair of vaulters tied for honors in the same event at the Illinois indoor relays.

Osborne of Illinois took the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 2½ inches, while Platten of Wisconsin, who was expected to give the Urbana crack an argument, had to be content with a tie for second place with Moorehead of Ohio State.

Spetz Leads in Scoring.

Individual honors went to Ralph Spetz of Wisconsin, who scored 6 points. The Badger sprinter won the 440 yard run and was fourth in the fifty yard dash. Wickoff of Ohio State placed in two events and scored 4 points, while other performers scored 5 points offered for first places.

Because of the conference rules which do not permit the jumping off of ties, it was necessary to figure the points in fractions. The crowd was kept busy awarding places in the point column.

The event was seen by a large crowd, but the superiority of Illinois was demonstrated with every event. Summaries:

AMES GRAPPLERS WIN

Madison, Wis., March 18.—[Special.]—In the individual championship wrestling meet of the middle western indoor conference tonight, Ames took first honors, placing four out of five entries. The Iowa State collegians gained three decisions and battled to a draw in one bout. The heavyweight class was too much for them, however, Spencer, the Purdue giant, scoring the only fall of the finals over Zink of Ames in ten minutes. Spencer's great advantage in weight gave Zink scarcely a chance.

Troutman of Nebraska gained a decision over Sarpolius of Chicago, who outweighed him considerably in the 175 pound class. The Cornhusker showed some clever wrestling and was fast enough to keep the Maroon down long enough for a victory. In the last part of the bout Sarpolius' hip went out of joint. Vana of Iowa and Loucks of Ames staged an aggressive match in the 125 pound event, battling to a draw. They flipped a coin for first medal, Vana winning the toss. Summaries:

GAMBLING POOL BASED ON CHANGE IN THERMOMETER

St. Louis, Mo., March 18.—Police today announced they had discovered the existence here of a gambling pool based upon weather temperatures with the confiscation of 1,000 tickets which were found in the possession of William Gardner, a salesman, who is under arrest.

The tickets were priced at 25 cents and 50 cents and the prizes for winning numbers ranged from $1 to $2,000, according to the police, who said the lucky numbers were determined by taking the last numbers of a few selected temperature readings. Gardner's arrest followed the delivery by him of tickets to a patrolman in plain clothes.

This is the second alleged lottery unearthed here since yesterday when the police announced that operation of a nation-wide baseball pool, with headquarters in Cleveland, was uncovered.

BY FRED G. YOUNG.
["Big Ten" Basketball Official.]

As basketball advances by leaps and bounds among the colleges of the west, the task of deciding the realtive merits of the varicomes more and more onerous. However, it is a decidedly easy proposition, compared with that of selecting the leading individuals. True, there are a select few who stand head and shoulders above the general run of players, but of that class the season of 1921-'22 produced a precious small coterie.

Narrowed down to the smallest possible limits, the competition for the choice of best individual player the season of 1922 produced would rest between Capt. Charles W. Carney of Illinois, Gullion, Purdue's sophomore sensation, and Capt. Shimek of Iowa, who wound up his career as a college athlete with a remarkable season. Carney's experience and basketball brains would probably entitle him to first place, with Shimek a close second.

Three Crackerjack Forwards.

In making the all-star selections from among the players of the last season, the critic is confronted with added difficulty, because of an unusual tendency on the part of coaches to use their stars in more than one position. Some of the leading players were used as forwards, center and guards. However, thc selection of the two forwards is narrowed down to three men, Carney of Illinois, Miller of Michigan and Taylor of Wisconsin generally being rated the three best forwards in the conference.

Carney is the best of the lot, a wonderful basketball machine in himself, a power that could not be stopped although the cunning of every coach and guard in the conference was pitted against him. He is made captain because he is believed to be the smartest basketball player in the "Big Ten."

Miller Natural Player.

W. Miller of Michigan is picked as Carney's teammate, although only the superior of Taylor in one or two departments. The Maize and Blue forward is, the best foul-thrower in the league, a natural basketball player in every sense of the word, and gets the place only because he made a larger percentage of his shots than Taylor, who is a valuable man, and wound up his third year in whirlwind style. If there were three places Taylor would get the place as third man.

Other good forwards are Eversman and Masters of Purdue, both of whom showed remarkable improvement under Coach Lambert's able tutoring; Dudley of Ohio state, Romney of Chicago, who was used successfully at both guard and forward; Severinson of Minnesota, Dickson of Chicago, who improved as the season progressed, Kipke of Michigan, and Ceasar of Wisconsin. Beard and Blair of Ohio state were two other players who might have made a name for themselves had they been able to have played all year. The former started out at a great pace but was forced to give up the sport because of heart trouble.

Gullion Wins Center Post.

Of the centers Gullion of Purdue and Ely of Michigan were easily the class of the men playing this position. The former gets first place only by a shade over Ely, who is a great all around performer and who is a better defensive player than the Boilermaker, but hardly up to his standard as a scoring machine. Gullion scored thirty-six baskets in nine conference games and was the chief factor in Purdue winning the championship aside from Lambert's able tutoring. Gullion was certainly a wonder in caging goals.

Burgitt of Iowa gets the position on the third team. He made a great record in his first year in the conference and should be one of the best in the league next year. Other good centers were Halladay and Yardley of Chicago, Hanson of Minnesota, and Roettger of Illinois, who was forced out of the game in January by a broken wrist, creating a vacancy that was hard to fill, following as it did on the heels of Walquist's disqualification.

Shimek Best of Guards.

The problem of selecting the two best guards is probably the toughest job of all, although most of the critics and coaches will give first place to Shimek of Iowa, who enjoyed an unusually successful season, and Ray Miller of Purdue, one of the few good back guards in the conference. Tebell of Wisconsin was Miller's superior in some ways, but his size keeps him off the first team, although he is an untiring worker and fighter and a man whose team spirit would be welcomed by any coach in the country. Tebell should be a wonder next year.

Rollie Williams of Wisconsin, probably the most colorful figure in the entire conference, is picked as utility man for the first five. A wonderful dribbler, a real scrapper, he could fit into any combination. Shimek has the call on him only in basket shooting, the Hawkeye having been the spark plug of the Iowa machine.

Sabo a Good Guard.

Another brilliant performer who is left off the first team only because there are not enough places to go around is Sabo of Illinois, a beautiful dribbler, an earnest worker, and a good basket shooter.

Other sterling guards were Hultkrans and Kearney of Minnesota, McGuire of Chicago, Hicks of Iowa, Collins of Illinois, Birks and Cappon of Michigan.

HERE ARE ALL-STARS OF "BIG TEN" BASKETBALL

RAY MILLER, Purdue.

"CHUCK" CARNEY, Illinois.

FRANK J. SHIMEK, Iowa.

17 SPORTS PLAYED BY COLLEGIANS

Directors of intramural athletic activities in the western conference universities met yesterday at the Auditorium hotel for general discussion of student sports. The main trend of the discussion was to corrolate with intercollegiate athletics.

An average number of seventeen sports, divided into major and minor divisions, are engaged in by the students each year. Grant Ward of Ohio State was general chairman and E. D. Mitchell of Michigan secretary.

ACADEMIES SEEK JUNE MEET HERE

Alonzo A. Stagg, supervisor of athletics at the University of Chicago, will be asked to hold in conjunction with his intercollegiate meet June 3 an interscholastic meet for the schools in the North Central Academic association, it was announced at the meeting of that body at the Hotel La Salle yesterday. This action, it is said, presages a general trend toward greater athletic activities in the smaller colleges, to the end that promising material may be seen by visiting coaches at the meet.

Woods and Waters

by BOB. BECKER

SOME DOPE ON FISHING ROD HISTORY.

WHEN a fellow can step into a sporting goods store and in a few minutes be the owner (if he has the cash) of a beautiful American made split bamboo bait or fly casting rod, the very acme of perfection, he can hardly realize that it is only within recent years that rods of American manufacture have been considered about the best on the market. For many years, yes, for several centuries, the best fishing tools were made across the big pond and then it was a case of all wood poles, as hickory, ash, lancewood, washaba, and greenheart have been the favorite materials of English rodmakers. And they sure do know how to work these woods, too, although the finished product (according to the judgment of most American anglers) can hardly be compared to the best American, hexagonal bamboo rods for pep, resiliency and easy handling.

One of the stunts that the English rod makers have been working on for some time in the manufacture of their cane rods is the putting of a small steel core in them. The result was a mighty powerful rod but more weight was added and the action of it was not speeded up any, as the tendency of the steel is to make the pole somewhat pepless and logy.

In the United States the fishing game has gone through the period of making poles out of solid wood and has finally arrived at the point where bamboo is sweeping the boards as the most popular material in rod making. But originally and for many years the anglers swung all wood poles made of such materials as hickory, greenheart, washaba, or bethabara, snakewood, ash and lancewood in combination, dagama, bamboo and others. Some of these woods make pretty fair fishing tools, too. As for the idea of putting steel centers in cane rods, American manufacturers have never taken up this practice to any extent. Instead they have been very much on the job in working bamboo, sticking to this material almost exclusively and incidentally turning out bait and fly rods that have compelled the admiration of the fishing world. There is no getting away from it, six strip bamboo is the most popular and widely used rod material in this country today, and gosh, how the fishing fans do make the rod manufacturers work! It seems as if they cannot turn out rods fast enough.

This widespread use of bamboo both for bait rods as well as for fly rods, has certainly done one thing to the fishing game in America. It has set a new style or, rather, a new standard in bait casting. Gone are the long, unwieldy poles of eight or nine foot lengths which were required to handle some of the heavy lures. In their place we have short, whippy, beautiful little bamboo poles.

* *

Yes, sir, the bamboo has sure put a new wrinkle in the bait casting game and along with this increased use of cane poles has arrived the day of the small, light artificial lure, for which many an angler is giving thanks.

LOCAL GOLF

OFFICIAL recognition of golf by the Big Ten conference will be welcomed by the collegian golfers. The eastern intercollegiate tournaments which have been played for nearly twenty years have been the stepping stone to greater honors, and the Big Ten event, now that it is official, should take rank with the eastern tournament.

HAGEN, WITH 290, TAKES FLORIDA OPEN GOLF TITLE

Belleair Heights, Fla., March 18.—[Special.]—Walter Hagen won the west coast of Florida open golf championship today when he played two rounds of brilliant golf, a 70 and 72, which overcame the lead of five strokes held by George Smith of Cincinnati at the beginning of the day's play. Hagen finished with 290 for the seventy-two holes. Smith and Bob MacDonald of Chicago were tied for second place at 292.

Hagen's 70 in the morning and Bob MacDonald's 70 in the afternoon were the best scores of the day.

SCHAEFER IS EVEN BET TO BEAT HOPPE AT CUE

BY JOE DAVIS.

For the next six days Champion Jake Schaefer and Willie Hoppe, his challenger, will practice strenuously for their match for the world's 18.2 balkline championship which will start March 27 at Orchestra hall.

Hoppe, who is working with Charley Peterson at St. Louis, is going as well as ever, and last week scored a run of 434, which gave him an average of 200 for the day's play. Hoppe will come to Chicago on Saturday.

Schaefer, who has been at West Baden Springs, playing golf in the morning and billiards in the afternoon and night, will return to Chicago tomorrow and finish practice here.

Schaefer Picked to Win.

Around the local rooms there is a lot of speculation as to the outcome. It is realized that the length of the match, 1,500 points, eliminates the matter of luck to a large extent, and that in the three nights' play the "breaks" should be about even.

Two years ago Hoppe would have been a universal favorite, but when Jake defeated him twice in succession in the tournament last year at the Congress hotel he gained a great following, and among these are several men who are recognized authorities on the game.

Many Back Schaefer.

Indications are there will be a large amount of money wagered in all of the billiard centers of the country, and young Jake will have plenty of backers.

Advance application for tickets indicates a full house, and arrangements have been made to seat 1,800 spectators.

The race for the William J. Blake trophy in the Chicago Billiard league seems to rest between Kieckhefer and Moreau, each having seven games to play. The next six players are so closely bunched that none is sure of a place in the first division. Standing of the players:

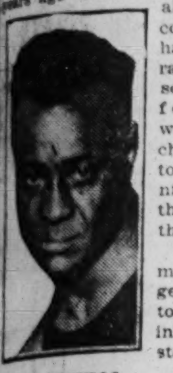
POOR STABLE BOY TO STAR OF RING, STORY OF WILLS

BY BOB ROHDE.



HARRY WILLS.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

New York, March 18.—Not so many years ago—fourteen years ago, to be almost exact—a colored boy, who had followed the races for several seasons without forgetting he was a son of church folks, used to offer up a nightly prayer that went something like this:

"Lord, don't let me grow any bigger. But if I got to keep on growin'—O, Lord, don't stop half way!"

Harry Wills didn't stop growing. He put on inches and weight until his dream of some day being a world famous jockey went glimmering. He grew upward to a shade above 6-foot-2 and outward until he had passed the 200 pound mark—and today fight fans the country over regard him as the one logical candidate to dispute Jack Dempsey's claim to the heavyweight championship of the world.

Wills No Man's Setup.

Certainly Wills is no man's setup. Wherever and whenever he has fought he has been in the ring to win. Twice the eminent Sam Langford knocked him out. But Wills and Langford have met no less than nineteen other times before, between, and since the knockouts aforesaid, and Wills has proved himself unquestionably the better man.

Wills doesn't fight for glory, and between fights he hasn't been in the habit of resting on his laurels. Up in Harlem there's a flat that costs just so much every week to keep going, and a Mrs. Harry Wills is there enshrined. When fights come close enough together to keep the landlord and grocer paid—as of late they have been coming—Wills devotes himself exclusively to training and fighting.

Student of Anatomy.

What book learning Wills has he acquired before he reached simultaneously the age of 11 and the decision to get a job around horses. In recent years he has been reading up, but always along one particular line. The science of anatomy is his hobby.

Wills has a sense of humor, too, as he demonstrated in this wise when an attempt was made to inveigle him into a discussion of Langford's knockout blows from the anatomical viewpoint: "Where he hit me? Listen, you gotta ask somebody that saw it. I wasn't there."

Wills says he never took a drink nor smoked a cigaret in his life. An occasional cigar and theater going are his only dissipations. Although he was born a Roman Catholic, he is to be seen almost every Sunday sitting beside his wife in St. Christopher's Methodist church.

Favors St. Christopher's.

"All churches are good places," he says. "But St. Christopher's is one I sort of figure I owe a lot to."

Why? Well, when Wills first came to New York seven years ago the élite of the Harlem black belt, as represented in St. Christopher's congregation, were arranging their grand annual Sunday school excursion. An acquaintance invited Harry to make the trip.

On the boat Wills met Sarah Perkins, a girl as old fashioned as her name. For months Wills concealed from Sarah the fact he was a fighter. He wasn't quite sure she'd approve of his "business." Except for that he'd have asked her a certain question he'd been turning over in his mind.

The situation solved itself quite simply. Along in early 1916 Sarah noticed a sporting page paragraph about a prize fighter named Harry Wills. When next she saw him she demanded to know if her Harry and that Harry were the same person. And when Harry admitted it and reached for his hat, it turned out she didn't mind a bit.

Becomes Mrs. Wills.

A few days later Sarah Perkins became Mrs. Harry Wills. Now she's mistress of a comfortable flat in an elevator apartment building at 121 West 141st street—and her prestige in St. Christopher's hasn't suffered one whit!

When the United States entered the war Wills went to a recruiting office and tried to enlist. A broken rib and sundry other fractures incurred in his career of combat barred him. Shipyard workers at that time were in about as much demand as soldiers. Wills, determined to do his bit, got a job in the Shooters' island plant as a riveter.

The job lasted only a few weeks. Then a sarcastic foreman made a remark concerning shipyards and draft dodgers—referring especially to gigantic draft dodgers not white skinned. Straightaway Wills produced his draft card, which showed him in the 4A classification.

"They can have me if they'll take me, because I'm quittin' here right now," he said. "Let's see you do the same."

Works as Stevedore.

There was plenty of benefit boxing to be done at that time, and Wills did a noble share of it, but the fight game proper was slow.

There wasn't enough money in it to keep that Harlem cupboard filled with groceries, so Wills hied him to the port of embarkation over the river and got work as a stevedore. There he remained until June, 1919. Another longshore job saw Wills working as watchman on a Pennsylvania railroad pier at $5.50 a day.

As a youngster in New Orleans Wills had a love of horses which translated itself into a habit of borrowing white folks' mounts. The owner of a livery stable in Carondolet street, who had suffered more or less through this propensity, had a horse that was a veritable Geronimo of equine outlaws. He saddled this direful steed, hitched him outside the stable, and waited for young Wills.

Presently Harry, then 11, came whistling along. He saw the horse, temptingly unguarded, and after a swift glance about climbed into the saddle.

Outlaw and pickaninny passed out of the picture swiftly, in a dust cloud. An hour passed before the liveryman saw his mean horse again. He was flecked, but trotting gently. The small black boy had "busted" him—and had won himself a fine livery stable job.

From the stable Wills gravitated to the track. He rode until, as he says, his size ran away with him. Becoming at 16 even too heavy for steeplechasing, he shipped on a steamship bound for Bombay with a cargo of mules. After that voyage young Wills made several short voyages on gulf craft, between times working on the dock and meeting ham and eggers in occasional preliminary bouts.

Harry's opponent in his first fight of consequence was Nat Dewey, who had come to New Orleans from Cheyenne to meet Johnny Thoulmer, colored heavyweight champion of the south. Thoulmer was taken ill the day before the bout and Wills was substituted for him. He got the decision over Dewey in a ten round go, found himself richer by $150, and thereupon made up his mind that he'd continue a fighter.

It wasn't until four months had passed, though, that Wills got another match with real money in it. Then he met Kid Cotton, who weighed more than 200 pounds and had been Jack Johnson's sparring partner. Wills, whose own weight was only 165 in those days, knocked Cotton out in the third round. This was in 1912. A few months later, after he had won decisions over one Roughhouse Ware and Jeff Clark, the Fighting Ghost, Wills was matched with Sam Langford. He surprised all concerned by getting the decision.

Knocked Out by Langford.

The next meeting of Wills and Langford was on the Pacific coast. In the first four rounds Harry knocked Langford down nine times. It was in the fourteenth round that Wills was dropped for the count, with six rounds more to go.

Game Wills was then, and game he is now. He fights with an impersonal fury, but outside business hours he is the soul of good nature. He is as fast as he is strong, and is an excellent ring strategist. His bent for the science of the game is attested in his tireless fireside anatomical researcher. You need not go far back in his record to find a list of thirty-eight straight knockouts, executed on the Pacific coast. He whipped big Fred Fulton when the odds were 3½ to 1 against him, and he put Kid Norfolk to sleep in the Garden with a jab that picked up its forty mule power while traveling only six inches.

But Wills, nevertheless, isn't boasting what he could do to Dempsey, or what he would do were that color line wiped out.

MIKE GIBBONS TELLS TOMMY WHY HE LOST: "TOO USED TO HAMS"

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 18.—Tommy Gibbons was "too slow" in his recent bout with Harry Greb at New York, in the opinion of his brother, Mike Gibbons.

"I feel sorry for Tom," Mike was quoted, "but it was his own fault. He thought he could hit, and he knocked out a couple dozen big, slow fellows, which got him quite a standing in the pugilistic world, but it ruined him as a boxer.

"When training to fight a fellow of the Greb type he should have trained for speed with fast boxers. Instead of that, he worked out with big 'hams' and was always practicing knockout punches. The fact is, Tom cannot hit any harder now than he ever could, but he has been boxing big, slow fellows that generally would rather quit than go the distance."

RACQUETS CHAMP DEFEATS BOAKES IN HARD CONTEST

After spotting Harry Boakes Jr. of the University club four aces in each game, Jock Soutar of the Philadelphia Racquets and Tennis club, world's champion, defeated the local expert yesterday on the local club's courts three out of five games, 11—15, 15—12, 15—11, 9—15 and 15—6.

In the first four games, the champion had a hard time with the local expert. Boakes' service was almost perfect, but in the deciding contest he lost control, and the champion won game and match handily. Spectacular rallies featured the struggle, which was seen by a large crowd.

Eagan Wins Harvard's Heavyweight Boxing Title

Cambridge, Mass., March 18.—Eddie Eagan, amateur light heavyweight champion boxer, at the 1920 Olympic games, and former Yale champion, won the Harvard heavyweight championship last night, when his bout with Howard Townsend was stopped in the first round.

All-Star Champs of All Time in Boxing Picked by Newman

lightweight champion. How about such fighters as Dal Hawkins, Frank Erne, Elbows McFadden, Kid McPartland, Spike Sullivan and Joe Walcott against the present day crop of lightweights?

How many lightweights today do you suppose could last more than a round against the dynamic Joe Walcott? Joe Gans did, and beat the gorilla scrapper.

Battling Nelson made the great Gans reduce himself to the point of death before he would consent to fight him, and the great lightweight lost.

Tommy Ryan Welter Choice.

In scanning the welters we find a great collection of fighters, but Tommy Ryan, the Syracuse boy, is our choice for the top position. What a whale of a crew used to kick around in that tough class. There were Ryan, Mysterious Billy Smith, Danny Needham, Joe Walcott—when he wasn't fighting the heavies—Tommy West and a score of others equally as tough.

Ryan had everything to make him the great fighter that he was. In selecting him against Jack Britton, the welter champ of today, we are inclined to Ryan because he had the sock and was just as clever as Britton. Then, like Gans, he had tougher competition than Britton ever had. As a matter of fact, most of Britton's battles have been against one man, while Ryan had to fight the roughest mob ever assembled, and most of those quarrels were along the twenty-five round routes, and in most cases to a finish.

Ketchel Greatest Middleweight.

Stanley Ketchel, the Michigan assassin, who was killed a few years ago, is our choice as the greatest middleweight fighter. Old Steve was a sweet socker, if ever there was one. Not clever, to be sure, but what did it matter with him about his cleverness? Once he landed it was usually curtains for the show.

Didn't Philadelphia Jack O'Brien cut him to pieces for nine rounds in a ten round jam? And didn't Steve have old Jack on the floor, dead to the world, four seconds before the end of one of the greatest fights ever seen in a prize ring? While Ketchel lasted he was too much for the middleweights, and he had to step out and fight the heavyweight boys.

Ketchel's fights against Billy Papke and Joe Thomas will go down in boxing history as the greatest fights ever. Great as was the original Jack Dempsey when he was champion of the middleweight boys, we think that Stanley Ketchel is entitled to first honors as the greatest of them all.

Must Give Fitz Place.

Now for the light heavyweight fighters, and no list of all time champions would be complete without including the great Bob Fitzsimmons. We purposely kept Old Freckles out of the middleweight discussion, although he was the champion in that class at one time. Bob was essentially a light heavyweight, although he held the heavyweight honors and probably was one of the greatest fighters that ever held the title in that division.

Bob Fitzsimmons must be included in this list. We appreciate that there are those who entertain the belief that Fitzsimmons was the greatest fighter of all time, but inasmuch as Robert is not our choice as king of the heavyweights, we are installing him as the greatest light heavyweight boxer of all time.

Jeffries Best Big 'Un.

For the heavyweight rung we have selected Jim Jeffries. In making this selection we wavered between the big boilermaker and Jack Dempsey. While we believe that Jack Dempsey has the speed of a Corbett, the hitting ability of Fitzsimmons, and the endurance of a Jeffries, he never has had the opportunity to prove it as yet, while Jeffries had to prove everything he ever had.

Think of the men that Jeffries had to beat. The list included the great Fitzsimmons, the rugged Sharkey, the giant Gus Ruhlin, the clever Jim Corbett, and the great Peter Jackson, and in most cases he had to turn the trick twice to prove his superiority among that big field. No pygmies or setups for Jeffries. No undersized Carpentiers or chicken hearted Fultons in that collection.

Wreck When Beaten by Johnson.

Jeffries as a mere recruit went in and beat the great Fitzsimmons, and repeated the dose a year later, although nearly killed by Fitz before he got over the crusher. Jeff had everything—speed, awkward cleverness and great hitting ability. He was a wreck when beaten by Jack Johnson, but in his day Jim Jeffries, in our opinion, was the greatest heavyweight that ever lived.

INJURED BOXER DESERTED, CLAIM

Omaha, Neb., March 18.—[Special.]—Testimony before a coroner's jury today was to the effect that after Charles Havlicek, 18 year old boxer known as "Terry O'Mallory," had been injured fatally and been carried to his dressing room and laid on the floor, last night, his physician went back to see the second preliminary fight, leaving a medical student in charge. The boy died in twenty minutes, but the main event was held with him lying dead on the floor.

The coroner's jury late today recommended the release of Ray Carter, Sioux City boxer, who struck the blow that felled Havlicek.

Doctors declared death due to concussion of the brain when Havlicek's head struck the floor.

Joseph Havlicek, brother of the dead fighter, charged the neglect in caring for the injured man and named Dr. M. J. Ford, official physician.

KELLY-TAYLOR BOUT PROMISES HOT RING TUSSLE

BUD TAYLOR.

Anticipating one of the best mills seen near Chicago this winter, local fight fans are making plans to see the ten round bout between Jimmy Kelly, west side Italian bantamweight, and Bud Taylor of Terre Haute at Kenosha Wednesday night.

Ever since Kelly scored a technical knockout over the Hoosier, aboard the Commodore, a month ago, fans have been at odds over the relative merits of the two boxers. Some claim Kelly fouled Taylor after taking a beating in the first round. Others maintain Taylor was unable to stand the body smashing received in the second and third rounds.

Both Boxers Fit.

It was an unsatisfactory ending of what should have been a good fight. The fighters and their managers wanted a return match, with the result John Wagner will conduct the contest where boxing is legalized. Walter H. Liginger, secretary of the Wisconsin state boxing commission, will detail one of his best referees to handle the contest.

Liginger was in town yesterday and pronounced the boxers fit. They have agreed to make 118 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the mill.

Schaeffer-Mandell Go.

Herbie Schaeffer, who held Bud Taylor to a draw on the Commodore recently, will meet Joe Mandell of Rockford in the eight round opener. Billy Kautz and Matty Smith, Racine lightweights, will meet in the ten round semi-windup.

Indications point to a capacity crowd. Tickets are on sale at 129 North Dearborn street and 153 North Clark street. A special train will leave the Northwestern terminal at 6:40 o'clock on the evening of the show.

KRONE MAT SHOW TO TURN UP FOE FOR JOHN PESEK

Doc Krone, local wrestling promoter, is determined to continue his elimination mat contests until he has cut down the heavyweight field to a fit opponent for Ed (Strangler) Lewis.

Krone's show Thursday night at the Ashland Boulevard Auditorium will bring out three giants of the mat who should make fit opponents for John Pesek, who some people think is a logical contender for Lewis' title.

The main event of Thursday night's show is between Jack Linow and Jim Londas. They will go fifteen rounds or less. They recently put on a speedy six round affair.

The other half of the double windup will be between William Demetral and Giovanni Mazzan and the opener between John Freberg and George Kotsonaros. The Demetral-Mazzan go is a ten round affair and the opener a six.

The city athletic commission will be asked to pick the best man of the night's bouts and he will be sent against Pesek in a later show.

Krone says there is great interest in Thursday's bill and bases his claim on the advance sale of tickets at Al Bloom's.

SOCCER PLAYERS TO BE BUSY TODAY IN LEAGUE PLAY

Local soccer men will have a busy afternoon, four games being carded in the Chicago Soccer league. The Olympia team, leaders in the race, will play at Harvey, while a double header is slated at Bricklayers' field, 35th street and Wentworth avenues, the Rangers opposing Swedish-Americans at 1:30 and Bricklayers playing Pullman at 3 o'clock.

The Thistles will meet the Canadian club at 47th avenue and 19th street at 3 o'clock.

The Sparta Union team will meet the Maple Leafs of the Chicago and District league at 19th street and 52d avenue at 3 o'clock.

A number of Chicago fans left for St. Louis last night to see the final for the national championship today between the Scullins and the Todd Shipyard team of Brooklyn.

Hold Meeting Tuesday to Form Postoffice League

Louisville, Ky., March 18.—The winter book, that medium of recording expert opinion regarding chances of prospective Kentucky Derby candidates, which is awaited eagerly each year by lovers of the thoroughbred, has blossomed forth under the stimulus of an early spring. Its edict as to the favorite was in keeping with the opinion of the poorly informed. Benjamin Block's unbeaten Morvich is the favorite. There could be no other. MEYERS AGREES TO TERMS FOR PARCAUT BOUT

JOHNNY MEYERS.

Following a week's wrangling over terms Johnny Meyers, claimant of the middleweight championship, and Ralph Parcaut of Mason City, Ia., will wrestle for the 160 pound title in the main event of the wrestling show to be staged by Jim Mullen at the Coliseum on April 3. The champion and the challenger will wrestle twelve rounds to a fall or decision and the weight will be 160 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the bout.

The match was sealed yesterday after a compromise between Mullen and Ed White, manager of Meyers. Unless the promoter can arrange with Parcaut to meet Johnny on a winner take all basis or a winner and loser's end the promoter must guarantee Meyers 30 per cent of the receipts. Mullen originally offered Meyers 25 per cent, the same as Parcaut. It now is up to Mullen to have Parcaut agree to the terms suggested by White or lose 5 per cent of the receipts.

Has Thrown Meyers.

It may be interesting to mat fans to know that Parcaut defeated Meyers nearly two years ago. It was a technical victory, however, but the fact that Parcaut actually threw Meyers and made Johnny forfeit the third and deciding fall is enough to show the Hawkeye wrestler knows something about the game.

Meyers and Parcaut met in Mason City on Aug. 25, 1920. Frank Ryan of Mason City was referee. Meyers won the first fall with a head scissors and wrist lock. In the second fall he began to show signs of distress and after ten minutes had trouble with his eyes. Parcaut noticed Johnny's weakness, sneaked behind and clamped on a toe hold which resulted in a fall.

Suffering from Eye Trouble.

Despite urging of his manager and physicians at the ringside Meyers went back for the third fall. He was unable to see his opponent and frequently caught the referee in his arms in his efforts to locate Parcaut. Finally Manager Ed White threw a towel into the ring. At the time Meyers was suffering with a severe case of tracoma.

BURMAN, SMITH BOUT TOMORROW SET FOR NEW YK.

New York, March 18.—[Special.]—Midget Smith, the tiny slugger from Harlem, and Joe Burman of Chicago are all primed for their twelve round shindy in Madison Square garden Monday night. They have had three previous meetings, every one of which bristled with pep, two of which by general consent were figured slight victories for the midget.

To the winner of Monday night's bout will go a possible chance at Johnny Buff and his championship crown.

Charlie White, the Chicago boxer, in explaining his poor showing against Johnny Dundee in the Garden last Friday, said he injured both hands in the early rounds and was handicapped severely the rest of the journey.

White will stay here until next Tuesday when he will leave for his home in Chicago.

WHEAT MARKET ERRATIC; CLOSES WITH NET GAINS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat market was unsettled, and while there was a strong bulge at one time general evening up toward the last made a sharp reaction from the top, with the finish on a quick recovery with net gains of ⅝@2c, July leading. Corn acted heavy and closed ⅝@¾c lower, while oats were off ½@⅝c. Rye gained ¾c for the day.

Liquidation ran its course in grains early in the week and profit taking, short covering and a revival in bull interest brought about a substantial reaction, with wheat at the top up 9⅛@10⅛c from the inside figures. Final trades were 1¾@3¼c higher. Coarse grains finished easy, with corn off 1@1⅛c and oats ½@⅞c lower. Rye gained ½@2c, with July leading.

Liverpool Has Little Effect.

Strength in Liverpool failed to have much effect on May wheat, which averaged lower for the day, but the July was wanted on all the breaks, with further demand for new crop hard winters via the gulf from Germany, and the continent, and it averaged higher, with the May-July difference narrowing to around 18¼c, although the spread fluctuated rapidly. Sentiment was decidedly mixed, with commission houses and local traders on both sides with an increased disposition to get out of the May and into the July.

Houses with eastern connections who have been buying wheat on and off for the last two days were credited with acting for a local professional who is now in Florida. Milling demand for cash wheat is increasing, with fairly good sales from Kansas City, where exporters were buying May. Omaha sold 10,000 bu to go to Wichita. Flour demand at Minneapolis was better and premiums there unchanged to 2c higher. Crop reports from the southwest were favorable, with good rains reported in parts of Kansas and Nebraska during the day. Liverpool gained 2¼@2½d and Buenos Aires 2c.

Corn and Oats Lower.

There was an absence of aggressive buying in corn and oats and both grains averaged lower, closing on a fair rally from the inside figures in sympathy with wheat. Sentiment was much less bullish than on the previous day. Cash demand was slow despite small receipts and the basis in the corn market showed little change, while oats were slightly firmer. Expectations are for small arrivals for some time to come. The trade look for a moderate increase in the visible supply of corn for the week.

Houses with seaboard connections were on the buying side of rye, and with limited pressure prices averaged higher, the close being at the top with July 10c under the May. Export sales at the seaboard were not reported.

Provision Prices Firm.

Provisions were firm early, but broke sharply toward the last and closed with net losses of 22½@25c on lard and 10@20c on short ribs. Commission houses bought early, while on the way down stop loss orders were uncovered. Hog were lower. Sales of around 1,000,000 lbs compound were said to have been made to the Russian relief commission. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the summer season to date aggregates 360,000, against 357,000 last year. Deliveries on March contracts were 100,000 lbs lard. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Foreign demand for cash wheat and corn showed improvement. While bids were generally somewhat below a working basis it was estimated that sales of wheat in all positions, including new crop hard winter via the gulf, were around 1,500,000 bu.

Domestic shipping sales of wheat were 5,000 bu, corn 60,000 bu, and oats 15,000 bu. Corn sales included 40,000 bu white to cereal interests. Peoria sold 5,000 bu wheat to mills and Omaha 10,000 bu to Wichita, Kas.

Offerings of wheat were not large and prices about unchanged, as compared with May. No. 2 red 1c under to 1c over and No. 2 hard 1½@2c under May. Receipts, 16 cars. Outside markets firmer; St. Louis, unchanged; Kansas City, unchanged to 1c higher; Omaha, unchanged to 2c higher; Minneapolis premiums unchanged to 2c higher.

Demand for cash corn only fair, with little change in the basis, as compared with May. Sample values, ¼@½c lower, with No. 2 mixed 3c under; yellow, 1¾@2c under, and No. 2 white May to ½c over. No. 3 mixed brought 4c under; yellow, 3c under, and white 1½@2c under. Receipts, 98 cars. Outside markets unchanged to 1c higher.

Cash oats slightly firmer as compared with the May. No. 2 white May to 1c over and No. 3 white 1½@2½c under. Sample values ¼@½c lower, with receipts 61 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Wheat traders were divided last night with many favorable to the buying side as they saw indications of the domestic situation strengthening through an improved demand for wheat and flour at Minneapolis and in the southwest. Kansas City made large sales to mills and exporters Friday and their stocks are expected to decrease 350,000 bu for the week. Cash wheat at Chicago and Minneapolis has gained sharply on the May during the week and the movement has fallen off.

Heavy selling of May wheat at $1.39½ by a number of the largest commission houses caused a violent recession at one time, while the wheat was taken back later around $1.38. The buying by an export house that has been bullish all week was a factor in making the late advance to nearly the highest of the day.

Corn specialists said their market had acted heavy all day, strength in wheat failing to help. The reduction in receipts cuts no figure with them as they point to the 48,000,000 bu in the visible as too large to be overcome even though primary receipts are off about 60 per cent in a month and are the smallest in more than three months.

The agricultural revival will be the theme of Julius H. Barnes at a dinner in Chicago, Monday, March 20, under the auspices of Illinois League of Women Voters. It will be largely attended by board of trade men, bankers and business men and women.

World disappearance of wheat from exporting countries into importing countries has been averaging 13,000,000 bu per week since July 1, according to A. L. Russell, the New York statistician. On the same basis from the present time to Aug. 1 requirements would be 247,000,000 bu. Total available holdings in North America, Argentina, and Australia are 228,000,000 bu, or 19,000,000 bu less than the prospective requirements. This could be made up by reducing the afloat stocks from 65,000,000 to 40,000,000 bu.

Only a small part of the orders for cash wheat from outside mills can be filled at Minneapolis, owing to the light receipts. The average quality cash wheat there has gained 10c on the May the last week. Flour sales in the last three days are reported as liberal.

A bullish view of the ultimate trend of wheat values is taken by Charles Sincere & Co. and by William C. Weigand of the J. Rosenbaum Grain company.

Sam Mincer says the bookkeepers in the corn pit are not keeping his accounts straight. They credit him with being a large buyer of corn Friday, but neglected to enter accounts of heavy sales, his purchases being only 35,000 bu more than his sales, he says.

These bonds may be bought on the Partial Payment Plan

THE wide margin of physical security which characterizes all Lincoln real estate bond issues is to be found in this new offering of 7% Gold Bonds on the property at 2922 Prairie Avenue.

This $26,000 loan is secured by a direct first mortgage on both land and building valued, when erected, at $180,000.

The building is four stories and fireproof, on a lot 125 x 150 feet, and contains eight apartments of ten rooms and three baths, each of which rents at $110 a month, making the total annual income $10,560, or enough to pay the greatest annual interest charges on a loan nearly six times as large as this issue of bonds.

Electric elevator service is supplied, and five modern garages in the rear of the property form a part of the security. Prepayments of principal and interest increase the margin of security semi-annually.

BUSINESS NEWS IN BRIEF

[Copyright: 1922: By Fairchild News Service.]

MANCHESTER.—Cotton trade prospects are improving. Lancashire manufacturers are starting a considerable number of looms. Employment suddenly starts to increase.

LONDON.—Some good orders for British tweeds recently have been coming through from the United States. The demand is largely for tweeds on the "Harris" order, made by the island cottagers.

NEW YORK.—An encouraging sign is seen in the resumption of operations on high grade women's silk undergarments by some manufacturers, who, finding the demand nil, temporarily turned to producing cheap lines.

NEW YORK.—Coat and suit wholesalers hold a deep rooted belief that retailers are not attempting to turn over merchandise on a sufficiently small profit margin to encourage great consumption by the public. The tendency of wholesalers is to forget that each retail store represents an individual problem in price marking.

NEW YORK.—Private advices in the fur market shed new light on the reported "buying" activities of London brokers. Advices tend to establish the theory that instead of buying, these brokers actually are "bidding in" their own merchandise.

NEW YORK.—Retail milliners this season are offering original Paris hats at lower prices than last year. The effect of low imported hat prices still is a matter of query. Home manufacturers are anxiously watching the effect.

NEW YORK.—A well known American make of phonographs, manufactured abroad, similar to the American product of the same company, are placed on the market at $85. The company announces "it is cheaper on account of freight and import duties, to manufacture also in foreign countries."

NEW YORK.—The Cloak, Suit, and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective association may abolish its labor department. Members then would deal with the union individually, thus "scrapping" the collective agreement. Union officials say the move may presage another "bitter industrial conflict."

BERLIN.—Bargain basement buyers from American department stores are operating actively in German novelty markets. Although price is the dominant element in buying, some orders for household articles, novelty goods, glassware, etc., have made producers gasp.

SUBMIT PLAN TO PROTECT ASSETS OF WAGNER & CO.

Conservation of the assets of E. W. Wagner & Co. is advocated by the creditors' committees at Chicago and New York in a statement being sent out to creditors. The Wagner house had 10,000 customers at the time of its failure on Dec. 30.

It is proposed to form the Wagner Assets Realization company to liquidate the assets. Full power is asked from the creditors so that the committees can handle all the assets.

It is proposed to pay 50 per cent in cash out of assets now in the receiver's hands, which is to be available within sixty days after an order by the courts confirming the composition plan, and 50 per cent in noninterest bearing promissory notes of the Wagner Assets Realization company, which is to take over the slow assets and the remainder, if any, of the quick assets after payment of 50 per cent. Payments are to be made out of the slow assets as fast as available. The corporation is to consist of three directors, one to be selected by the Chicago committee of creditors, one by the New York committee, and one by the two directors designated by the committees.

Quick assets consisting of cash, securities, equities, and loans and other collateral aggregate $5,284,000. Slow assets include amounts receivable on stock and grain accounts at face value, $1,752,354. Other slow assets, it is estimated, will make a total of $3,742,854. Liabilities are $8,400,000, the greater part of which is owed in the west.

Two Big British Railway Systems Consolidate

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, March 18.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—An agreement was signed today completing the first big British railway amalgamation promoted by the government with a view to securing economy in operation, greater efficiency, and the termination of wasteful competition. The companies amalgamted were the London and Northwestern and the Midland. The London and Northwestern has a capital of £188,292,156 (roughly $828,485,484) and the Midland £203,894,659 ($897,136,496). The actual amalgamation takes place on Jan. 1 next year, but this year the lines will be operated in the closest coöperation.

Rome Innstitute Figures Wheat Export Surplus

ROME, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—After setting aside the quantities of wheat required for home consumption until the next harvest the wheat exporting countries will have an exportable surplus of 11,200,000 metric tons, says a statement concerning the world's wheat supply just issued by the International Institute of Agriculture. The statement continues that the aggregate wheat crops in the importing countries which are furnishing data to the institute will be considerably larger than last year, being 27,700,000 metric tons, compared with 21,800,000 metric tons last year.

COTTONSEED OIL

CHICAGO, March 18.—While the New York cottonseed oil market was firmer and it was reported that the Russian relief had bought 1,000,000 lbs compound, local prices for cottonseed oil were unchanged with March at 10.55c and May at 10.70c.

NEW YORK.—COTTONSEED OIL—Closed 5 @16 points net lower. Sales, 6,100 bbls. Prime crude, 10.25c nominal; prime summer yellow spot, 11.80c; May, 11.82c; July, 11.79c; September, 11.80c, all bid.

RAILROAD NOTES

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis were gratified over the increase in the number of cars loaded the last two weeks, especially at the increase as compared to a year ago. Officials of southern roads report a fair movement of coal and a little increase generally in merchandise, lumber and southern produce.

Permission to issue $3,255,000 equipment trust certificates, proceeds from which will be used to build 350 refrigerator cars and 2,000 coal cars, has been granted the Illinois Central railroad by the Illinois commerce commission. The bonds are to sell at not less than 97½ and are to draw 5½ per cent interest.

The Norfolk and Western railway was given permission by the interstate commerce commission to issue $666,000 in first consolidated mortgage 4 per cent bonds, which will be sold to return to its treasury amounts already expended in various additions to its property.

The sum of $477,953 was certified to by the commission as being due the Denver and Rio Grande railroad from the government, as final payment on the deficit sustained in its operations during the first six months after it was returned to its owners from the wartime federal control.

Permission was given to the Akron, Canton and Youngstown Railway company to assume liability for the payment of $270,000 in equipment trust certificates which have been sold to procure nine new locomotives for its line. An application of the Apache Railway company of Arizona for permission to issue $455,000 in second mortgage notes and $55,000 in capital stock, was denied.

Present rates on paper and paper articles from producing points in Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Michigan, to destinations in the west, southwest, and Mississippi valley, were held unreasonable by the commission. The commission prescribed rates on this traffic for the future.

I. C. C. Makes Railroad Loan with String to It

Washington, D. C., March 18.—To aid the resumption of operations of the Missouri and North Arkansas railroad the interstate commerce commission gave notice today a government loan of $3,500,000 would be extended providing that the owners and the receiver of the property comply with certain conditions in its corporate reorganization. The receiver and the holders of claims against the road must consent to the wiping out of all liens and claims and equities of ownership in the railroad and must issue $5,000,000 in a first mortgage bond issue, constituting after the reorganization the only debt of the road, which the government will accept as security for the advance. The receiver also is required to arrange for the issuance of $3,000,000 in common stock, which must be disposed of for at least $500,000 in cash, which will serve as working capital after operations are resumed.

CREDIT SALES FOR CASH

You get the cash—and yet give your customers credit.

It can be done! Not directly, but practically through the use of our plan.

Your customers won't buy for cash but we will give you the cash for the accounts of those who buy on time and at a cost to you of probably less than the discount you offer them—the result is practically the same.

You could no doubt do a very much larger business if all your customers would pay you cash—but they won't! You would have advantages in the use of immediate cash in buying, or making discounts on your purchase bills that you could not make if you had to wait for them to pay you and thus carry them with your own capital.

We enable you to accommodate your customer with credit and yet get the cash immediately and on about the same terms as if he bought for cash.

We make your business liquid—your customers or your business organization are not disturbed, and you can quit at any time. Let us show you just how our proposition fits your business.

We purchase Open Accounts Receivable, Notes, Drafts, and Acceptances from Manufacturers and Jobbers. We also buy Installment Lien Obligations covering the sale of motor vehicles, machinery and other merchandise. Our Customers collect the Accounts they sell us.

· FINANCIAL · NOTES ·

The sharp advance of 5½ points, or more than 40 per cent, in the selling price of Brooklyn Rapid Transit stock on active dealings yesterday attracted considerable attention in the financial district. The closing price of 18¼ compared with a final price of 12¾ on Friday and a low price of 6¾ early in the year. Considerable mystery was connected with the movement in view of its swift advance on purchases of 1,000 shares or more in single blocks. It is said the company may be reorganized and the receiver dismissed sooner than most people expected. Earnings have improved considerably during recent months. The rapid transit commission will hold a meeting Monday morning, at which the general situation of all the traction companies will be reviewed.

Studebaker is stubbornly firm. Yesterday it was bid above 103, or close to the highest level reached this year. The preferred shares, which are a 7 per cent cumulative issue, are callable at 125. A sinking fund for that purpose has been in process of accumulating for some time. The fund now amounts to about $4,000,000, or nearly half the volume of outstanding preferred. Any time after the sinking fund exceeds $2,500,000 the directors may increase the common dividend above 6 per cent.

It is understood that the American Cast Iron Pipe and the National Cast Iron Pipe companies are still in negotiation with the United States Cast Iron Pipe company for sublease rights to manufacture under the De Lavaud process. It is said in quarters close to the National Cast Iron Pipe company that the terms for the process are an initial payment of $50,000, a royalty of 7½ cents a ton of pipe made and a certain rental for the De Lavaud machines.

Endicott-Johnson stocks, which have been lagging behind the rest of the market in recent sessions, were taken in hand soon after the opening and advanced to a new high price for the movement. The stock was in big demand throughout the short session. In the year 1921, when other companies associated with the leather industry reported large deficits, Endicott-Johnson was able to report net of more than twice its dividend requirements.

The Pennsylvania Sugar company, the American Sugar Refining company, the National Sugar Refining company and the Warner Sugar Refining company advanced the price of refined sugar 10 points to 5.50 cents, less 2 per cent for cash. The Michigan Sugar company advanced its prices on cane sugar to 5.40 cents and on beet sugar to 5.30 cents. The Great Western Sugar company advanced its price on beet sugar to $5.30 a bag, seaboard.

The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company has applied to the California commission for an order authorizing the issuance and sale of $25,000,000 preferred capital stock, the money so raised to be used to reimburse the sinking fund for amounts paid out. The stock issue is contingent on approval of the stockholders at the April 19 meeting.

The Northern Ohio Traction and Light company has petitioned the Ohio state public utilities commission for authority to issue $11,500,000 6 per cent twenty-five year general mortgage and refunding bonds. The company announced that it intends to redeem at 101 and interest on April 17, 1922, all of its outstanding six year 7 per cent bonds, due June 1, 1926.

Sale by the Prudential Insurance Company of America of all its stockholdings in the Fidelity Union Trust company and the Merchants and Manufacturers' National bank was announced yesterday. The purchaser was Julius S. Rippel of J. S. Rippel & Co., bankers and brokers, and the amount involved $2,630,000.

The Air Reduction company, announced it has purchased all the assets, including the patents, trademark and trade names of the Davis-Bournonville company. The latter company has been the pioneer in the development of all lines of oxyacetylene apparatus.

The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debit to individual deposit account reported for the week ending March 15, by 202 banks in 24 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,003,049,000, compared with $948,399,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $1,003,049,000, compared with $994,098,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

Acquisition by the Michigan State Telephone company of the property of the Valley Home Telephone company, which operates exchanges and toll lines in Bay, Saginaw, Genesee, Huron and other counties in Michigan, was approved by the interstate commerce commission.

There were 505 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by Bradstreet, compared with 519 in the preceding week and 308 during the corresponding week last year.

United States Gypsum common sold between 51½ and 53, while the preferred advanced 1 point to 98½ bid, offered at 100, ex dividend.

Gossard Corset changed hands at 21, with little stock offered around current quotations. Emerson Brantingham preferred improved to sales at 33¼, while the common changed hands at 9. Avery common was slightly higher at 18 bid, while the preferred was wanted at 43. Wahl preferred was off 1 point at 92 to 94. The preferred was in demand at 67, ex dividend, with practically no stock offered.

American Light and Traction common again featured the public utility group, this security improving 14 points to sales at 143, but reacted to a close of 138 to 140. A steady improvement was shown in American Gas and Electric common, and closing prices of 141 bid 143 asked, showed this security up $3 for the week. American Power and Light common lost approximately $3 at 81½ to 83. The Cities Service issues were strong, sales in the common ranging between 195 and 200; preferred between 60½ and 61½; Bankers shares, 20½ and 21⅛. Commonwealth Power Railway and Light shares were fractionally lower, common selling at 20¾ and 21¼; preferred at 50½ and 51½.

An Eighty-Billion-Dollar Business

The farm wealth of the United States is Eighty Billion Dollars. Farming is the basic industry. It is the biggest business in the world. Directly or indirectly, civilization depends wholly upon the farm.

The farm is the greatest of all collateral. It is immovable and indestructible. Farm Loans are in the front rank of ultra-conservative investments. They are the oldest investment, dating back 2500 years. Farm Loans have always yielded liberally in proportion to their safety.

This is best known by the experts who place loans for the great insurance and trust companies. They prove their expertness by getting the utmost return without loss. They do not experiment. Nothing tempts them. Legal restrictions further limit their choice.

These experts take nearly all the Farm Loans that can be had. They have not been urged upon the individual investor by wide-spread advertising or armies of salesmen. The result of this has been that many who should invest in Farm Loans have not done so.

Signs of an Important Change

Today, however, signs point to a change. Investors lately attracted by less substantial collateral are now turning toward the Farm. Forman Farm Mortgages and Gold Bonds make a strong appeal. They have a record of 36 years without loss to a customer. Forman investors are satisfied. They are without bother or worry. They have never taken over an acre of land on a Forman Loan.

Many invest with us who have never met us personally. They invest by mail. This is easily done. A request brings full information. The mail customer gets exactly the same treatment as those who come in person.

From $100 Up

Forman Farm Mortgage Gold Bonds can be had in any multiple of $100. Probably no security appeals so equally to the large and small investor. The widow with slight business experience, the business man, the salaried man or woman—all find that Forman Securities are preferable.

And now a novel plan has been developed. Those who see the advantages of monthly investing, without waiting for funds to accumulate, will want to know about it. This new Forman Plan is a vigorous stimulant to saving. It earns you 7% while saving, and gives you all the advantages of the cash investor.

We believe it is the best saving and investing plan ever developed. No matter what your investment condition may be, you will learn something much to your advantage by replying to this ad at once.

In short, these bonds are as safe as any established legitimate business can make them.

You can invest any amount from $100.00 up. Bonds payable in 3-4-5-6 or 7 years, as you prefer.

GRAND BEACH is a property of 675 acres with 2½ miles of beach on the shores of Lake Michigan, 62 miles from Chicago, just over the Michigan State Line and on the main line of the Michigan Central Railway. It has been owned and managed by the present owners since 1900, and in that time has developed into one of the most beautiful and popular colonies in Michigan, with over one hundred and fifty beautiful homes and one of the finest golf courses in America, with another now building which will be ready for play by June 1st.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE: All money received from the sale of these bonds goes direct into the building of the GOLFMORE HOTEL and improvements. A large force of men is now working on the hotel, and it will be ready for the opening on May 30th.

THE GOLFMORE HOTEL and cottages have accommodations for 500 guests and will be open throughout the year—to meet the insistent demand for outdoor life for both summer and winter sports.

Being so near Chicago—Grand Beach is in reality a suburb to this great city—we do not have to "draw" our guests from a distance, for we have millions right here at home.

We tell you honestly and frankly how you may make your savings earn 10% per year—and of the means we have taken to make your investment safe beyond reasonable question. If not convenient to call or phone, send check for amount of bonds you wish. The following schedule gives price on each $100.00 bond, including interest to March 20th; thereafter add 2½c per day.

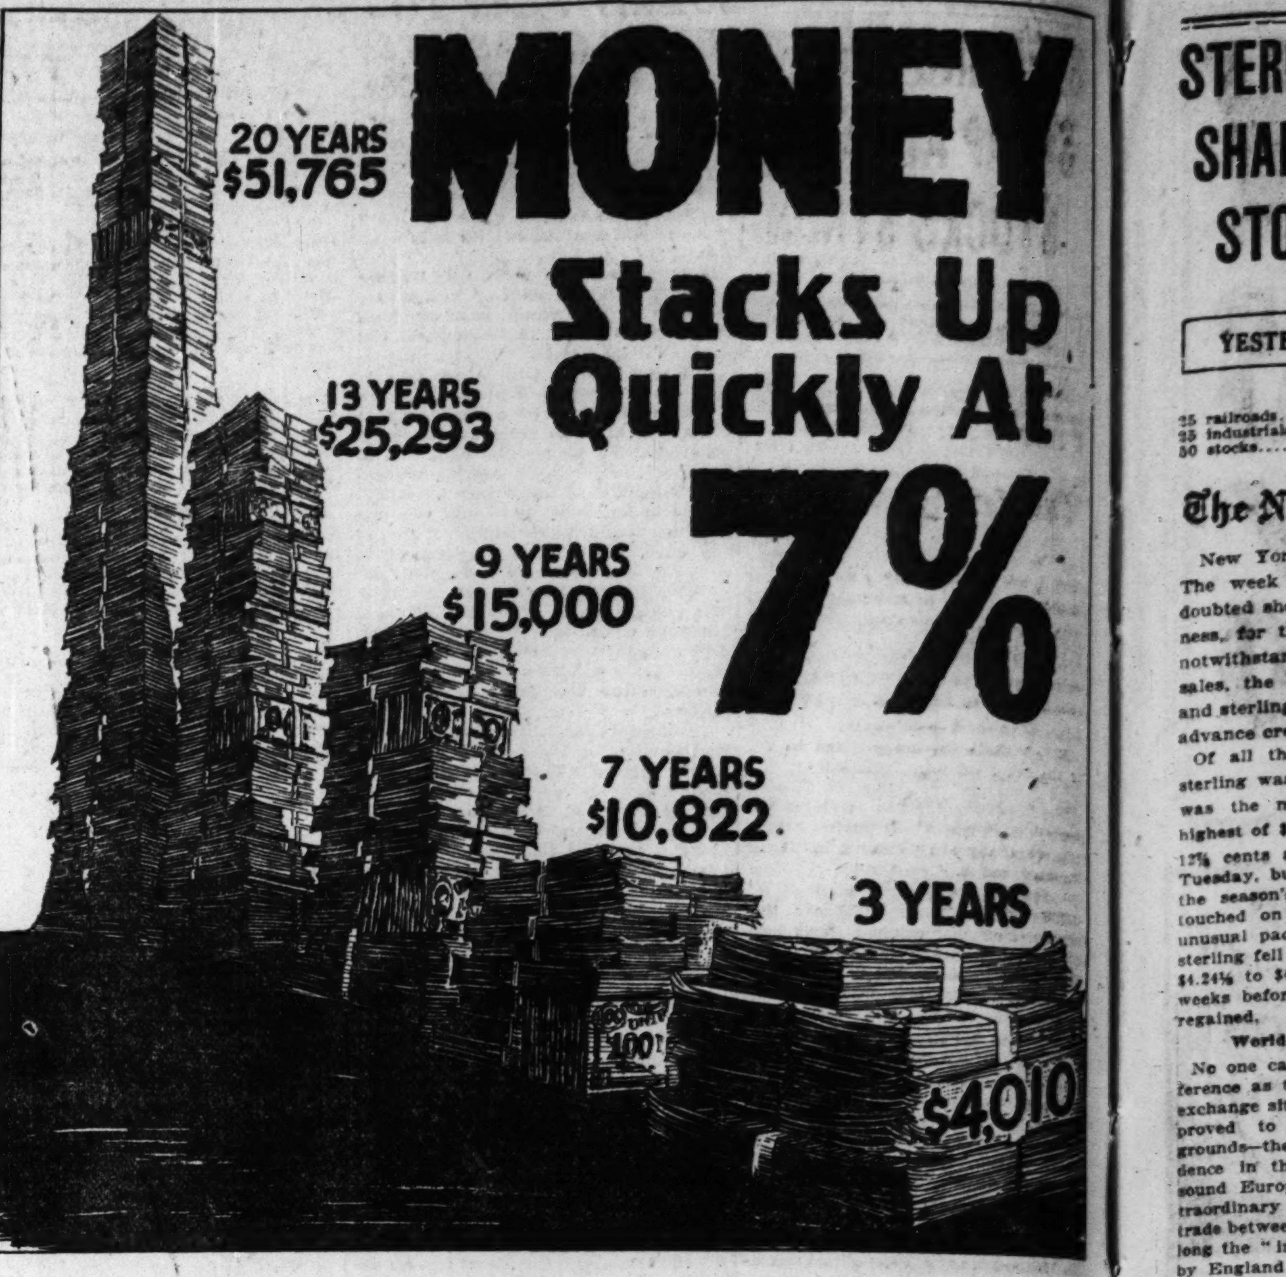
If you care to go out and look the property over for yourself, and after doing so are not fully satisfied and do not wish to invest, we will gladly pay the entire expense of your trip.

Buy now, as they are selling fast. The bonds due 1929 have all been sold.



IF YOUR DOLLAR is invested at 7% and your interest from it is invested twice a year as received, it will double itself in about 10 years, triple itself in 16 years and multiply itself 5 times in about 23 years.

Use this principle to make yourself independent or to accumulate money rapidly for any other purpose. Look at the picture. If you save $100 a month and invest it in this way in our 7% First Mortgage Real Estate Serial Gold Bonds, in 3 years you will have $4,010, in 7 years $10,822, in 9 years $15,000, in 13 years $25,293 and in 20 years $51,765.

Perhaps you can save more or less than this. The principle works the same. The man who can save $1,000 a month will be worth over a half million dollars in 20 years! The young man or woman, the girl or boy, who can save only $10 a month will have over $1,000 in 7 years, $2,529 in 15 years and $5,176 in 20 years. Isn't it the height of folly not to save in this way?

Buy these 7% Bonds for cash in amounts of $1,000, $500, $250 and $100. Also on easy payments of 10% down, 10% a month, and get 7% while you save.

"A MESSAGE THAT LEADS TO WEALTH," illustrated with pictures in color and with tables explaining this sure, safe way to accumulate money quickly, will be given you gladly. Call at our office if you can. If not, write, phone or use this coupon.

A Very Unusual Opportunity

The worth and stability of a business enterprise can be accurately measured only by its record of results, and any reliable forecast of its future must of necessity be based on this record.

Those who carefully study the consistent growth of this business from its very small beginning 18 years ago to its present commanding position, will be fully convinced that the opportunity now offered is of a very unusual character.

Now that for the first time we are going outside for additional capital, I feel that the investor who puts his money into my business is not only entitled to a preference as to dividends, but also to an equal share in the profits and valuable "good will" of the business.

We have, therefore, arranged a unique new form of security that not only assures a perpetual fixed income of 8% a year, but also gives the investor an opportunity to earn greatly in excess of 8% a year on his money.

I am confident that this company, with the realization of the additional working capital, will in the future excel even its past remarkable record of growth and earnings.

E. E. DAVIS
President.

8% New Form of Profit-Sharing Non-Callable SECURITY

Offered Direct by the Largest Company of Its Kind in the World

This new and attractive form of security not only assures you a perpetual income of 8% a year, but in addition shares equally in the profits of this firmly established big profit earning business.

Our average yearly earnings for past six years have been over 72% per year on the net worth of the business. These large profits are assured because we virtually dictate prices of our product as a result of our firm control of the field.

Practically No Competition

The company has practically no competition, due to the proven superiority of its product, which is fully protected by strong basic patents. Davis Boring Tools are used exclusively as standard equipment by 98% of the railroads of the U. S. and Canada and by 60% of those in foreign countries. The enormous waiting business in the automotive and general industrial field will increase our volume many times.

Each year the plant capacity has been enlarged from profits, but the volume of demand has grown so rapidly that it is now desirable to provide additional capital to care for the large number of profitable orders that have heretofore been declined.

"It Pays to Investigate"

This issue will bear the most thorough investigation. Conservative business men and investors of the most careful type are putting their money into this new and better security. Many who have got all the facts either in person or by letter express great surprise at the extremely liberal provision the Company has made for those who are furnishing this new capital.

The New York Times.

New York, March 18.—[Special.]—The week ended today with an undoubted showing of financial cheerfulness, for the stock market held firm notwithstanding substantial realizing sales, the bond market went higher, and sterling exchange in another rapid advance crossed $4.40 again.

Of all these movements the rise in sterling was the most interesting, as it was the most emphatic. At today's highest of $4.40⅝, the rate was not only 12⅝ cents above the low level of last Tuesday, but had got within 3 cents of the season's highest figure of $4.44⅜, touched on March 1. This is a most unusual pace of recovery. Even when sterling fell from December's top rate of $4.24⅛ to $4.15¾, it was more than six weeks before the high figure had been regained.

World Regaining Confidence.

No one can mistake the necessary inference as to the nature of the foreign exchange situation, which is now clearly proved to rest on two substantial grounds—the world's recovery of confidence in the financial position of the sound European countries and the extraordinary reversal in the balance of trade between America and Europe. How long the "import surplus" can be kept by England and France at its present abnormally low level is a matter of conjecture; the position might be changed by the recovery in European business condition, which must eventually come.

But meantime the whole international situation, along with the sterling market, is an extremely interesting antithesis to the position which used to exist with the trade balances and the foreign rates in the older after panic days when America, as the London market put it, would "take to wearing its old shoes."

Stocks Keep Up Advance.

Today's stock market ended with irregular changes, few of them more than fractional, but the market's firmness was shown by the manner in which the sales to realize speculative profits on the week's advances were absorbed. Comparison of the week's closing prices with those of a week ago shows advances ranging from 1 to 5 points in a long list of shares, the number of separate stocks which have shared in the week's activity being perhaps the largest on record.

Last week's advances in the investment bond market have been smaller in extent, but equally numerous. Gains of a point or more have occurred in a long list of securities, and Liberty bonds have averaged a gain of fully ½ point. Today's bond market ended the week with undiminished strength. United States Victory 4¾s went to their high record price again, and the highest preceding quotation was passed on the rise by several foreign government securities, notably the French republic bonds.

Banks Build Up Reserves.

The New York clearing house banks again reported excess reserves, the figure this week being $49,160,320, an increase of $18,758,670. Loans increased $62,844,000 and deposits were larger by $74,123,000. Reserve of member banks in the New York Federal Reserve bank increased by $2,664,000. Shorn lambs sell about $2.50 per 100 lbs below above quotations.

After an advance of $4.50@4.75 in hog values since low time last December, the market last week reacted 60@80c, with closing prices lowest of the week, best selling at $10.40, being lowest top in over a month. Day's average at $10.10 stood $1.05 below high point earlier in the month.

Smallest week's receipts of hogs since last November cut no figure whatever as all other influences were of a weakening character, including smaller shipping orders, a declining market in provision futures, and a top heavy trade in cash pork products. Packers claim hogs are still "cutting out" at a loss, with the foreign demand for product falling off.

Cattle Run Big; Prices Off.

Second largest week's cattle receipts of the year forced values lower, the week's average price of good beef steers dropping 35c, to $7.95, while the week's top at $9.35 stood only 5c below the previous week. Most beef steers closed around 50c below the finish of the previous week. Canning stock showed little change, while calves dropped $1.00 during the week.

While last week's hog receipts were 5,000 below the ten year average, the week's estimated average weight at 238 lbs was the second heaviest in six months, being 6 lbs above the ten year average for corresponding week since 1911.

Sheep Supply Is Small.

Week's receipts of sheep and lambs were comparatively small, showing about 19,000 decrease compared with a year ago. Sheep during the week advanced 35@50c, while lambs closed weak at 25c lower, with tops quotable at $15.75 and best aged sheep around $11.00.

Monday's receipts at Chicago are estimated at 19,000 cattle, 52,000 hogs, and 17,000 sheep, against 15,889 cattle, 23,068 hogs, and 17,586 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 56,000 cattle, 145,000 hogs, and 65,000 sheep against 44,551 cattle, 93,870 hogs and 82,5-3 sheep a year ago.

Secured and Unsecured Obligations.

It is a common belief that a secured obligation is of necessity safer than an unsecured obligation. Such is not always the case, however, and many so-called unsecured obligations have in reality better security in back of them than those which are definitely secured. The very fact that an obligation can be floated without any guarantee or pledge of certain property sometimes gives it a superiority over those which must be definitely secured in order to bind the borrower to a fulfillment of its obligation.

Under the head of unsecured obligations come a large number of civil loans —both government and municipal debentures—which are far more numerous and important than corporate debentures. A strong municipality can float a loan on its simple unsecured promise to pay. Its reputation and good faith give the necessary security and confidence. A weak municipality, or one whose obligation is weak, is the one as a rule which must offer security.

It is in the corporate debentures that the secured obligation is usually safer than one that is unsecured. A mortgage bond is almost always better than a debenture in the same company. There may be, however, exceptions even to this rule. Take, for example, the protection given by the trust agreement for the American Tobacco company's 6s and 4s. These loans are not secured by a mortgage on any property, but they are first and second charges respectively on all the company's properties, income, and profits, now and hereafter, to which any mortgage loan subsequently brought out would be subject.

Most corporation debentures depend for their strength on the length of time the loan has to run and on the amount and stability of equities in assets and earning power in excess of prior liens and charges. If these equities are sufficient during the life of the loan, interest charges will be met, and if they are sufficient at maturity the company will have a basis of credit for refunding that part of the issue which has not previously been amortized.

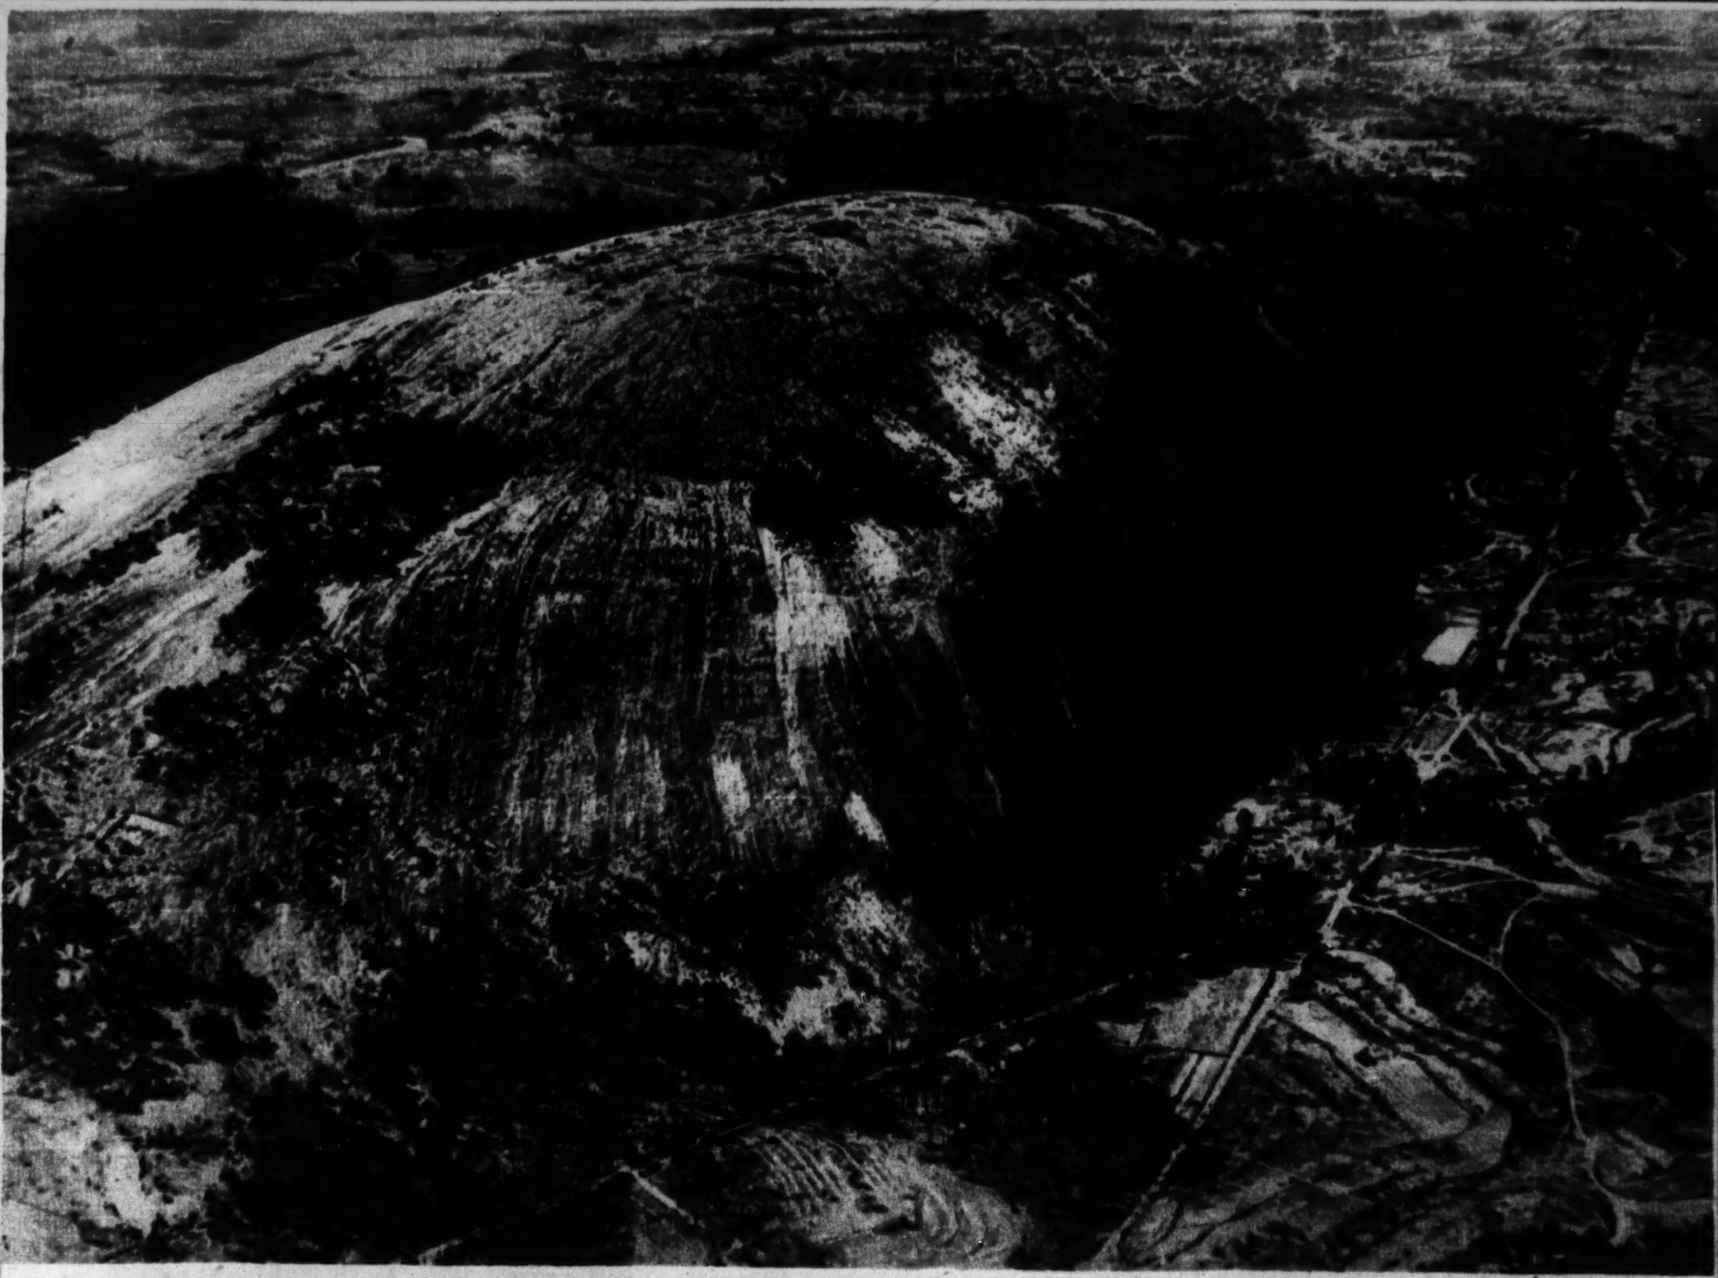
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

MARCH 19, 1922



THIS MOUNTAIN IS DESTINED TO BE THE GREATEST OF ALL THE WORLD'S MEMORIALS OF WAR, dedicated by the south of today to the south of 1861-1865. It is Stone mountain, eighteen miles east of Atlanta, Ga., as seen from an airplane—a solid block of granite 700 feet high. Upon its sides Gutzon Borglum, the American sculptor, will carve out the colossal figures of the $2,000,000 memorial. Some of them will be 50 feet high, dwarfing the Lion of Lucerne, which is regarded as the most famous of sculptures carved from a mountain side. The same sculptor made the great head of Abraham Lincoln which graces the rotunda of the capitol in Washington. He also sculptured the giant figures of the twelve apostles for the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York. His home is in Stamford, Conn.

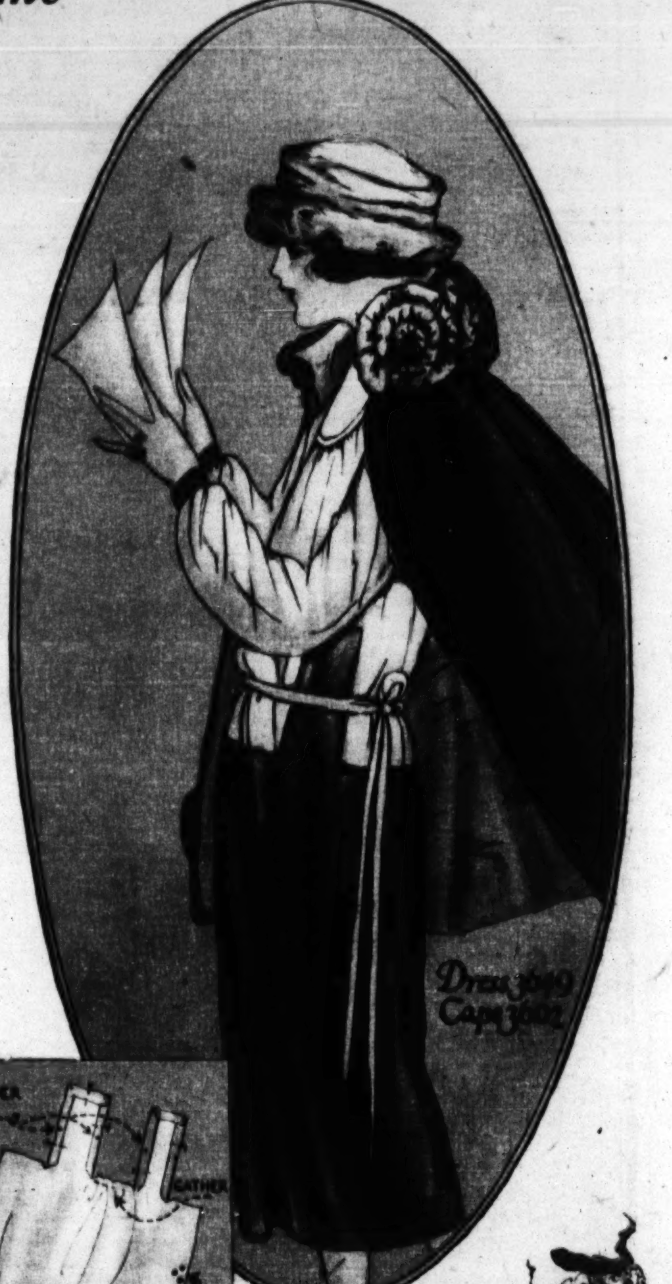
Dresses you have never dared attempt you can now make like a professional—

A year ago you would have laughed at the idea of re-creating a Paris gown at home—today you can calmly do it



DRESS after dress a triumphant success. This is the experience thousands of women who sew at home are having now.

Now you can know the joy of starting to sew, certain that your dress will turn out a success. You can give it the style, the lines, the perfection of finish of an expensive imported frock.

With the Deltor, now included in every new Butterick pattern, home sewing becomes for you an entirely new thing. The Deltor enables you to re-create an imported dress as perfectly as a professional. It gives to you the skilled economy in cutting of an expert, the deft putting together of a great dressmaker, the clever finish that spells Paris.

First of all you have a list of just what fashionable materials are best suited to the pattern you have bought, so that you choose your material like an expert. The lines of a pattern cut for a cloth like Kasha may not look right in a material like the fashionable canton crêpe, because of the greater softness of the goods.

Then when you start to cut, the Deltor gives you a picture of the pattern in your size laid out on the width material you are using. For the first time you are assured of getting a cutting layout that exactly fits your case. The Deltor gives you pictures of the pattern in every size laid on every width of suitable material. You just select the picture of your size laid on your width material, pin and cut accordingly. You will find you have cut your frock out of from ¼ to 1⅜ yards less material than you ever used before and saved money and time. Your dress goes together so easily! A glance tells you just where and how everything goes—no puzzling over where to begin gathering, or start taking in a dart—the Deltor puts it there before your eyes in graphic and accurate pictures.

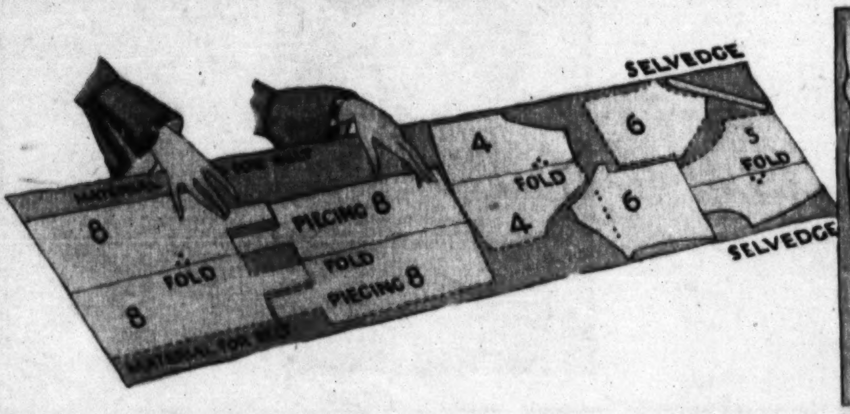
You know how women sewing at home have despaired of ever being able to give a professional finish to their work. Every method of finishing and trimming that made the model you selected so charming is carefully described in the Deltor. You just follow along, stitch by stitch, and suddenly there is your dress finished, professional in its perfection.

Every bit of the Deltor applies specifically to just that garment on which you are working. It is really a complete, illustrated dressmaking course for that particular garment.

Just as Butterick's fashion service has always been the most complete in the world, now the Deltor dressmaking service is so complete, that with it you sew into your dress the very spirit of the Rue de la Paix.

When you buy a Butterick pattern you will find its Deltor in the envelope. Every new Butterick pattern (30c to 50c) now gives you this complete service. It is the greatest dressmaking help to women since the paper pattern itself.

Butterick, New York, Paris, London.



You save ¼ to 1⅜ yards—multiply that by the price per yard and see how much money you save

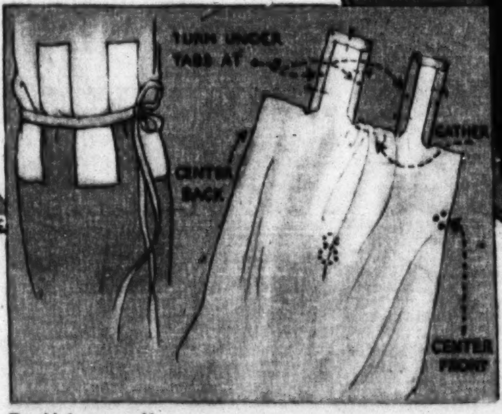
New York dressmakers, without using the Deltor cutting layout, have tried again and again to get the pattern out of the amount of material specified on the Butterick pattern envelope. Time and again they have been unable to do so.

With the Deltor cutting layout before her, an inexperienced girl pinned and cut the pattern in seven minutes.

When the designer has made the pattern, men trained by years of experience who specialize in cutting, make the Deltor cutting layouts. Not one person in a thousand, however talented, can cut as economically. Their expert experience, their careful planning, their skill, becomes yours with the Deltor.

There is a Deltor cutting layout for every size of pattern on every width of appropriate material. No other pattern gives you this. Select the one made for your size and your width material and you will save from ¼ to 1⅜ yards of material.

Nowadays all new Butterick patterns specify only enough material for you to cut by the economical Deltor charts.



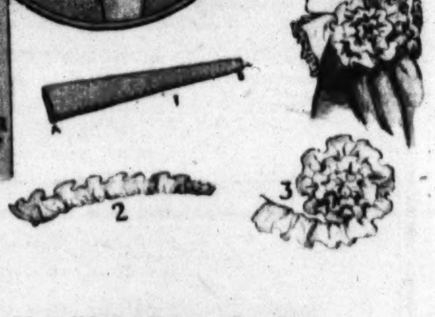
Swiftly, easily, you can re-create the lines and grace of the original model

What to do first, what next, is all important in putting together a dress if its lines are to be really perfect.

A professional knows instantly just how each dress demands to be put together. This expert's decision for your dress and the exact way in which he carries it out is what the Deltor gives you.

This frock, for example, is so exquisitely simple that even whether you turn in the tabs before or after sewing on the skirt, makes a difference in its lines.

The Deltor tells you just how to put it together correctly, step by step. You just follow along stitch by stitch, and sew in the very lines of the original.



You "finish" your frock as cleverly as an expert

No one in the world is as clever at finishing and trimming as the French. This ability is yours when you use the Deltor.

If your costume is the type on which Paris is using one of the entrancing ribbon devices this Spring, the Deltor tells you exactly how to make it, shows you in pictures any unusual twist.

When your frock is done, no wonder no one believes you made it yourself—there is the atmosphere of an atelier about it.

HOPE HAMPTON says: 'It's Easy to Get Thin to Music'

WHEN the famous screen star Hope Hampton came to Chicago last month in person, the superbly beautiful figure her pictures reveal was seen to be indeed a reality. Those inclined to fleshiness will be interested to know how she achieved a trim, perfectly proportioned figure—and how she keeps it so.

Miss Hampton used to be heavier. She took off her surplus flesh with Wallace reducing records. They played away the excess weight until her proportions became as you see them here. Even now, she uses them occasionally—just twelve or fifteen minutes—to avoid the return of unwelcome weight. "It's easy, and lots of fun" is the way Miss Hampton describes her experience with Wallace's melody-method of reducing.

No woman—in the public eye or in private life—can afford to stay stout. Fat is a burden which no longer need be carried. Overweight is out of date—and already looked on as a sign of neglect. For Wallace reducing records remove superfluous flesh like magic.

Whether fifteen pounds too heavy, or fifty, this novel but natural means of reducing will bring your weight down to normal. Wallace's scientific movements will take off the last ounce of superfluous flesh, and in a most pleasurable way. There is something irresistible about it all—photographic poses of each position—the crisp commands of Wallace himself direct your every move on phonograph records—a full orchestra sweeps you through the entire lesson. Why not start this week? Proof that you can reduce is free.

INVITATION

WALLACE, 630 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago: I accept your invitation to prove what your course can do for me. Please send record for first reducing lesson; free and prepaid. I will either enroll, or mail back your record at the end of a five-day trial. (216)

You, too, can have

"A skin you love to touch"

A BEAUTIFUL skin, soft, smooth, faultlessly clear—any girl can have this charm.

For your skin is constantly changing—each day old skin dies and new takes its place. Give this new skin the right treatment and see how soft and lovely you can keep it.

If your skin is very sensitive and easily irritated, use each night this special treatment:

DIP a soft washcloth in warm water and hold it to your face. Now make a warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and dip your cloth up and down until the cloth is "fluffy" with the soft, white lather.

Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin until the pores are thoroughly cleansed.

Rinse first with warm, then with clear, cool water and dry carefully.

THE very first time you use this treatment it will leave your skin with a slightly drawn, tight feeling. Do not regard this as a disadvantage—it is an indication that the treatment is doing you good, for it means that your skin is responding in the right way to this method of cleansing. After a few treatments the drawn feeling will disappear and your skin will gain a new, healthful sense of softness and smoothness.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and begin this treatment tonight. A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's will last for a month or six weeks. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York, and Perth, Ontario.

Lingette—the Wonder Fabric— A gift of modern weaving magic

It is as though a fairy had taken the silk cocoon's beauty and the cotton plant's strength; the tints of the morning sky and the deep hues of a midsummer garden, and mixed them all together, to produce Lingette.

A dash of the ancient magic that spun straw into gold seems to have been possessed by Lingette's modern weaver—he has taken cotton yarn and made a fabric that shimmers like silk; that hangs and drapes and clings and feels like silk!

And yet, he has kept for you all of cotton's practical indifference to warm, soapy water, hot irons, hurrying laundresses! Lingette's fine twilled surface was especially made to resist wear and frequent rubbings. Lingette's silk-like finish is permanent—woven into the fabric. It can't wash off!

Lingette is offered in a fairy-like variety of pastel tints, of bright sports colors, and dark shades; plain, self-striped, and printed with dainty flower and bird motifs. There's a pattern and a color for every need—from lingerie to gay over-blouses; from children's frocks to men's pajamas.

Ask for Lingette by name—look for "Lingette" on the selvage of the fabric; in the label of ready-to-wear garments. Only in this way can you be sure of getting Lingette's quality, Lingette's permanently silky finish, Lingette's long-time satisfaction in wear and washing.

"The Magic Mask!"

Modern Chemistry Finds a Skin Laxative and Way to Apply It That Purges Pores and Beautifies the Complexion in an Hour

A YOUNG English scientist has made a discovery which means a beautiful skin is now a mere matter of personal cleanliness! Into this smooth, clay-like mask a new, natural element that physics the skin has been incorporated. Evacuation is immediate; impurities completely expelled. An hour later your skin and complexion are fairly transformed—with a satiny texture and glow of color truly startling.

Your first application will prove a revelation. It is done at home, and the process is delightful. All you do is cover face and neck with this magic mask—and slip into an easy-chair to read, or dream. The warm, magnetic glow that follows will tell you this gentle, but positive skin laxative is at work. Then you remove the mask—and with it every blackhead, or other blemishing impurity.

Acts Alike on All Skins

One's skin may be ever so sallow; it may be oily; colorless and dull; coarse or fine; results are the same in every case. This natural pore-purgative will remove the last particle of waste—and bacteria. Men, too, have been quick to use this new aid to health and appearance.

The Magic Mask is known scientifically as Terradermalax. It is a distinct chemical property, discovered after five years' research by a specialist named M. J. McGowan. Do not confuse it with 'beauty preparations' which merely massage or assuage the skin. News of what Terradermalax does has already caused requests on the laboratory to send it everywhere. The medical world concedes it the most important dermatological discovery in years.

Not on Sale

On store shelves, the active ingredient in Terradermalax would not stay fresh. So applications for a supply must be sent direct to the laboratory. They are sending a two-months' supply to each applicant, as fast as it can be compounded. McGowan's own directions come with each can. He asks the modest laboratory fee of $2.50 which you can pay the postman. If you expect to be out when postman calls, this small sum may be sent with your application. Even this modest fee will be returned without question to anyone who does not see instantaneous and perfectly astonishing benefits to skin and complexion.

Can any prideful woman refuse this riskless opportunity to further her beauty and charm? Use this handy form:

Skin Eruptions Fade Away

Kloria ends itching, dandruff, boils, and other infections. Soothes and heals like magic. Free trial—test it.

ONE trial of Kloria for almost any skin disease will show you results never before thought possible. The way it stamps out barber's itch, eczema and other skin diseases almost challenges belief. The way it soothes irritation, itching scalp or itching anywhere is truly amazing. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp a few times and the trouble disappears; harmless to the hair.

This is the new and wonderful antiseptic, discovered in the world war, which, by scientific test, is over 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid. This great germicidal power is what makes it so effective.

Yet Kloria is not poisonous, doesn't burn or irritate, is soothing, pleasant, and safe.

Test Kloria on a boil or open sore. Notice how it destroys the pus infection, ends the soreness, and heals with magic quickness. For cuts and burns, it insures quicker, cleaner healing than iodine or any old-time antiseptic or salve. As a mouthwash, it destroys the acid-forming bacteria, thus preventing tooth-decay. As a gargle, see how quickly it relieves sore throat and canker sores. Apply it to sore, bleeding gums (pyorrhea), and see if the soreness and bleeding do not disappear in one week. Harmless, yet more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water, and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless, and virtually odorless.

All druggists. 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

Free Sample A sample of Kloria, enough for a convincing test, will be gladly sent free. Write for it. The results will be a revelation.

With a smart design on Cheney Showerproof Foulard and the contrast of plain Crêpe Roman, this day-frock presents a charming version of the Spring mode.

SILKS AND THE SPRING-TIME DAY-FROCK

IT'S quite evident that Dame Fashion has grown envious of Mother Nature, and the buds and blossoms that answer the call of the Spring sunshine must don their very gayest hues, if they're not to be outrivalled in loveliness by the frocks that Fashion has contrived of the new Cheney Silks for Spring.

Stores with a reputation for fine merchandise will be quite sure to sell Cheney Silks, either by the yard or in garments ready to wear.

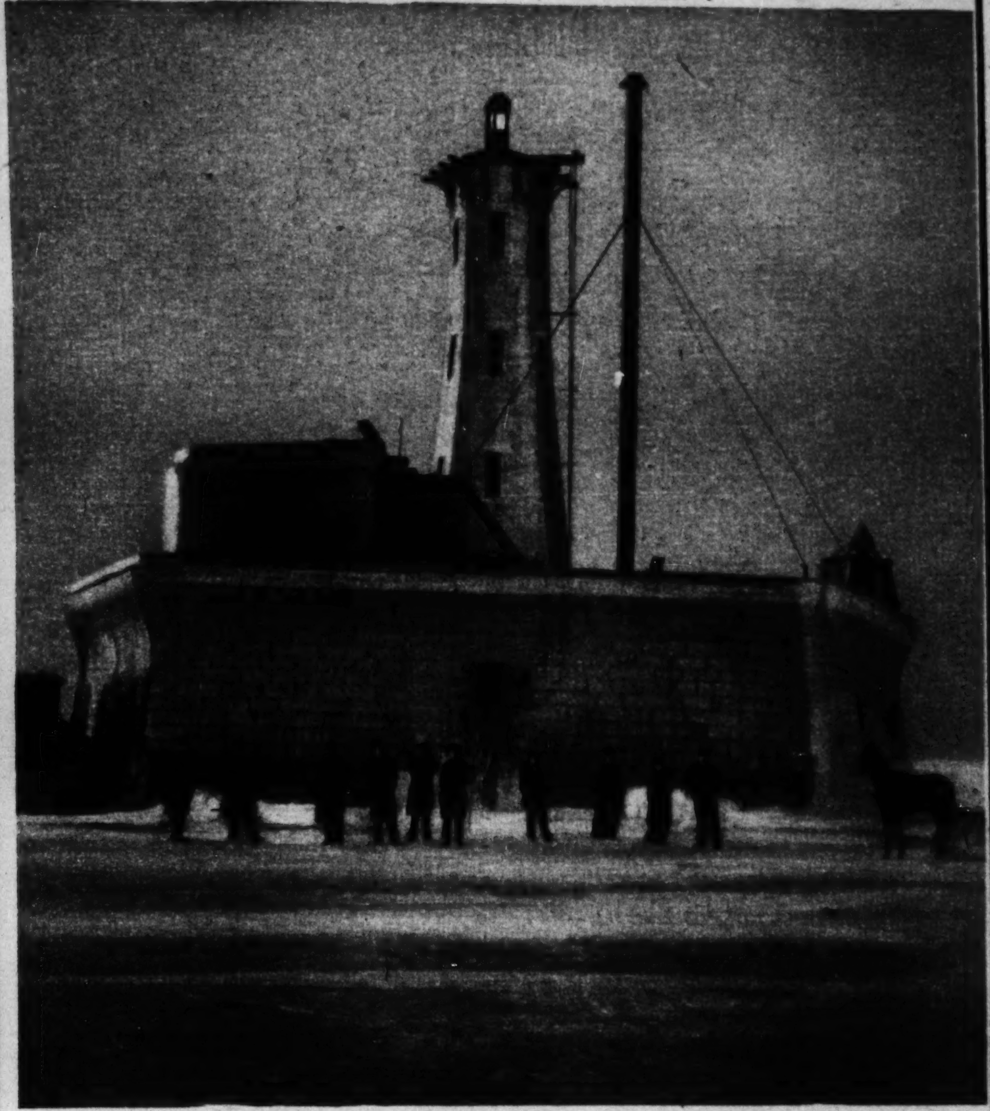
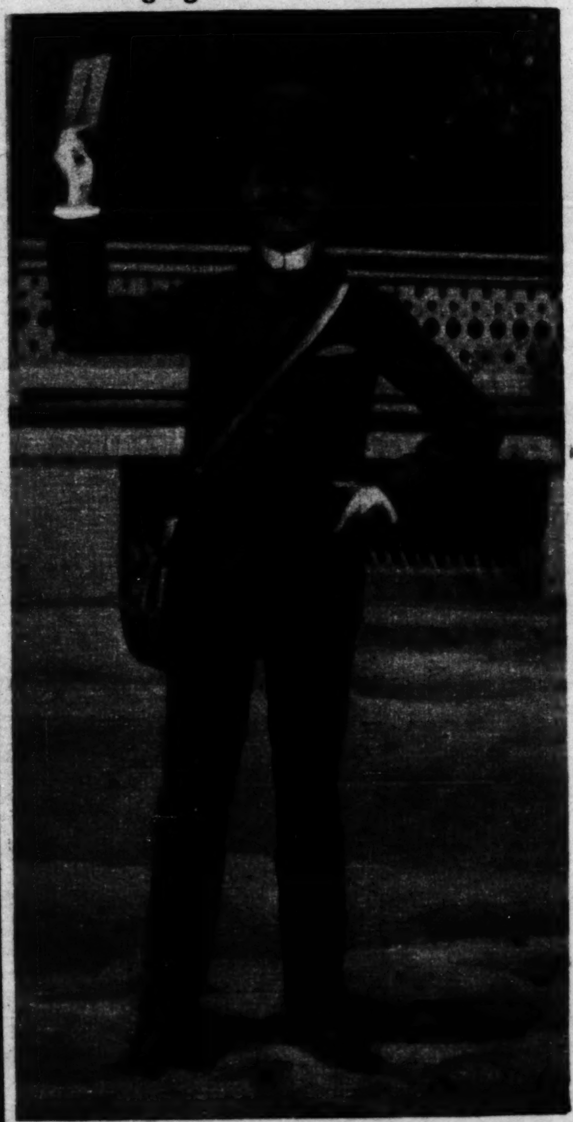
DO YOU REMEMBER 'WAY BACK WHEN ----

ELSIE JANIS was just beginning to climb to the peak of fame as a mimic? That was before she had her now famous "gang."



WE ALL DROVE OUT TO THE CRIB IN OUR CUTTERS? It was two miles. Hundreds walked out and back. The tug at the left, sent out with supplies, was frozen in, and there it stayed till spring. This was about the winter of 1868 and 1869.



BURTON HOLMES, the famous lecturer, was touring Jacksonville, Fla., after this fashion in 1884?

FRANCES STARR, stage favorite, was this sweet girl graduate? You just naturally look for the essay manuscript, don't you?

NANCE O'NEILL, the noted emotional actress, appeared in this costume? Her last Chicago play was "The Passion Flower."

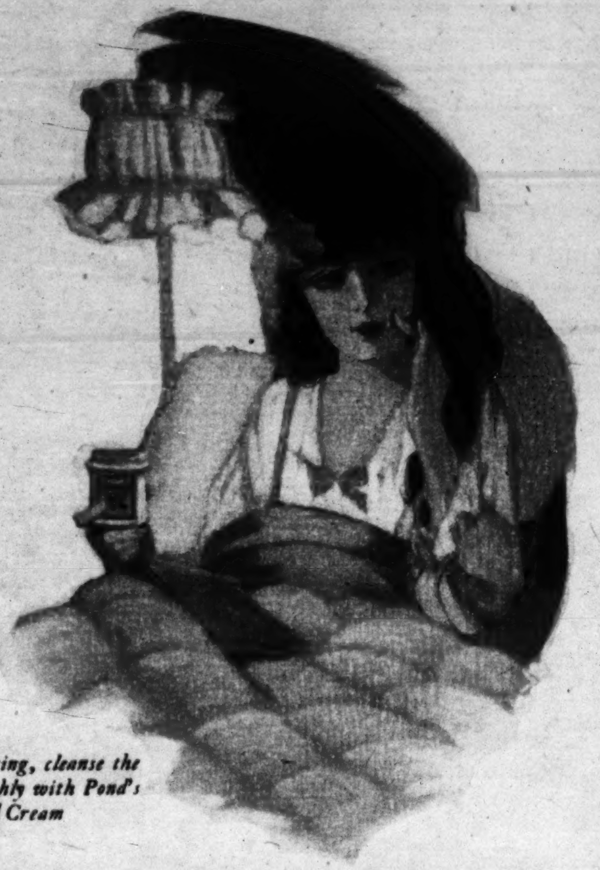
Your skin needs different creams at different times



Before retiring, cleanse the skin thoroughly with Pond's Cold Cream

At night it needs a cream to cleanse and to restore its freshness

THE skin collects more dust and dirt in the course of a day than one would think possible. Ordinary washing will not remove all of this grime. Some of it works its way so deep that a more thorough cleansing is needed to reach it.

At night, or whenever you come in from motoring or any other exposure to dust and dirt, your skin requires a cream with just enough oil in it to cleanse the pores without overloading them with oil. Apply Pond's Cold Cream to the face after washing with warm water and pure soap. Let the pores become saturated with this delicate cream, then, as it works its way out of the skin, wipe it off with a soft cloth.

When you first notice little fine lines about the eyes and mouth and at the base of the nose, take care that they do not grow deeper and become real wrinkles. For this also you need an oil cream, for oil is the arch enemy of wrinkles. Pond's Cold Cream lubricates the skin and restores its elasticity. Put it on your face, being careful to rub with the lines not across them. If you are persistent and systematic in giving your skin this care you can do much to forestall the little foes that add to a woman's age.

Start tonight to use this delicate cream. Pond's Cold Cream will not clog the pores or promote the growth of hair. It comes in both jars and tubes in convenient sizes. Any drug or department store can supply you. The Pond's Extract Company, 131 Hudson St., New York.

For daytime and evening, your skin needs an entirely different cream to protect it against chapping and to hold the powder. Pond's Vanishing Cream softens the skin without clogging the pores or adding a particle of oil.

She Wears Her Beauty Like a Queen

The years have touched her lightly as they passed and she wears her beauty like a stately queen.

Youth has not left her at the threshold of middle age, because she has kept the simple laws of health.

If you too would keep your hold on youth and beauty, mark this well: protect your teeth against Pyorrhea!

Four out of five who pass the age of forty, and thousands younger, are numbered among Pyorrhea's victims because it strikes quietly from ambush.

Watch your gums! The first symptoms of Pyorrhea are tender gums that bleed easily when brushed.

At the first danger signal call your dentist and make an appointment for gum inspection. Then buy a tube of Forhan's For the Gums and start using it at once.

You cannot afford to neglect Pyorrhea. If you do, you may pay the extreme penalty—loss of your teeth.

Pyorrhea attacks the gums and the base of the teeth. If allowed to run its course unchecked it loosens the teeth until they drop out or must be extracted.

Pus pockets form at the roots of the teeth and the deadly germs seep throughout the system.

Forhan's For the Gums, if used consistently and used in time, will prevent Pyorrhea or check its course.

It is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S., and has been used successfully for years in the treatment of Pyorrhea.

Brush your teeth with Forhan's. It is an excellent dentifrice. It keeps your teeth clean and white and your gums firm and healthy.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's — How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment. 35c and 60c, in the U. S. and Canada. At all druggists.

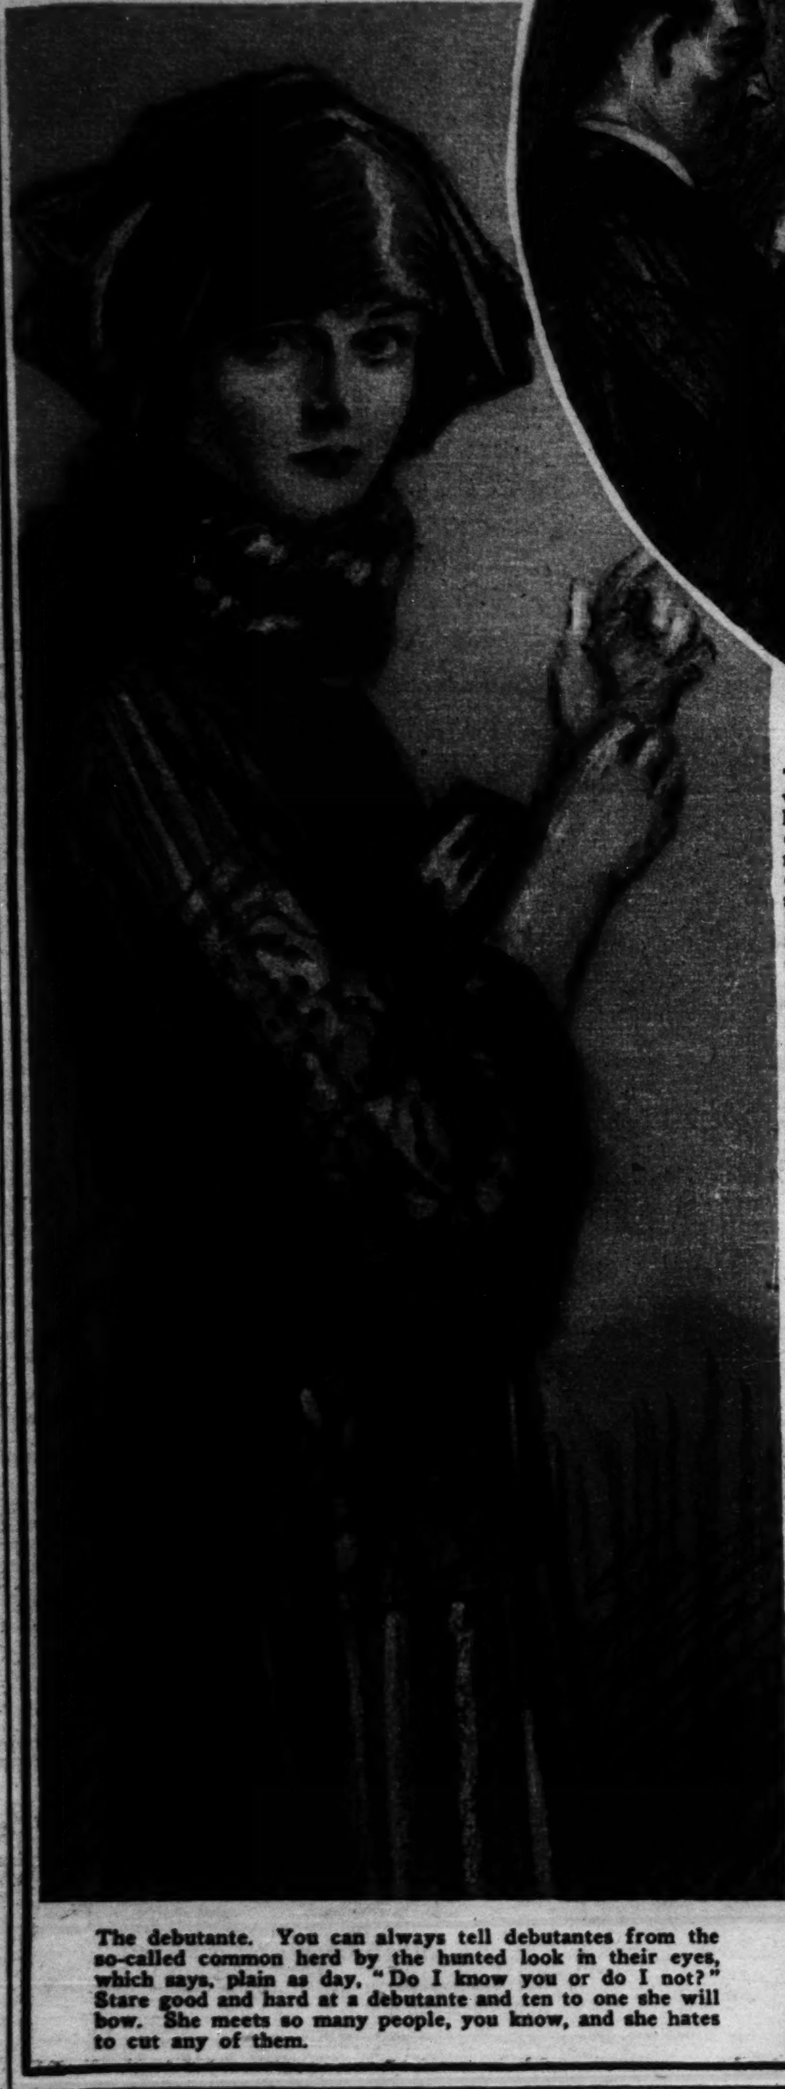
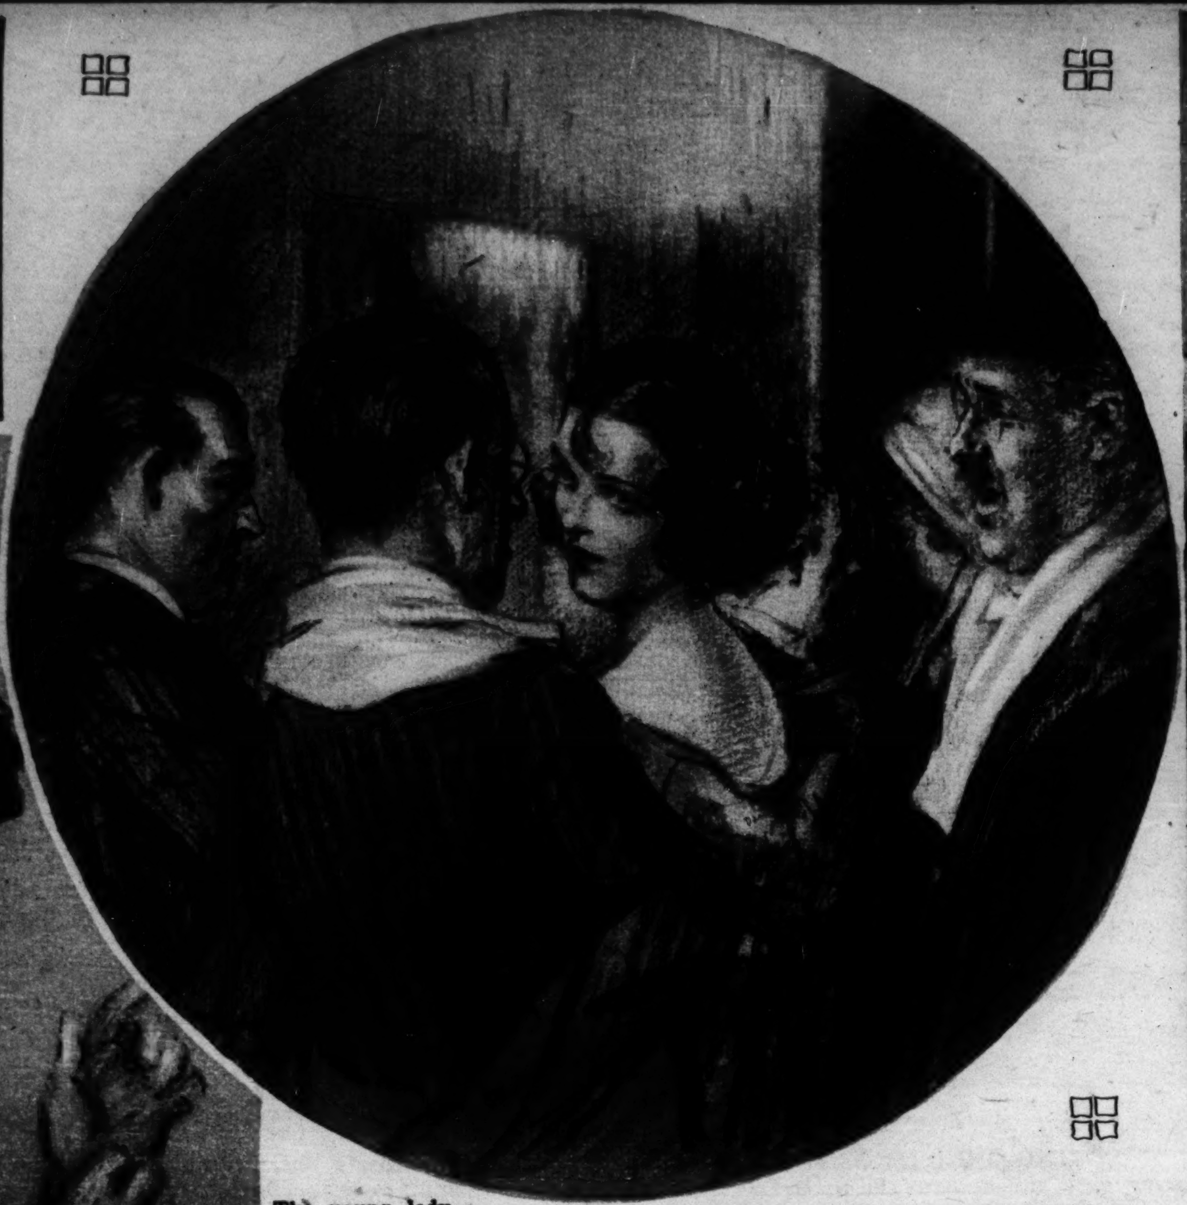
THE VERY MODERN YOUNG LADY

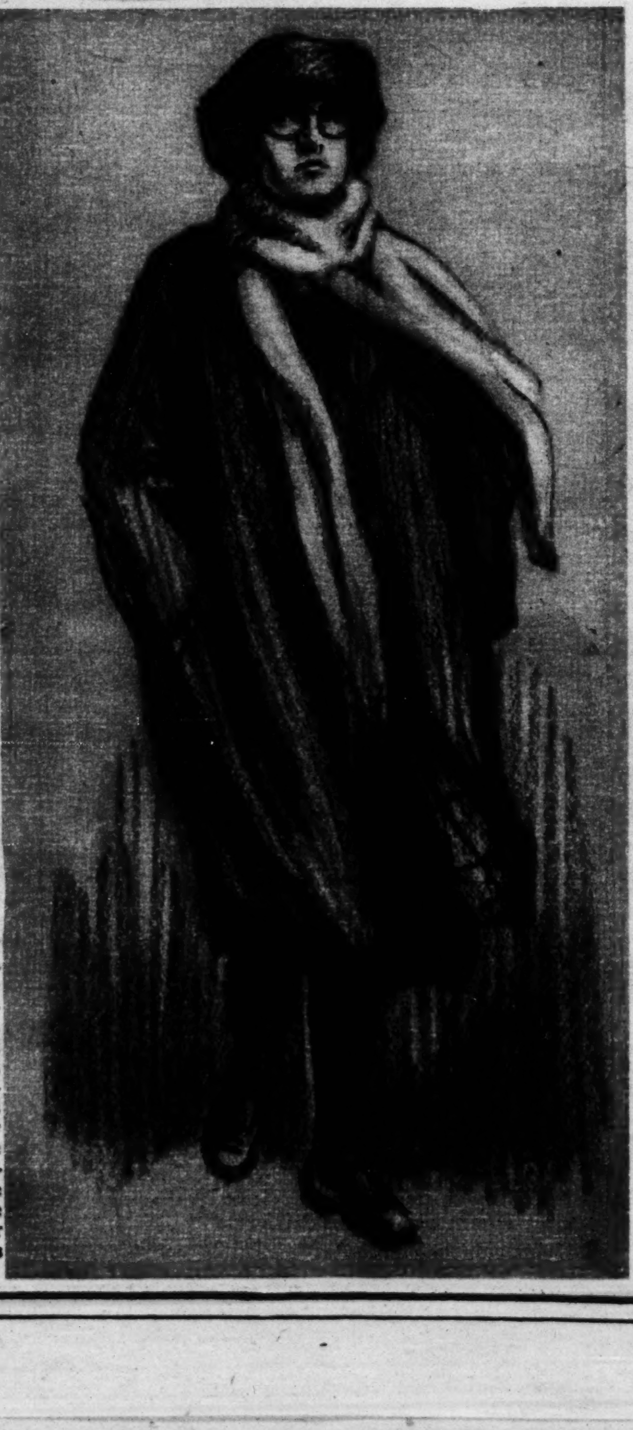
By W. E. HILL



The debutante. You can always tell debutantes from the so-called common herd by the hunted look in their eyes, which says, plain as day, "Do I know you or do I not?" Stare good and hard at a debutante and ten to one she will bow. She meets so many people, you know, and she hates to cut any of them.



The young lady who hates to go home. The idea of a quiet evening at home causes her to shudder violently. "Let's go somewhere and dance," is her cry. Always stopping overnight with some young lady friend, the idea being that there's no place like another person's home.



The self-expressive young lady. She has a great many ideas on self-determination and believes in living up to them. At least twice a year the S. E. young lady breaks with her family and either takes up typing or goes into the interior decorating business with a girl friend. She is a great student of Freud and psycho-analyzes her friends whether they want to be psyched or not—tells them the most terrible things about their subconscious minds!

lady who aspires to get "in." She is always on the verge in society, and never quite makes the grade. Somehow, apa finances a big, splurgy affair, with gold dishes and dded forks, something goes wrong—always. The wrong asked and the right people stay away, or else the party is e wrong hotel. And the young lady who aspires is never whether she's "in" or not. Never quite certain just where senses vaguely that something is a little wrong.

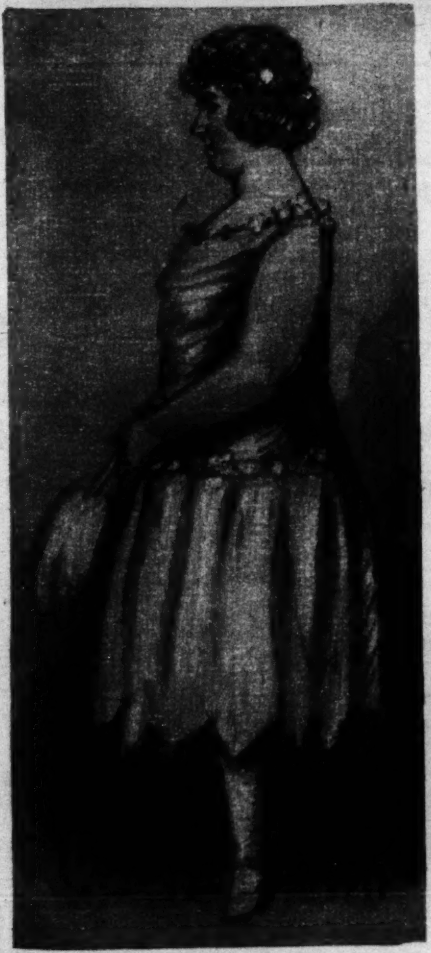
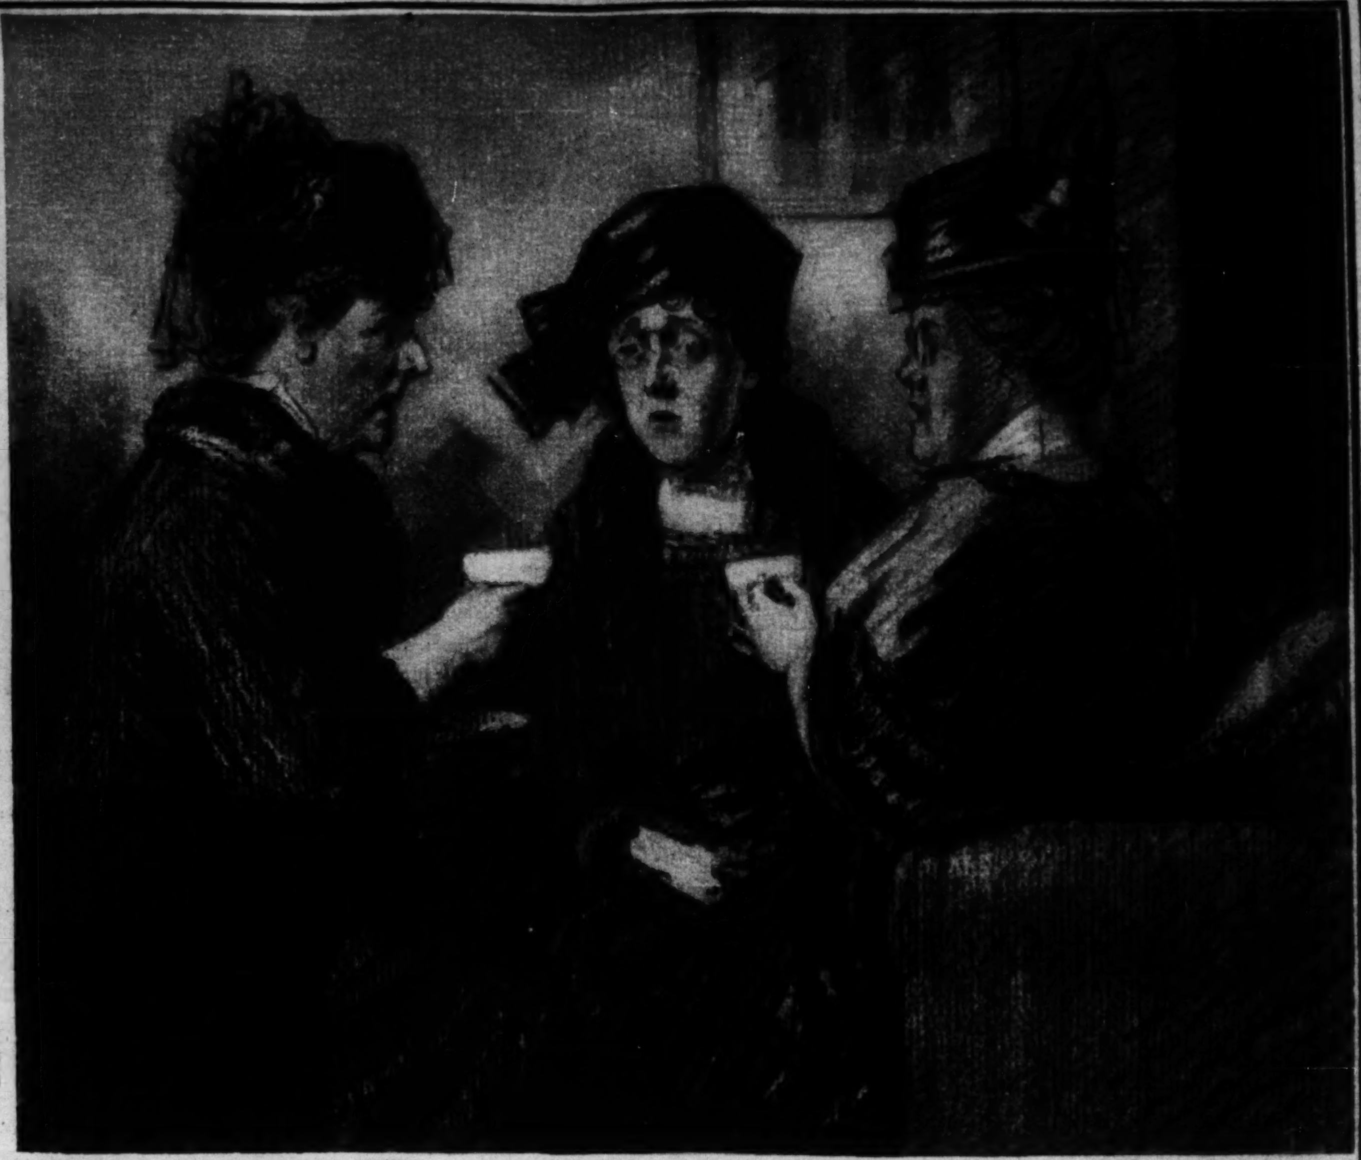
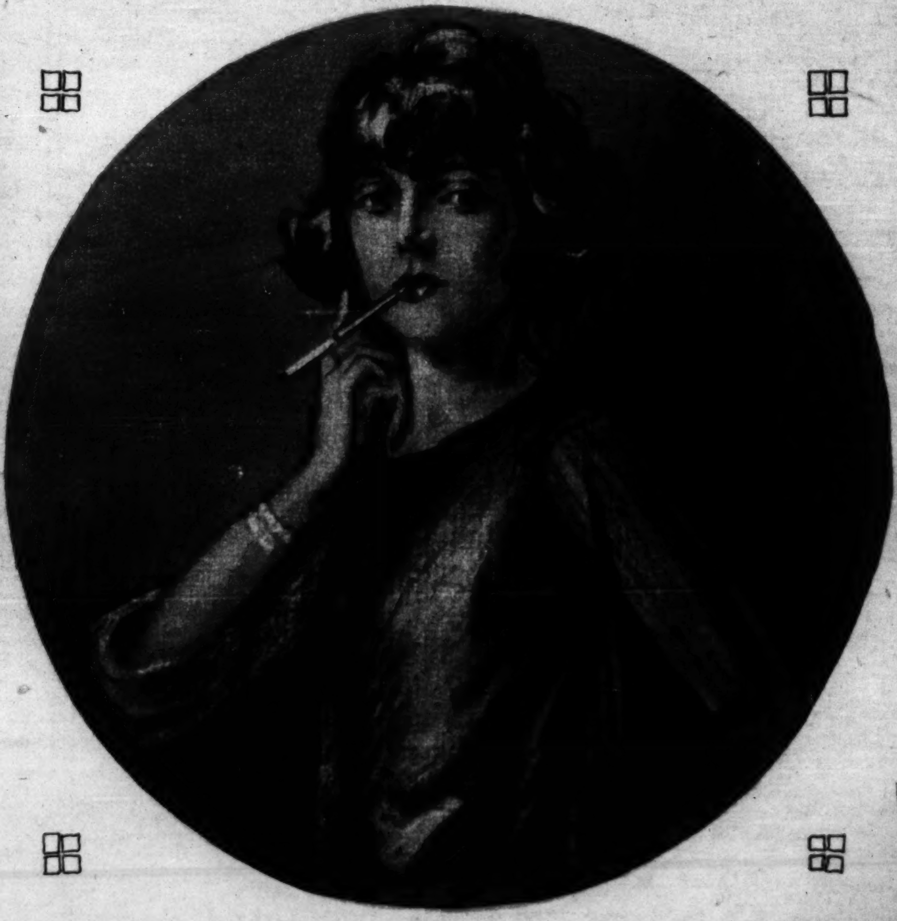
The business girl. When she's bad she's very, very bad, but when she's good she's about ninety-nine times as efficient as the male of the species.



The out of doors young lady. She can tell you all about the very best methods of breeding dogs and horses, and will, if you give her a little encouragement. Knows just how to make unsuspecting and trusting hens lay overtime by turning on the lights in the henhouse two hours and a half before sunrise, to say nothing of knowing just how much bone fertilizer should be used per acre, etc. Now and then, just to show how frilly and feminine she can be when occasion demands, the out of doors young lady lends her presence to the ballroom—but only now and then.



The anvil chorus. Without the anvil chorus as background no very modern young woman can be said to fit successfully into the picture. In whispers the members of the anvil chorus discuss the modern young woman with all the horror in their voices that used to go hand in hand with the atrocities during the war. They are perfectly delighted with the awful, awful things young people do nowadays and don't see what we are coming to! Just listen in on the whispered conversation of the three ladies pictured here. The lady on the left is telling her friends all about how seven debutantes came home from a certain house party last summer in such a deplorable condition that their families had to shoot them, etc., etc. And then the lady on the right of the group will come back with something equally interesting about two debutantes who went to a charity bazaar: "And, my dear, neither hide nor hair of them could their families find for three months, till one day they were found selling lace in Chinatown!"



The very frank young lady. She believes in calling a spade by a much naughtier name, if possible. Pretends that she wants you to be just as frank and outspoken, too. Just you try it once and feel the chill in the air!

MISS PUTTY FACE

By Vingie E. Roe

Blue Sage Flat's Infant Terrible Helps the New Schoolma'am to Find Her Heart Under Strange Circumstances.

THE brand new schoolma'am of Blue Sage Flat was in tears, frank, ignoble tears. The eleven pupils—they had always been "scholars" before — we straggling down across the gray, gentle slopes in different directions, calling boisterously to each other in the exuberance of young spirits released from the first day's bondage in the little house on the flat. The new schoolma'am watched them through the miserable blur that was threatening to blot out the world in general, and wondered how on earth she was ever going to stand nine months of them—and this.

A horrible panic was all inside her.

Those youngsters had looked at her in blank amaze when she put the first orthographical test to the two Bailys. and openly and without permission told her that kuh-ah-tuh did not spell cat! The oldest Crawford boy informed her patiently (and with condescension) that that feat was accomplished by se-ai-tee. They were a colossal wall raised against her and bound together by that quickest of all contempts, that of a child for a teacher whom it thinks incompetent. How on earth was one going to break through that with the newer methods? How was she going to pierce the fog of ignorance let loose upon them by their former teachers who had, without a doubt, grounded them in spelling by letter instead of sound!

It was incredible! And they wiped their little noses frankly on their sleeves. They drank from a community dipper in the pail on the porch without regard for hygiene. They stared at her open mouthed when she told them, early in the day, that it was not sanitary to borrow each other's chewing gum.

So you can see, dear reader, that the new schoolma'am of Blue Sage Flat was nineteen, that she was a product of Normal, that she was far—very far—away from her native heath on this forsaken flat, and that this was the first day of the first term of her first school.

Therefore it is to be hoped you will excuse her when I tell you that the last straggler —the fat, square, bland faced Dinkelmeir in its hood and heavy stocking, though the time was only Indian summer—had hardly disappeared down over the slope into the fringe of sycamores about the prairie stream that hedged the Flat when she laid her head down on her unpainted, ancient desk and cried.

It was a pretty head, covered with thick brown hair that had just enough curl in it to make it stand up and fluff, and there was a pinky white neck below the fluff. There were the tips of pink ears showing, too, for this schoolma'am did not believe in hiding those necessary adornments entirely. Neither were her sensible dark skirts quite so short as those she had seen back at home, 'nor was her neat blouse quite so low at the neck as those one met every day on the streets of the towns.

Score one more for the new teacher.

But now she had reached the jumping off place of her courage and endurance, right now, at the first getaway of her race in the new life! It had been coming all the nightmare week she had been at Tom Atkins' house across the stream and down a mile. It had been started when she left her mother and all her friends in the little Kansas town so far—so frightfully far —away.

True, Mrs. Tom was kind and sympathetic, not without a certain tact, and the mile and a half walk through the tall trees that spread along the stream was more than delightful. True, also, Blue Sage Flat paid the princely salary of one hundred and twenty dollars a month for a teacher from "back east." These were assets. But the awful hunger of loneliness and the faces of the eleven whom she feared utterly were liabilities that appalled her.

So she clinched her hands on the desk's edge and cried as she had longed to cry all that long week, with wailing sobs that cut the silence unashamed.

She was occupied completely and did not hear the soft thud of a horse's hoofs on the untrodden earth without, so that the rider who approached came abreast of the open door with an unobstructed view up the mean little aisle between the desks to that young brown head.

The rider, too, was young, and he had a cocksure face, ready to laugh at a moment's notice. Also he had a bet with two others of his ilk to meet the schoolma'am first. He was alert and a trifle overconfident as he rode in across the sage, for he knew good and well that he had a way with women; but that first glance into the house sobered him completely.

He drew rein and leaned sidewise in his saddle, and his merry, dark eyes became distressedly grave. This was a pretty how-de-do. He had heard all about Miss Ransome. All the cowlands thereabouts had. He knew she had brown hair, that her eyes were not blue but gray, that she had worn a brown tailored suit with low shoes and silk stockings, all topped off by a saucy brown hat turned back from her face and lined with brown stitched pink.

He knew she was a pippin and a peach and that Mrs. Tom had told Slim Acres that she was fond of dancing and that she could play the piano and sing all the latest songs.

So you can see it was somewhat of a poser to be handed a wallop like the spectacle before him of tears and honest to goodness obs.

But it is to the credit of the newcomer that he forgot the disappointment in true anxiety and wondered what on earth he could say to turn off the shower. He removed his wide hat—it was his best one, reserved for his trips to town and decorated by a fancy spotted band—as a preliminary precaution, and cleared his throat.

In just about two seconds he got the pep all right.

The brown head lifted with a jerk and a convulsed face, streaked with salt water, confronted him.

Two beautiful wide, gray eyes—beautiful even in their swollen and discolored lids behind their swimming tears—stared at him in half scared astonishment. A trembling mouth was parted over genuine pearly teeth.

"Of all things!" snapped Miss Esther Ransome. "Do you spy on people's privacy out here? Go away from that door!"

No one noticed the Crawford boy. He was playing round the blackboard. But presently a cowboy stopped chewing to look.

—for Rich, Red Blood, Firm Stay-There Flesh, a Clear Healthy Skin and the Power of 100% Health Take

MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS

Nine out of every ten people working inside most of the time fail to get enough oxygen into their lungs or enough strength-building nourishment from their foods. As a result they become thin, nervous, sunken cheeked, hollow-chested, rundown and underweight with practically no resistance or power to fight off the germs of disease. If such folks would only get some good, firm, solid flesh on their bones, build up increased nerve force and vitality, enrich their blood and provide the proper muscle, bone and brawn making elements by taking MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS with each meal they might easily, quickly and surely fortify themselves against the danger of winter's colds and ills.

Be the strong, well-built man, with plenty of that firm, "stay-there" flesh of sturdy health, the magnetic personality and the vigor and force to make the best of your opportunities. Start today taking two of MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS with every meal and watch the improvement in your strength and appearance.

MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS contain a highly concentrated form of all three vitamines, true organic iron, the necessary lime salts and other vitalizing elements which Nature provides for perfect vigor of body and mind.

Here is a simple test that will plainly show just what MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS may do for you: First, weigh and measure yourself. Next, take MASTIN'S VITAMON—two tablets with each meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week, and continue taking MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS until you are satisfied with your gain in weight, "pep," energy and improved appearance.

WARNING: Your safety and protection depend upon getting MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS—you must say MASTIN'S to get the Original and Genuine VITAMON—the World's standard—recommended by physicians and used by millions. Now it is one thing to go troubadouring gayly up to a brand new interest with a weather eye out for future friendships and quite another to be sat upon like a toad and a caterpillar and a worm. The fairly good looking mouth of the young man in the saddle shut with a snap of its own and an imitation sunset drowned out his tan.

With slow insolence he brushed the rim of the expensive sombrero, set it back on his head at a careful angle, straightened up on his horse, and rode away. When he was well out of sight beyond the poplar trees he spread an expressive hand palm down and delivered himself softly of some choice and carefully selected oaths.

"Not for mine!" he finished decisively. "Good-night, nurse! Get along home, Pronto. Though dam 'f I know what I'll tell those long legged popinjays at th' bunkhouse."

Lucky Sid.

PRONTO, eager eyed and shuffling, told off the miles that lay between the Blue Sage Flat and the Lazy X in all too short a time.

"Well, Lothario, did yuh meet th' little princess?" inquired Cuff Benson, stopping half way to the water trough with a wash basin in his hand. "I notice you come from that direction."

"You notice too darn much," answered the rider pointedly. "Ain't there any other place to ride in that direction but Blue Sage Flat?"

"Um," mused Cuff, rubbing his chin; "peeved, eh?"

He turned and raised a stentorian call.

"Boys," he yelled, "here's Babe come in from th' Blue Sage Flat with a grouch stacked up a mile high. Come see."

A half dozen cowboys, all washed up for supper, came promptly with gimlet eyes ready to search Babe's "innerds" shamelessly.

But they had their trouble for their pains. He unsaddled and turned the pony into the corral, grinning with assumed good nature.

"What folks don't know won't hurt 'em," he said, "an' this bunch's pretty all fired healthy."

Babe Cutler rode no more toward the Blue Sage Flat, and he paid his bet to Cuff and Sid Carrol with a pensive readiness that did not escape the Argus eyes of those worthies and which roused in them a desire to know its reason.

But if Babe had ill luck in his initial attempt to meet the schoolma'am there were others who were more fortunate. Sid, for instance, who came home one day a week later, grinning fatuously and full of the schoolma'am's praises.

"Gray eyes," he stated positively, "gray for sure—gray as smoke. An' hair! Say, mamma! It's brown an' curly an' thick as Silver's mane!"

"Look here," interrupted Charlie Spikes, "why will yuh compare a lady to that flea bitten skate of yours?"

At another time such reference to Silver, slim, willing, tough, and pretty enough for any cowman to straddle, would have brought instant fight out of his master. Now, however, Sid was too full of his subject and passed the insult over.

"An' th' little neck under th' hair is white, like a candle when it comes out uh th' box——"

"Yuh make me tired!" said Babe disgustedly. "There's a shade of pink in her skin."

A great and sudden silence fell on the group. They regarded the speaker gravely. Sid put both hands on his hips and leaned forward.

"Is—that—so?" he inquired drawlingly. "An' where, and when, Lothario, did you find that out? I thought you'd never met her?"

"Paid that bet pretty prompt, too, didn't he?" some one else wanted to know. "Seemed indifferent, sort of."

Babe snapped the ash from his cigaret and walked away, but the back of his neck was red. Every one of the bunch behind him saw it. Each one laid it up as suspicious evidence of something untoward to be unraveled in future—to the chagrin and discomfort, if possible, of their mate.

A Frozen Lochinvar.

AND in the meantime Miss Esther Ransome had, metaphorically, shaken her slim shoulders and gathered up the reins of her new life as if that first terrible panic had never been. She was built of good stuff and had soon rallied her spiritual resources.

She was already fitted into Mrs. Tom's modest household as one of the family, and the beautiful walk through the trees along the stream had cast its spell upon her. She had conquered the youngest Dinkelmeir positively, had coldly informed the Crawford boy of his colossal ignorance in regard to the antiquated value of letters as compared to sounds, and had battered down their wall of opposition like a soldier. Therefore she was cool and collected and was already feeling herself master of her destiny.

She had also relegated the bucket from the back stoop to a shelf and instituted a system of individual drinking cups by means of some thick paper, scissors, and a bit of glue, sitting up half a night at Mrs. Tom's to accomplish that end. She was feeling that virtuous self-satisfaction that comes with all uplift movements when we are the uplifters.

Those thus elevated don't seem to get the same effect.

At any rate she was that most delectable product of the whole world, a young girl just beginning a life work, for the first time self-supporting, interested in her particular sphere, and—the only one of her peculiar kind within a radius of many man infested miles.

It was odd how many male riders found it imperative to seek straying cattle in Blue Sage Flat—how unaccountably thirsty they became just about the time they reached the seat of learning. Half the rangeland knew about those individual, collapsible, brown paper drinking cups before two weeks. The Lazy X knew all about them—except Babe.

He displayed a cold, not to say frozen, indifference to everything connected with mental improvement, a state of affairs entirely foreign to his former habit.

Cowland Has a Dance.

WHEN Miss Ransome had been a month at the Flat cowland felt a sudden desire to dance. Dances were few and far between, but the urge to shake a foot seemed to take the outfits simultaneously, and word went scurrying about the ranches that they were to "come one, come all" to the store at Biller's Crossroads, the time honored scene of all festivities for forty years.

Esther rode beside Mrs. Tom, and her gray eyes were bright as the stars themselves. And you may well believe that there were masked batteries on every side as she entered the long room of the store. Comely matrons with their offspring in rows beside them, buxom girls in ruffles and ribbons, their natural cheeks a trifle too bright, their figures a bit too sturdy for extreme grace, but young and sweet withal, viewed her with eyes as sharp as needles.

"She's got on brown again," they opined. "It's crêpe de chine, ain't it? An' it's trimmed with coral. My, ain't it a swell combination!"

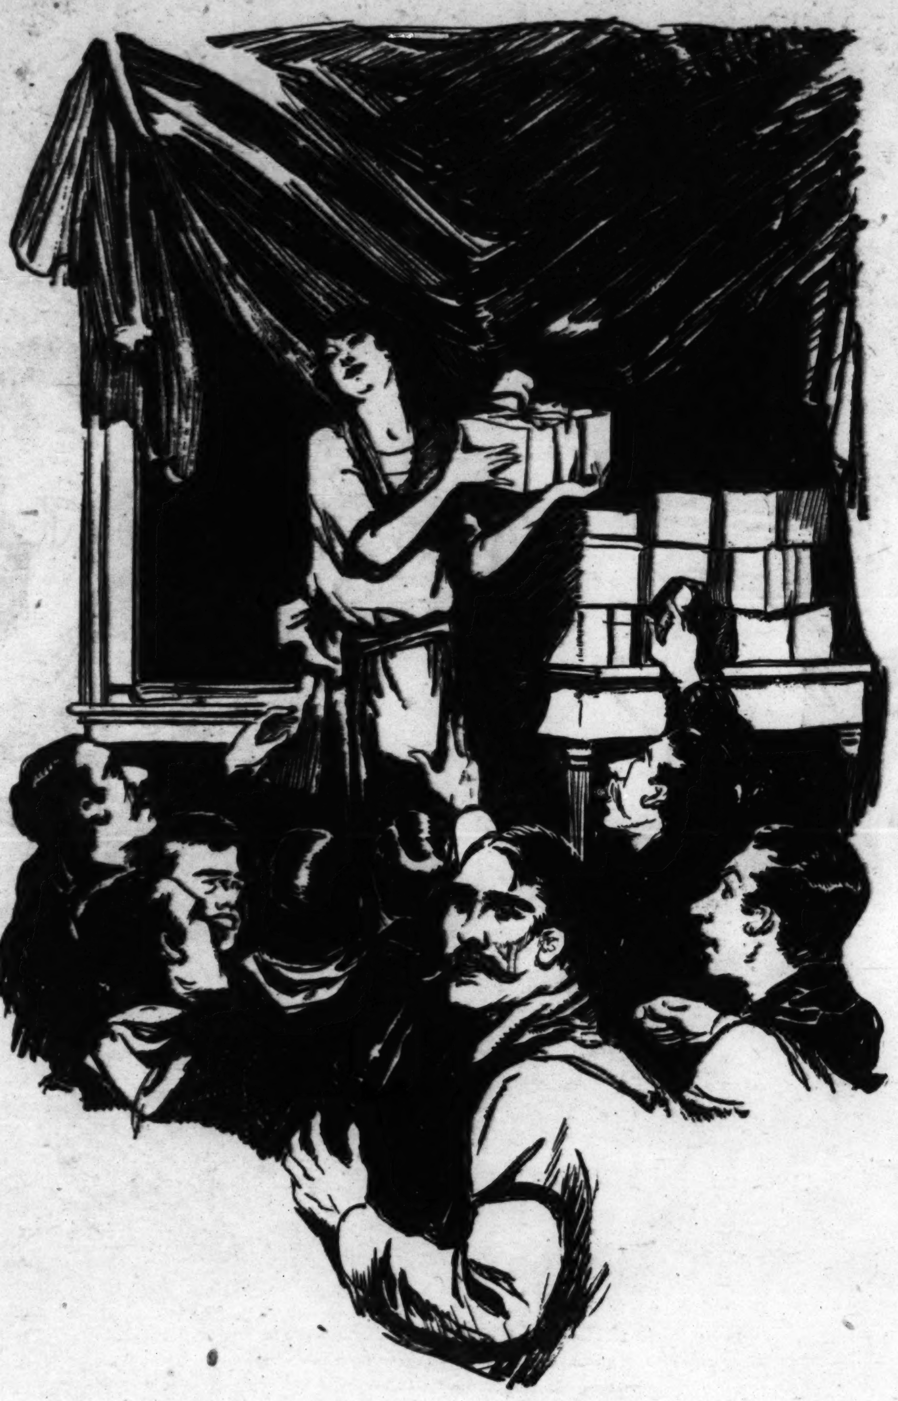
"She does her hair like a bob—rolled under, ain't it, Lizzie? Curly—'tis so."

"Yes, an' her slippers are brown satin, an', land sakes, there's a run in one of her stockin's! Clear up th' side, I do declare! Great goodness—there's one in th' other one, too!"

"No! Lizzie, are you sure? Ain't it one of them clock things they're puttin' in the stockin's now—there's a little arrowhead at top."

A sigh of relief followed as it was discovered that the damning runs were clocks and no mistake.

Taken altogether the new schoolma'am was as different from the general run of her sex present as an exquisite autumn leaf is different from a plush covered platform rocker.



The plain pink box with the ribbon on top was the last, and sold to Sid Carrol for thirty-seven dollars.

At first glance she seemed disappointingly plain in her slim, trim dress of brown with its slight touches of coral, her little sleek head with its rolled under hair. Then, as lively masculine eyes took her in avidly, there was something different about her—yes, that was it, different. They didn't know what, but it was there, a difference.

And how sweet and approachable she was! Those who had nonchalantly passed through the Blue Sage Flat and "knew her well" presented themselves with bows and scrapes, to be accepted one and all for a waltz or one-step. The girl found herself swamped with partners. The Lazy X was large and prominent on the list—there almost to a man.

"Great Scott, Babe, if you don't hurry," warned Sid, "you won't get a chance before morning!"

"Why," drawled Babe coolly, "I don't know's I care a—whole lot."

"Eh? Say, wise boy, you losin' your mind? Ain't no one died an' left yuh a legacy, have they?"

But Babe was already bowing elaborately before a bunch of blushes and pink ribbons and didn't seem to hear.

That was a great dance. Lights and lanterns glowed in rivalry to the youthful faces, the spaces of the raftered roof gave back the "shuff shuff" of the gliding feet, and young hearts beat high.

"Dearie," beamed Mrs. Tom, "you've got th' whole bunch locoed! How many times has Sid Carrol ast you?"

"Five," said the schoolma'am modestly. "He dances well."

"An' Babe Cutler?"

"I don't know."

Now, she knew well that the tallest, straightest, handsomest boy in the house—the one with the blackest eyes and hair, the most indefatigable dancer—was Babe Cutler. Sid had seen to that—and that he did not ask her for a single step. She knew also that he had looked down the aisle of the Blue Sage schoolhouse once to behold her in ignoble tears. There had been, on sober second thought, nothing criminal in that. Any one might ride by the Flat—in fact, how many of these youngsters hadn't? But there was in her consciousness an uncomfortable sense of shame for her own hot words, and that was sufficient to make her hold her head a trifle higher when she passed him on the floor, to give her an added air of superiority toward him.

As far as Babe was concerned there might have been no new girl in the country. He just didn't see her, so to speak. But you can bet his comrades did, and took in all the signs.

"There's somethin' happened," Cuff told a couple of the Lazy X boys in whispered confab when the night was half over. "Never saw his nibs so plumb cold storaged in my life. Can't tell me he ain't seen her before." And they went in solemn file to find him.

"Babe," said Sid, "we're wise. You're scared to ask her for a dance. Bet you Silver against your Pronto you don't dare."

Now, what healthy male of twenty-four ever took anything like that?

Babe flushed and scowled.

"If you're so all fired smart," he said, "introduce me."

There was a crowd about Miss Ransome, as usual, but it fell apart for the boys from the Lazy X, and when the girl looked up she met the same dark eyes she had seen before, though they were as distant as moons.

For one heady moment she meant to refuse his stiff invitation. Then her good sense triumphed, and when the music struck up Babe found himself drifting out with the little figure in his arms, its silken feel a new intoxicant. Babe made some rambling remark, but her reply was so cool that he did not repeat the effort, and they danced out the number in a strained silence.

"What on earth's th' matter with Babe Cutler?" Mrs. Tom wanted to know as they rode home in the chilly dawn. "He only ast you once—an' him th' greatest lady's man in all th' country"

But the schoolma'am was half asleep and did not answer.

She was not so far gone in dreamy slumber, however, that she could not catch Mrs. Tom's guileless meaning of Babe's intentional slight, and her inward soul stiffened with embarrassment. She wished violently that she had refused him, as she had at first intended.

Why on earth hadn't she? Just why hadn't she?

Wait until the next opportunity—just so.

But no such fortification was going on in the breast of the cowboy.

His grandiloquent renunciation of the downward spread palm that day at the Flat seemed, since the dance, somehow vague and unimportant.

The feel of the little, sleek, brown clad body in the bend of his arm had filled him with fatuous comparisons. Wasn't a "skirt" in the country that felt so—kind of light and straight and soft underneath. They were more solid, those other girls; you could grip them good and hearty and swing them wide on the corners. But this girl, now—holy smoke, you couldn't pull no rough stuff like that on her. Why, those little feet of hers would simply fly off the floor if you swung her hard. You had to kind of loosen up, let her turn herself, and follow after—all sort of respectful and at your distance. And that wonderful soft, slippy feel of her——

The openly sung praises of the new schoolma'am which greeted his ears at the Lazy X made him weary. He who was supposed to be a connoisseur on feminine charm smoked in pained aloofness and had no comment to make.

"A fine stab you made th' other night, Lothario," they jeered. "Regular frozen face party. I bet you said 'Good Floor' an' she said 'Very'—and you said——"

"O, hell!" said Babe disgustedly. "Ain't there nothin' inside you poor boobs' heads but wind? I'd tell a fella!"

The Infant Terrible.

MISS RANSOME walked along the stream's edge. All the trees were flaming in their autumn livery. The high skies of this prairie country were blue and clean. She felt peppy, brisk, and business-like as she stepped along. Life was on tiptoe now. No more tears, no panic. The letters she wrote home to that Kansas town were full of references to her work and her methods, to her new friends and her ideas of uplift as applied to the outlying districts. The eldest Crawford boy trudged beside her. He did not have to come so far out of his way, but there was a devilish pertinacity of antagonism in him that still sent him arguing upon any subject she tried to instill in him. Today it had been the subject of wireless—and the lad had doggedly stuck to his query, "How can you talk on a wire if there ain't no wire? Huh!"

"I do wish, Henry, that you would go home now. You are far past the turnoff," she told him gently, but Henry persisted. He hung behind mumbling at intervals about "no wire" and "numbskulls."

The teacher was busily thinking of her monthly examinations and almost forgot him. She was recalled violently by the boy's shrill squeak, "——ain't it?"

"'Isn't,' Henry, not 'ain't.' Isn't what?"

"Cowboy from Lazy X. Babe. 'At's Babe, sure's shootin'! What's he comin' this way for?"

The schoolma'am blushed furiously. She could have shaken the child. Little pest! Anger rose in her like a tide. She glanced ahead down the magic vista of leafy floor beneath the trees and beheld a common little range horse, caparisoned heavily in saddle and rider.

However, this was Pronto, good as gold and favorably spoken of wherever cow horses were mentioned thereabouts, and he carried his dearly beloved master gayly forward at a canter. They did make a gallant picture had any cared to look for beauty in them, for Babe was lean and graceful and his blue shirt set off his dark eyes and the hair that shone black beneath the tipped sombrero's rim.

Nobody was looking, however.

They stopped respectfuly and the hat came off.

"Howdy, Miss Ransome," smiled Babe as if there had never been a thought of coldness between them.

"How do you do, Mr.—er—what did they say your name was?" asked Miss Ransome innocently. "I—think I met you, didn't I? So many, you know—excuse me."

"See here, Miss Ransome," he said frankly, "you're so sweet an' friendly with everybody else. Why won't you be friends with me?"

There was open and boyish yearning in Babe's voice.

The schoolma'am, being nineteen and feminine, caught the note and in spite of herself thrilled to it. That thrill made her more angry with herself.

"Friends," she said with dignity, "are people one can trust," though how the remark applied to the situation she did not specify.

"You could trust me," swore Babe eagerly, if somewhat diffidently; "if you want some one to trust, why, I'm a shinin' mark in that line. Cuff an' Sid, why, when they want some one to trust—really trust—they come to me. On secrets I'm a Maxim silencer——"

"I have no secrets," said Miss Ransome coldly.

"No," hastened Babe, "of course not. No really nice girl has——"

"Ah;" the gray eyes widened and shone balefully. "And yet you suggest them to me?"

The cowboy groaned. Could you beat it? Wasn't he the poor fish proper, always bungling!

"I beg your pardon," he said stiffly. "I didn't mean——"

"Good-night," said the schoolma'am, and if there was the slightest possible inflection on the second word she was innocent of intentional slang.

As she stepped out to pass the little horse and the tall boy standing bareheaded beside it there was a patter of feet in the dry leaves and a derisive voice behind.

"Yah!" it jeered. "Babe Cutler an' teacher! Teacher an' Babe! Babe's stuck on teacher! Yah!"

Miss Ransome turned furiously.

"Henry," she called in cold anger, "if you don't go straight home I shall punish you tomorrow, very severely!"

"Gosh-darn my luck!" said Babe savagely as he swung back on Pronto and left that place on a run. "What do I want to hang round for, anyway?"

But that was more than he could answer.

What youth has ever been able to answer that question when his inamorata frowns?

He would put out of his mind all memory of light little feet and a slender, silken form. At the very next dance a miracle happened.

Babe Cutler stayed at home!

For the first time since he had appeared on the horizon of that particular rangeland some seven years back as a stripling boy the best dancer in the region was not present.

And it must be said in justice that if the new girl noticed his absence she gave no visible sign. She nailed down her former advantage with more smiles, more democratic kindliness, and by daylight she could have had just about anything she asked for in that part of the country—from the male half of the population.

The Lazy X was loud in its adoration and lifted up its voice and sang. This eulogy was drivel to Babe, yet exquisitely interesting.

He smoked and listened.

"White this time, her dress was," offered Sid, "all softy like an' fine, and' she had a bow of ribbon, little bit of ribbon, goldy colored, somewheres underneath in front. Shone through."

Babe's right arm felt suddenly bereft. He was jealous of that "soft feel," could have smitten Sid for noticing it.

Right there Babe Cutler met his Waterloo, acknowledged his defeat in the lists of love. He turned sickly green around the lips and got up and left the idiotic group.

Yes, sir, he was in love.

Honest to goodness in love!

He knew it for truth. He'd heard of this kind that took sudden, just a look, maybe, or a handclasp—not to mention a whole long dance number—and wowie! you were a goner.

That was it. He was a goner—he, poor fish, who only offended her every time he opened his fool mouth!

He rode far that day on the boss' business, but the boss' business suffered. He passed three unbranded calves in Deep Coulee and never saw them.

Out In the Cold.

FOR the next two weeks the boy was genuinely miserable. Then came the electric word flashing round the ranches that Miss Ransome, still keen on the uplift, was going to give a box supper at the schoolhouse on Blue Sage Flat for the express purpose of providing a library for the use of all the country!

They all do this along in their first or second terms.

Now there was nothing in that good news to plunge him into the nethermost depths of gloom, but it did so plunge him.

Geewhillikins!" acclaimed Cuff, sparkling-eyed, "imagine th' little girl on that there platform sellin' th' boxes! Mistress of ceremonies! An' won't her lunch come high? Say, boy! If th' rest feel like I do about it she'll just have to move a whole Carnegie right out here, she'll have so much money to spend!"

Babe rode far again and his head felt like the cook's scrambled brains from overmuch thinking.

Could he go to that box supper?

Why not? He did certainly want to go. Nope. He recalled too vividly those widening gray eyes that day by the winding creek. They were sure cold and fightin' mad. She just wouldn't see him if he did go—and could he stand that? To see those grinning monkeys, Cuff and Sid, hoppin' about her—darn! Probably have the box spotted, too.

No sir! He dug his spurs into Pronto needlessly and gasped at his sudden leap. No, sir! He'd stay at home again. Regular old hermit.

The night of the box supper was cold and clear. There were stars above the rangeland, the creak of coming wagons, a fire in the schoolhouse stove, and not room enough by half.

However, every door and window was full of faces, the compact benches that replaced the seats a solid pack of humanity. There was the pleasant hum of expectancy. There were neatly combed and gala-clad children in conspicuous evidence. The eleven had been drilled to a man, for there was to be a program.

There was a mountain of paper covered boxes on the platform.

What flutter of feminine finery along the benches!

What edging in of prospective purchasers!

What scanning of fair faces, as this or that box went up, to catch a betraying blush!

It was all simple, genuine, happy.

Sid and Cuff and all the rest of the Lazy X boys were there and on tiptoe, all, that is, but one.

Out in the cold night, like a pariah beyond the feast, sat that erstwhile careless knight, that most confident Lothario, Babe Cutler, his leg over his saddle horn and his black eyes pensive with that sadness which ever attends the sickness of the heart called unrequited love.

In his left breast pocket reposed something which filled him alternately with pride and misgiving, which had caused him laborious days and sleepless nights—namely: a real, true love letter, and the best thing of its kind he could produce.

It was fine drawn, like a draftsman's elevation, on good paper, done with a Spencerian pen. It had been copied and recopied, changed, abridged, and amplified, a good fifteen times.

It was poetic, with that subtle insinuation and reference dear to a woman's heart, so thought its author; it was firm and strong with a man's undying passion. Once read it must find its mark in the heart behind the soft brown dress, or there was no truth in the old adage of the brave and fair, "he who hesitates," or any of the rest.

Babe and opportunity sat in the dark and waited—and they were not to be denied. Just before the pile of boxes was entirely gone one of the Bailys, puffed with oratory, came out to take a breath of air. Him Babe shamelessly whistled off the step and man and boy held a whispered confab which ended with the magic passing of silver, the satin slip of paper.

The die was cast.

How Not to Send a Note.

BABE wet his lips, and leaving Pronto to stand alone went to the least thickly fringed window to watch the stealthy progress of his plan.

Miss Ransome was on the platform, her rounded arms uplifted to the better display of the box she held. What adorable little wrists! What pink tipped fingers! Babe's hungry black eyes caressed them.

He saw the Baily boy edge up, innocently important, and stand in the crowd, the telltale bit of white in his pudgy fingers.

"See!" cried Miss Ransome laughing, her cheeks flushed, her gray eyes sparkling, "the biggest box yet! It has paper lace and one-two-three-five roses! What am I offered for this one?"

"Two dollars!"

"Two fifty!"

"Three!"

"Gone!" she said and reached for the money as she leaned down to deliver. Just here the oldest Crawford boy's gimlet eyes caught the glint of a letter in his mate's small hand and with the swoop of the bully he snatched for it.

"And this?" called the schoolma'am, "pink and plain, with a ribbon on top?"

"Five dollars!" cried Sid Carrol with a prophetic foreknowledge.

"Ten!" doubled Cuff and instantly a murmur ran like fire among the bidders that this was hers.

Soon Miss Ransome was all blushes, for this box threatened to insult every one sold previously by its arrogant expensiveness.

Outside in the night Babe Cutler clenched his fists and swallowed—he was past swearing—for he saw that little archfiend, the Crawford boy, disappear in the crowd with the epistle!

The plain pink box with the ribbon on top was the last, and sold to Sid Carrol for thirty-seven dollars. Partners were finding each other and settling on the benches for that most delectable event, the "lap supper." The murmuring voices rose to happy bedlam.

No one noticed the Crawford boy. He was playing round the blackboard with a piece of chalk—innocent childhood amusing itself.

But presently a cowboy at the back of the house with his mouth full of cake stopped chewing to look. Some one noticed his absorbed face and turned to look also. To look was to stare and soon the chattering mass on the benches became quiet, a sea of faces all turned one way, for this is what they saw appearing in large, round, childish script on the broad face of the blackboard:

"Miss Putty Face, Dear Madam. I beg leave to speak. No longu can I keep silent. It ain't in the heait of man. Your tupping feet have walked on my heait, and I ain't like I was. I love you.

"I am as dust beneath those little feet, Please answu.

"Faithfully and obediently,
"Babe."

The Whirlwind.

THE painstaking scribe was never to finish that damning superscription. A whirlwind in sombrero and boots leaped spectacularly over the packed benches, scattering cake and confusion, and swept him aside. A panting, sweating, wild eyed whirlwind whose face was tragic and who turned at bay by the blackboard to meet the general uprising of insult.

Foremost in the surge was Sid Carrol, his erstwhile mate, red with anger.

"If you're meanin' Miss Ransome by that there asper-a-sion," gritted Sid, "you've got t' fight an' that right now."

A blow followed the words and in twenty seconds there was such a howling, indignant free-for-all as the cow country had not staged for many a dull month. In the midst of it the tall boy with the black head, knocked free of his hat, went down like a reed, for every hand was reaching for him hungrily.

For one awful moment Miss Esther Ransome was paralyzed with terror, her hand at her mouth and all the color gone from her pretty cheeks. Her dilated eyes took in the sprawling sentences on the board. And then that something inside her which made her the sweet, courageous woman that she was rose up and cleared her brain with magic. She darted through the surging fringes of the mêlée and grabbed the Crawford boy by the shoulder with no gentle hand.

"Give me that letter!" she cried, shaking him in her anger. "Give it me this minute!"

The dilated eyes devoured Babe's prideful effort.

They shone and softened wonderfully for a second, then hardened with the light of battle.

In another moment she was in among the fighters, tearing at heads, arms, shoulders like a veritable fury.

"Stop!" she screamed wildly. "Stop! Stop this! Let me through!"

They were pretty wild, but they heard that shrill keening and reluctantly obeyed. They backed lumberingly out, leaving a cleared space in the lee of the platform.

Alas for Lothario!

Limp, battered, one eye dreamily closing, the black hair like a witch's mop, Babe Cutler reposed against the raised edge of the dais.

Down on her knees went the schoolma'am.

Straight to her breast she gathered the fallen head, while the gray eyes shot fire at the abashed crowd of adoring punchers who were but tilting in her honor.

"Fine bunch!" she cried bitterly, "a hundred-to-one fight! How many does it take to whip one man? And all before you know what it's about!"

"Great Scott!" whispered Sid, open-mouthed, "what it's about? Ain't that enough?" he waved a bleeding hand at the blackboard—Babe had done some damage at least—"Miss Putty Face! Putty Face! Holy smoke!"

"Putty Face nothing!"

Miss Ransome waved the soiled and crumpled missive.

"Read that! Pretty Face—get me?"—she was unconsciously falling into cowboy lingo, "and tripping feet. He slants his 'r's' till they look like 'i's' when they follow a straight letter—and Henry Crawford made them 'u's'—but it sounds like true man talk to me. Henry Crawford—" she raised blazing eyes to the round face of Henry's mother shining red like a moon in fog, "that—that—if I have to teach that unspeakable boy another day I shall resign!"

"Resign—now," came a one-sided mumble from the depths where Babe's face was blissfully hidden. "Resign now, sweetheart!"

"Now!" cried Miss Ransome like a parrot—"I resign now! In favor of Mr.—Mr. Cutler."

"Great geewhillikins!" said Sid Carrol helplessly, "Can yuh beat it?"

And the crowd, moving bewilderedly toward disintegration, agreed that it could not.

THE WANTED MAN

by Harris Dickson

THE STORY THUS FAR.

On opposite sides of Lake Marmion, in Mississippi, are two large estates—Bennington, owned by Maj. Kenneth Stark, and Marmion, owned by Gen. Bob Clayton. Their owners have long been at feud; first there was a political quarrel, then a bitter lawsuit over a boundary, and then a duel, following which Gen. Clayton fled to Salamanca, Latin America, with his young son Stuart. As the story opens Stuart has returned to the old home and is being hunted by detectives. When Uncle Nat, Maj. Stark's aged servitor, tells of the detectives, Barbara, Maj. Stark's beautiful daughter, and her creole guest, Mrs. Florian Razilly, become strangely excited. It develops the girls have been keeping a tryst in the woods with a mysterious horseman who is in love with Barbara. Barbara has given him Mrs. Razilly's name—Adelaide—as her own. Adelaide tells how the Salamancan consul has visited her husband on a mysterious mission. Uncle Nat visits Marmion house to warn Stuart of the detectives, but becomes offended when a dollar is thrown at him, and declares the young man is not Stuart. The girls go to the Lone Oak to meet the mysterious horseman and find Uncle Nat napping beside a log. He reveals to them his suspicions. Stuart arrives, announces his identity to Barbara, and asks her to become his wife. Piqued at his apparent imposture, Barbara rebuffs him.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT.

The Lie.

THEN they both heard a voice, the guarded, half raised voice of Mrs. Razilly calling out, "Adelaide, dear, we'd better be moving soon. I think the men are coming in."

Barbara nodded at Clayton, as if indorsed by the call of her friend, to whom she answered, "I'm ready—right now."

But Clayton stepped directly in front and barred the way as he spoke.

"No, stay here, just a moment. If I were free I'd wait for years. But I cannot wait."

"Nobody asked you to wait."

"That's why I shall tell you now. I want you to marry me when I come back from Salamanca—if I'm lucky in getting away."

"Then you may not——"

The half question, the anxious glance betrayed her. Before she realized it, before she could step beyond his reach, he was holding her close, very close, closer than Barbara Stark had ever been to any man. As if she were tossed into a stormy sea, the girl felt herself fighting, fighting and losing—with a sense of triumph at being lost.

"Let me go! Let me go!" Both her hands were beating against his breast, struggling to push him away. But he was strong, and she exulted in his strength. "This is shameful," Barbara whispered.

"No, it's glorious, glorious! You will go with me now. I can find a way." The intoxication of new mown hay was in his nostrils, and the madness of possession thrilled his soul.

His intensity overpowered Barbara, the will to resist was gone. His lips were drawing nearer, dizzily nearer to her own. Her senses swam at their touch. She had played with fire and it was scorching her; the hot blood throbbed in her throat and ran tingling through every vein.

"O please, please," she begged. Barbara was begging now.

"No, I'll hold you forever. You are mine."

Then terror came, and again the frantic beating of her hands against his breast. She would say anything, do anything, lie, cheat, steal, just to get loose. Her brain staggered, and out of frenzy she spoke at random.

"O you don't know what you're doing. I'm married!"

"You? Married?" His arms dropped as he stepped back.

It seemed an age that they confronted each other, an age of bewildered silence, during which he stared at her, trying to understand and trying to repent. Comprehend he could not, neither could he repent.

"I never dreamed that you were—married." That was all he said.

Barbara said nothing at all. It was not the character of Barbara to temporize with a lie. The major hated lies and so did she—except old Nat's, which were ingenious and delightful.

She winced before Clayton, abased, and hanging her head for shame. She had lied because she was afraid, she who had never known a falsehood or a fear. Barbara felt his eyes fastened upon her as if they searched into the depths of her cowardice and deception. It galled her to imagine his contempt, she, the upstanding Miss Stark, whose pride it was to be self-reliant and frank as any man. What could he be thinking of her? O, yes—that she was humiliated, like any fool of a married woman who made a slip. That's what he thought; of course he did. She dared not raise her eyes; such a man would despise her if he knew she feared him, and could only take care of herself by hiding behind a craven lie.

But suppose she told the truth? What might he not do? No matter. She deserved it.

"I will look up! I will tell him!" she nerved herself again and again before the strength came. Miss Stark's face had gone utterly white when, with clenched hands and steady lips, her resolute chin arose. Brave enough she met his eye, but her tongue stumbled as she tried to say:

"I—I—I cannot leave here without——" There she stuck fast.

"Without what?" he inquired very gently.

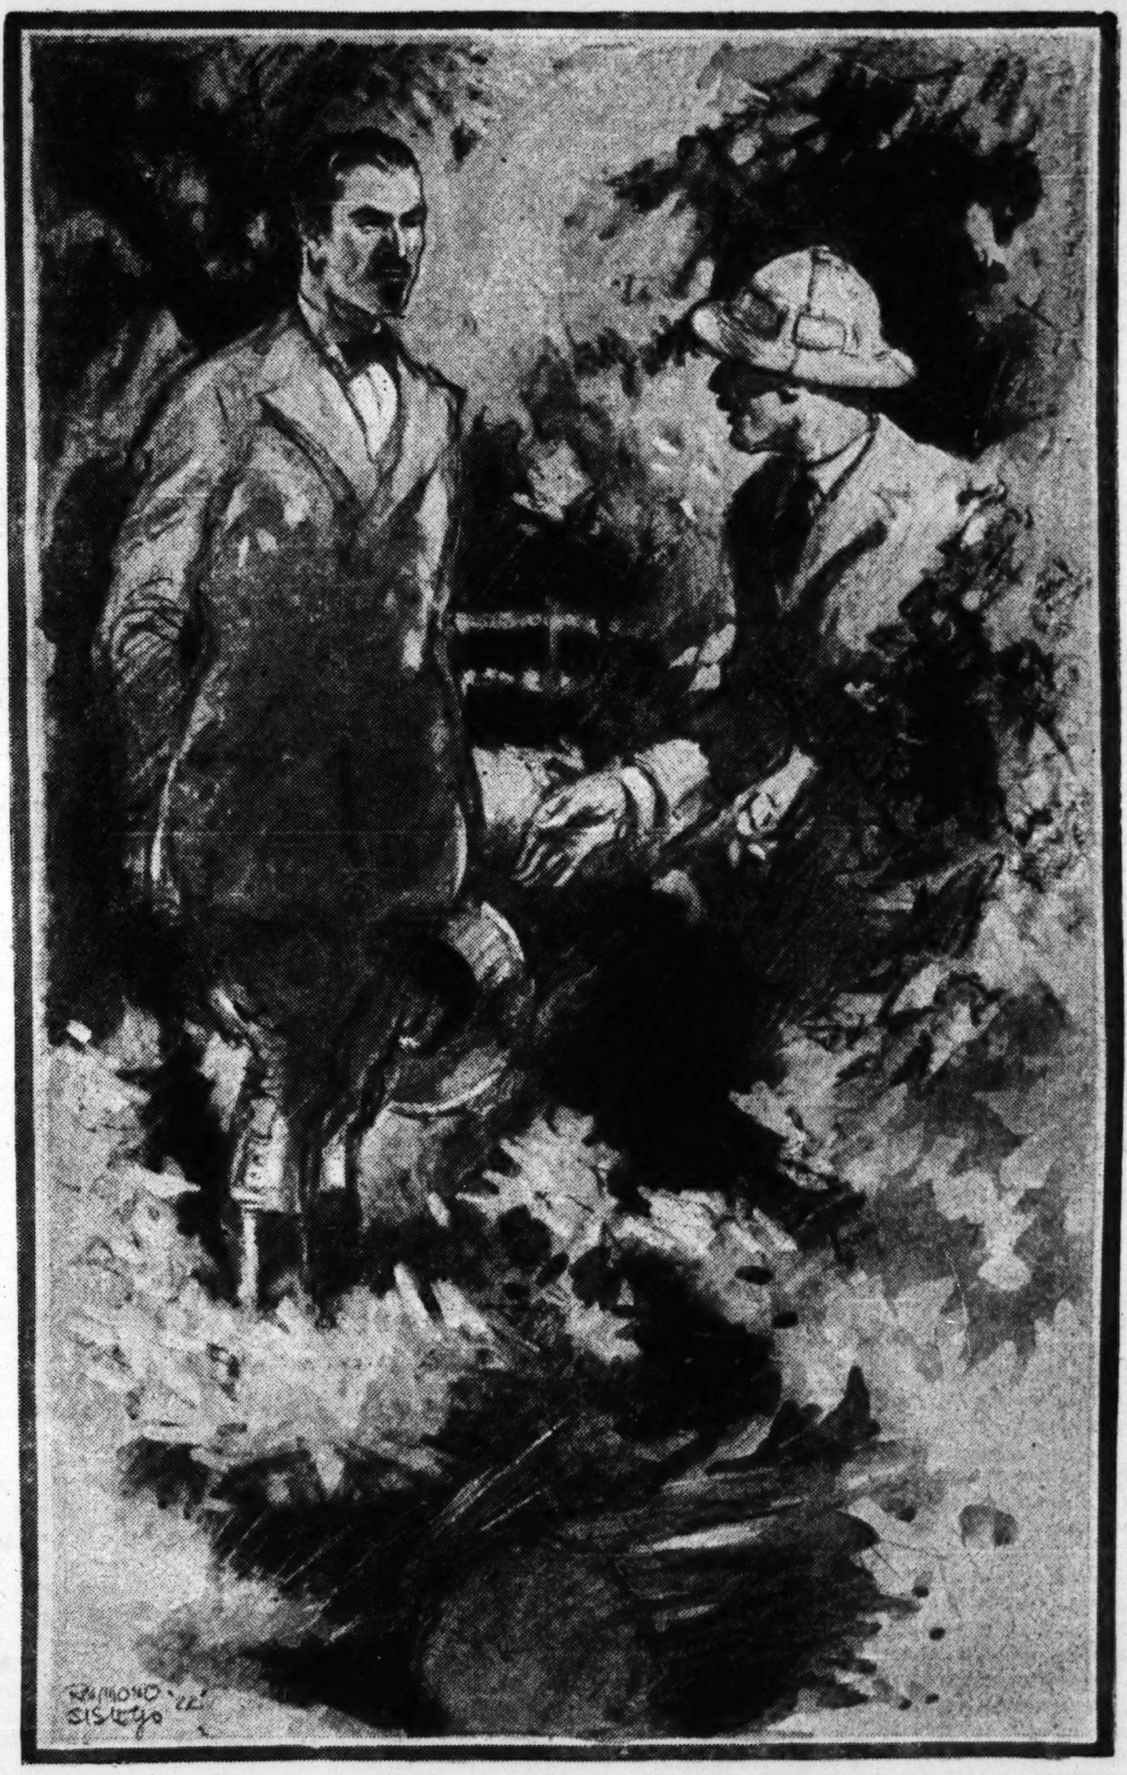
"Without telling you——"

Along the road beyond the greenery there came a scurry of hoofs as two horses burst through the canebrake, and, terror stricken, Mrs. Razilly flung the bridle of the gray to Barbara.

"O, Bar——" she caught her herself—"O, Adelaide! Adelaide! Quick! Florian is here."

In presence of the panicky wife Barbara could not confess. A man might understand—for men always pardon the follies committed on their account—but another woman would laugh, especially one whom Barbara had jibed for being bullied by a husband. "Hurry! Hurry! I'm so frightened!" The creole trembled while her horse went dancing on all fours, and Barbara's gray began to prance. She had no time to set herself straight, no time for anything except to mount and ride. Mrs. Razilly was already crashing through the cane when Barbara sprang upon the log, leaped into her saddle, and followed.

"I must tell you something," she waved back and called to Clayton. Then she was gone.



It astounded Florian to find a man at his very elbow.

Barbara's gray horse reared and dashed off behind Mrs. Razilly on the black, while Clayton stood immovable with eyes fixed upon a closing gap in the greenery through which the two had disappeared. Not until their hoofbeats had almost died away did he rouse himself to follow her, step by step, and mechanically as if he had not yet collected all his faculties. He pushed through the dense growth and saw their horses speeding across the fields on a course which held the canebrake between themselves and Lake Marmion, for Mrs. Razilly was anxious to avoid detection. Again and again the woman on the black glanced over her shoulder, then raced the faster. But the other never turned her head, not even as she plunged into the farther woods and vanished.

No disaster could be more complete. Many times, in his rough life among the Salamanca mountains, Clayton had seemed just on the point of grasping his heart's desire, only to find himself fettered to a rock whilst his dream slipped through his fingers. Three times he had staked his last penny and his last ounce of energy upon some hazardous game and lost, irretrievably lost—then buckled his belt the tighter and smiled upon a world which still invited him to conquest. But here was a loss which forbade all efforts to retrieve.

For one moment the old combative gleam flashed into Clayton's eyes as he considered his swifter sorrel. He darted to the oak and was reaching for his bridle when he checked himself. No, he could never pursue the wife of another man.

His dream was ended and the book was closed. Yet she had called back to him that there might be something more. What could she mean? Nothing that really mattered. Nothing mattered now except the dishonor of seeking her. At that he smiled. Honor or shame, hers had been no unwilling kiss, nor the cold, dead touch that gave him no response. Their souls had mingled at the meeting of their lips, and in that moment of madness she had been completely his.

The woman had been won and lost, leaving him more utterly alone than Clayton had ever felt in the isolated arroyas of Central America. Even there he could find comrades who filled his needs, for there he craved no other. But here, almost upon the acre where he was born, the universe seemed stripped of human companionship and peopled only by his dreams. Around him lay the silence, and he resented a sound which marred it, a paddle rasping against a boat. Somebody was coming.

It fretted Clayton to be disturbed, but there were powerful reasons why he must not be taken unwares. So he parted the cane behind him and watched a man who stepped ashore and stooped to draw his boat a little higher up the bank. The stranger might be a secret service operative, and desirable to avoid. But this now seemed impossible, for the sorrel stood openly beneath the oak, and must be soon discovered. Besides this, Clayton had ridden from home unarmed, and was helpless unless he got close enough to grapple with the other if he drew. Keeping hid, Clayton scrutinized the newcomer, and caught his visible start as he straightened up to gaze sharply at the sorrel, then to look around as if searching for somebody.

On a Blind Trail.

PLAINLY he was not a planter of the neighborhood. His dress seemed that of a city sport—correct fishing togs and white cork helmet. Now Clayton recognized him for the third fisherman who had come with Major Stark and Dr. Humphreys. At this Clayton also gave a start, and experienced the same unrest that the other man displayed. Perhaps this might be "Florian," of whom the thrummed sail over the leaks I found that one of the sea cocks had been knocked all to bits with a flogging hammer, and I knew that Capt. Mildmay hadn't exaggerated in the least.

But we managed to worry through that gale all right—and after many hazards beat a way down to better times. I did a lot of thinking of one kind and another during those days; and there were times, I tell you, when my immortal soul curled up inside me like a withered leaf and left me weak at the knees and shivering. There was an atmosphere of unrest and nastiness all about the Montana; men moved surlily, with growlings; there was no elasticity and confidence anywhere. I've never made a trip in a hearse, but I'd imagine such a trip wouldn't be unlike the weeks aboard that ship, with the skipper tied down to his bunk and discovering a fresh pain every day and the mate drinking himself stupid on hidden supplies. I tried to find out his contraband grog, you may be quite sure, because I wasn't exactly in love with the notion of running that barge single handed; but Mr. Prosser was far too cunning for me. But what gave me the chiefest trouble was the fear that sooner or later the crew might get their tails up and cut loose—with Sheila aboard! She blamed me and turned the frozen look on me because I hazed those guttersnipes for the good of their souls; and I couldn't tell her why I was doing it. Men who are worked to weariness just drop asleep when they're released from duty and haven't any time to spare in plotting concerted action. That was the way I looked at it, anyhow.

Fire on Board!

AND for all my pains that ggirl looked at me mostly as if I were just old mud! Old Capt. Mildmay was the only pleasant person aboard, so far as I was concerned; he'd taken a good deal of a fancy to me, and he told me all about his feud with Maguire several times. And he always finished up these recitals by saying:

"Mind, Symes, the Montana's got to get home. She's not expected to finish the trip, but she will finish it. We'll ruin thata woman killing hog of a miser!"

It was quite easy to think that way when we got down into fine weather, where even the Montana couldn't help but keep dry and fairly comfortable—except for the live stock, of course, that weren't signed on the articles but which worked harder than any of the crew. If I'd been an ornithologist I could have made a fortune in describing the different varieties of creepy-crawlies the ship bred in her seams and planking. But in any case I shouldn't have had time, because, when we were down about the line or thereabouts we made the discovery that the Montana was on fire and so there we had our troubles all ready and waiting for us, and we set to work to fight fire. No light task. It was away down for'ard; deep down. It must have been smouldering for ever so long before we noticed the smoke coming up; and then, when we opened the hatches there was the forehold like a summer's afternoon in hell.

"We'll never do anything with that," Prosser said. "She must be red hot to her keelson."

"We'll have a shot anyway," said I, and promptly covered up every opening there was, bored a couple of holes in the decks, and set the hands to the head pumps, with our hoses led through the decks. They grumbled like the mischief, and I'd a lot of hard work to keep them from bolting; but we kept at it. Then we were overtaken by some particularly foul weather, and we had to do our fire fighting in the intervals of shortening down and keeping on our feet. I got scared all over again, and this time it wasn't for myself. So I went to old Mildmay, who was just hanging on to life by sheer will power, and suggested that the time was ripe for abandoning.

"You can go if you like," he said, with a sort of a sneer, "but I stay."

"So do I," said Sheila, and went away singing. That jarred me, and I took my solemn oath that there'd be a great deal more happen to the Montana than had already happened before I spoke another word about safety. And with the weather quieting down a bit, though it was still baddish, the outlook seemed rosier. It was only a lull. I went below at midnight, and congratulated myself on a chance of a decent caulk. Almost before my eyes were fairly closed, or so it seemed, I was wide awake again and listening. Something out of the common was happening on deck.

"Must be another of those black squalls," thought I, and turned over. But these were different sounds, if you can take me. Quite different, so very different that after a while I turned out, slipped on my clothes, and went up on deck. It was as black as sin and the ship was hove to. That wasn't all; the dock rats of a crew were getting the boats away.

"Mr. Prosser!" I called.

"Here!" he said; and that was the last I heard for long enough. It was as if the mainyard had dropped on my head just as I caught sight of our Mr. Prosser with his arm thrown up and some weighty thing in his fist.

It was the sound of a curious sobbing that fetched me back from the black wastes; that and the touch of something wet on my cheek. I lay still, trying to get my recollections back before I opened my eyes, and just as I was finding the fringes of thought something happened. It was the touch of lips on my forehead. Then Sheila said:

"I didn't mean to be unkind—not really unkind." And so then I knew it wasn't heaven—not the far away one. Thinking it might embarrass her if I came back to life too quickly, I just gave a groan. When I did waken I was lying with my head in that girl's lap, and I've known more uncomfortable places! But there's no need to dwell too long on that phase of the affair. We had quite enough other things to think about. Led by the prize winning mate, the rats had bolted in bulk. They'd provisioned the boats during the mate's watches on deck; and they'd gone, vanished clean, leaving Sheila, Capt. Mildmay, and myself to see it through. They'd further taken the precaution of staving in such boats as were left. Didn't want any evidence. There we were—a hurt man, a dying man, and a girl—aboard a ship that was still on fire for'ard, with, from the look of things, nasty weather brewing up again—I shivered when I saw the barometer—and no land within a cold thousand miles. Pretty, wasn't it? Yet it didn't seemed to worry me much, remembering what I'd heard and felt when I came back to my senses.

Capt. Mildmay and I discussed the question. It was a bad lookout.

"Best rig up a raft and clear out," said I, thinking of the girl. But his eyes blazed and he shook his fist at me.

"Go, if you like!" he shouted. "I'm too old to start abandoning ship at my time of life; and I'll break Maguire if I sell my soul to do it."

And so, as the girl's sentiments seemed much the same, and as I found that I wasn't as badly hurt as I'd thought, because I'd clapped on my thickest cap when I went on deck, and perhaps Prosser's courage had failed him when he downed me with the iron belaying pin, I decided to keep on going for a while.

"My Wife Beckons Me!"

I WON'T make any longer a story of it than I can help. We fought through that clear month of hard weather and patted ourselves on the back when we found that Prosser, in opening up the seacocks, had flooded the fore hold so much that the fire was put out. We worked like niggers all the time, and because it was necessary for the two of us, Sheila and myself, to work the ship on watch and watch, we didn't really see much of each other. But at odd times I did a lot of thinking. A lot of remembering, too; and so, one night, when I left that girl at the wheel, with the ship all snugged down and ready for anything that might happen, I toddled below to old Mildmay's cabin, intending to tell him a few things that were in my mind. But I found myself able to do nothing but babble about Sheila. Then I suppose I must have collapsed across the skipper's feet, because I have a sort of an idea that I heard him calling out for assistance. Next thing I knew was that Sheila was there in Mildmay's cabin beside me. I asked her what was happening on deck, and she said that, as the ship was riding easier, she'd lashed the helm and chanced it. Old Mildmay was pretty far gone.

"Stand up there alongside my girl," he said to me, with something of the old time rasp in his voice. So I stood up, my knees trembling, and the whole of me one embodied shake.

"They've taken away most of the authority from shipmasters," he said, "but there's one thing they seem to have overlooked. A British shipmaster has power to perform the marriage ceremony in case of need. I'm dying. I doubt if I'll live to reach port, and in that case my daughter won't be efficiently chaperoned. Mind you, Symes, I'm taking you at your word—you're going to bring this ship home to port?"

"If I don't," said I, "she'll take me down to the locker."

"I thought I sized you up right the first minute I set eyes on you," he said. "But you've still time to withdraw. I shan't last through the night; of that I'm certain. I've had a warning—I saw my wife beckoning me. If you'd like to make a raft and set that girl of mine adrift on it, you're welcome to."

I looked at Sheila. She looked at me for a minute and then flushed rosy red.

"I've loved her from the minute I saw her," I told Mildmay. "She's hated me most of the time since. Maybe she's got something to say about this plan of yours."

"Yes, I have," said Sheila. "Ashore or afloat," said she, "there's no man I've ever seen who can hold a candle to you, Jack." And with that she put her arms round my neck and kissed me full on the mouth. That gave me strength such as I'd never known before.

"Captain Mildmay," I said, very earnestly, "you're dying. One doesn't tell lies to a dying man. I'll safeguard your daughter as I've tried to safeguard your ship. That's on the word of a sailorman. Take this from me," I said. "If, when we make port, she changes her mind, there'll be no reason why she shouldn't. As man to man, you'll understand what I mean. But if she thinks this marriage ceremony you're about to perform is binding, it is binding, so far as I am concerned."

Port.

DEEP water skippers aren't overly given to praising their subordinates; but Mildmay caught hold of my hand. "I've met a white man, thank God!" said he. And then he read the marrage service over us, and Sheila Mildmay engaged to love, honor, and obey me till death did us part. I was like a man in a trance, I assure you. But after a while I shook myself and realized that I was a married man. Mildmay fell back on his pillows as soon as he'd recited the final words, and the ship gave a sick lurch. I turned to my wife and said: "You look after your father, I'll look after the ship." Then I went on deck, and tried to realize what it all meant. But my thoughts got busy with looking after the ship, and when I'd humored her through the rush of biting squalls that flared down on her, Sheila came up there to me, where I crouched over the kicking wheel, and I saw from her face that she was an orphan. After I'd comforted her as well as I was able, I said:

"You understand, Miss Mildmay, this was only a protective measure on your father's part?"

"What a lump of a silly fool you are, Jack!" she said, and held out her trembling hands to me. "I've loved you all along, if you'd only had eyes to see."

"How long?" I asked, afraid to grasp the happiness that was offered me.

"From the minute you said you were the Montana's new second mate, if you must have the truth," she said. "At least, I wasn't sure then; but after they told me why you licked Jorgensen, I knew."

"Remember," I warned her, "you can tear that page out of the logbook if you like." Did I say that Captain Mildmay had entered the marriage all up officially in the official log? "I'm not going to hold you to your promise if you change your mind; and beyond our two selves there's no one knows we're married."

She went down below and fetched up the official log, in which was the entry certifying our marriage. I took it from her hands and laid hold of the page, making ready to rip it out. But she snatched the book from my hands and hugged it tight to her breast. She looked at me with defiant eyes, eyes that drooped after a little while, as her rich color ran up into her cheeks.

"After we've saved the ship," she said, "we'll make plans for our honeymoon, my husband."

And we did save the ship. Twenty hours later a steamer sighted us and took us in tow, with a salvage crew aboard us, to make things easier. Damaged and doomed as she was, we got the old Montana into port, and I might remark incidentally that we broke Miser Maguire. But I wasn't thinking so much of that end of the business when next Sheila and I trod hard earth again. I noticed she had a parcel under her arm as we stepped ashore.

"What's that?" I asked. Mind you, after the steamer picked us up I hadn't even kissed her. I wanted to give her a fair chance after the emotional days we'd passed through.

"That's the official log," she said. "I'm taking it up to the British consul to get him to certify a certain entry as correct." And so then I knew my instinct had guided me aright when I signed on as second mate of the Montana.

THE WANTED MAN

"Hold on, Uncle Nat. Take this. Buy you a good cigar." A ten dollar bill, accompanied by a smile of comradeship, was not scorned like the silver dollar flung to him on the Marmion porch.

"Mister Stuart," he turned and said, "I'm pow'ful bad skeered o' dis note, but I knows you wouldn't axe me to do nothin' wrong."

Old Nat hustled towards his dugout, then halted to make another suggestion.

'O, Mister Stuart, ef it's jes de same wid you, couldn't you git to dat graveyard befo' sundown? I hates to go prankin' aroun' no sech place in de dark."

"Yes," Clayton reassured him, "I'll be there first."

RESPONSIBILITY

"And what did the poor man say?" asked her friend's husband from the other side of the drawing room.

Well, the poor man had naturally felt hurt and had shown an inclination to protest. "But he bowed slightly, and gave a wry, sly smile." Thus Mrs. Todd reconveyed the impression received by her from her William.

"He may have been insured against the results of his mistakes and incapacity," observed her friend's husband, "if he made mistakes and was incapable."

Mrs. Todd rose from her chair. Yes, she rose from her chair. "Do you mean to tell me——?"

Yes, he did mean to tell her.

"William," she cried, as soon as she and her husband were alone, "can it be true that even doctors, the men whom we charge with our health and our lives—and our children's—have no real personal responsibility, and that—?"

"I've heard it said so, a few times, or rather, in a few cases," returned her husband slowly.

"Yes, but——" However, it is easy for us to feel his wife's sentiments and to fill in her arguments.

Georgie got well again, and kept so, along with the new car and the bank account and the little association fund. But his mother would not quiet down. She was feeling more keenly than ever the modern tendency to shift responsibility to the shoulders of "society." In every direction we were steadily destroying a necessary sense of individual responsibility. And with that quite destroyed, we should have destroyed society itself.

"I'm glad I called Edith straight home from that campfire," she was saying a few days later. And she resolved to concentrate in the spirit of the present and strongest domesticity on little Jo: an individual mother in an individualized home.

Black horse lady had shown such terror.

And if he were in fact the husband of Adelaide, Clayton could not fight with him; neither could he suffer himself to be killed when so much depended upon his escape.

With the casual air of a gentleman who strolls for pleasure, Mr. Florian Razilly approached the sorrel. It was not a Bennington horse, which absolved Mrs. Razilly. But Florian saw only one horse, while he had distinctly heard the trampling of several. Were they going or coming? And where was the sorrel's rider? Then it disquieted Mr. Razilly to imagine that while he inspected the sorrel, the sorrel's rider might also be inspecting him—and Clayton observed Razilly's quick little jerk of his head when this notion struck him.

Then Razilly turned, and had he been more of a woodsman he need not have looked twice for a break in the shrubbery through which horses and men, and women, too, had recently passed. Not ten feet away the wary Clayton eyed him, so as to keep within arm's reach whenever Razilly broke into the open. The creole plunged through the thicket, shielding his face from the scratching of briars, and when he emerged beside the plantation road it astounded him to find a man at his very elbow.

No Thoroughfare.

"O!" HE exclaimed, and his tone acquitted him of being a detective, for secret service agents take things coolly as they come. He tried to steady himself, but could not conceal his excitement when face to face with Stuart Clayton. The government was searching four states for this man, and he, Florian Razilly, had located him—young, tall, Spanish looking, mustache and goatee, and the dress? It fitted the description and could be no other. To effect a capture Razilly must now dissimulate and throw the fugitive off guard. So he forced a smile and said: "I beg your pardon, sir, but I expected some friends to ride this way."

"I am not acquainted with your friends," the other man replied, almost touching Razilly's shoulder and moving nearer as the creole edged away.

"Did I not hear horses?" Razilly made his bland inquiry.

"Possibly. I heard them myself."

"Two ladies?" Razilly tried again. "Who were they?"

"I do not know." Clayton spoke the truth, and with such finality as discouraged questions.

"Forgive me; I was mistaken," Razilly apologized, profusely. "I beg a thousand pardons for my intrusion." Then he bowed himself away and blundered backwards through the cane.

A few seconds after Mr. Florian Razilly had tumbled into his boat and shoved off, Clayton hurried to the lake front and saw him paddling hard in the direction of the other fishermen, a strategem which Florian adopted for fear of alarming the fugitive.

His ruse succeeded admirably, for when the sacred glade was all his own again Clayton forgot his nervous visitor and leaned against the great oak to brood over what had happened. Five minutes ago he was living, planning, human, virile. It seemed strange how completely a man may die, yet remain alive. Tomorrow—through thousands of vacant tomorrows—he would never ride to this glade, never hitch his sorrel to that limb, never sit again beside her on their log. The glade, the limb, the log would still be here, yet the woman would come no more. Queerly enough, his most intangible and persistent memory was of new mown hay, which must forever link itself with that delirious instant when he had crushed her to him. The woman's bodily presence had departed, while the imponderable aura of her soul yet lingered and abided.

Uncle Nat Is Baffled.

NOT fifty feet away another man came sneaking toward the glade. Like an inquisitive alligator Uncle Nat's dugout poked its black snout from the willows and headed for the landing. But Uncle Nat wasn't studying about new mown hay, nor pestering his head over imponderable auras. He was hot and tired, and grumbling at the white folks who kept butting in to wake him up. If he hadn't been so grouchy Nat would never have got tangled in the brushwood and made such a splash.

Instantly alert, Clayton drew his sorrel out of sight and watched from behind the Lone Oak until he saw a pair of white eyes rolling this way and that, for wily old Nat did not propose to go blindfolded into another ambuscade. Nothing threatened him from the lake. So Nat figured that everybody was gone. The sun had dropped a bit; it was even shadier and cooler in the glade, and Nat felt powerful sleepy.

"Now, den," he muttered as he regained the log, "reckin I kin have some peace."

Then he stuck up both ears like a frightened rabbit, squatted and stared, for a hollow voice spoke unto him, saying:

"No peace for old Nat."

"Who—who—who dat?"

The Negro whirled and started to run, when Clayton stepped from behind the oak and came forward, laughing.

"Don't run, Uncle Nat," he called. "I want to talk with you."

"Talk wid me? Meanin' me?" Casting one scared glance behind him, he wondered if he could reach his dugout. He did not crave a second interview with this man whom he had been denouncing as poor white trash, common as pig tracks. But when he glanced back at the other's face Nat saw something which he had never noticed while on the porch at Marmion. He hesitated, uncertain and bewildered, eyeing the man who moved towards him, and held out a hand with the hearty greeting: "Shake, Uncle Nat, shake! How's my good old friend?"

"Fine, Mister Stuart, fine." Nat's voice trembled as he wiped both palms on the seat of his breeches. He shook hands, first one, then the other, then both, grinning and saying:

"Lordee, Mister Stuart, Lordee! I sho is tickled to see you."

"Yes, Uncle Nat," Clayton continued, with the same laugh of little Mister Stuart; so it did not surprise Nat to hear him say, "Gee! this feels like old times. Lemme ride in your dugout? Lemme ride?"

"Sholy, Mister Stuart; come 'long, come 'long. No." Nat darted to the water's edge and glanced at the fishermen. "No, you better not start from major's side. Ride roun' on yo' own side de lake, den I'll cross over an' pick you up."

"Not this trip, old friend." The grown-up boy shook his head with a sad kind of smile that Uncle Nat had never seen before. Long and curiously the Negro gazed upon him, up and down, from the wide brimmed hat to the leggings, finally coming back to consider the tiny black mustache. These personal additions were new, but the smile and the eyes, they were the same.

"Mister Stuart," he spoke in a haze of bewilderment. "Mister Stuart, you sho is got me bumfoozled. One time I claim dis ain't you; den agin I say dis is you."

"Well," Clayton demanded with a chuckle that left no lingering doubt, "What do you claim now?"

"Hit's jes like dis, Mister Stuart; over yonder at de big house I didn't take no real good look; an' I say to myse'f, jesso, 'Nat, dat nacherly can't be little Mister Stuart. But now,'" after a most critical dissection, "now dis is you, cause you favors yo' pa more'n you favors yo' own sef."

"Like my father, am I?"

"Egzactly, Mister Stuart, egzactly. You's jes de breathin' image o' yo' pa. Pears like I kin shet my eyes right now an' hear de ole gen'l talkin'."

Having made absolutely sure of his man, Nat scouted to the edge of the lake and reconnoitered the approaching boats, which came on slowly, but were still far enough away to give him time. Then he hurried back and said:

"Lissen, Mister Stuart, lissen. I laid off to tell you dis news when you fust come out on de gallery; but I plumb forgot, 'cause you was so busy, an' lef' in sech a rush. Now lissen good. Jes atter dinner two white men come pas' our house in a automobile an' 'quired 'bout you might p'ticular."

"Who were they?"

"Dunno, suh, strangers to me, an' ack like folks from up norf."

"What did they want?"

"Dey was cravin' to see you, suh; powerful sot on seein' you. Claimed dey was friends o' your'n. I p'inted 'em de big road to Marmion, but dat didn't suit. Peered like nothin' wouldn't pacify dem white folks cept fer me to come on ahead an' fin' out ef you was to home."

As Clayton listened he knew precisely what sort of men they were, not from any description given by the Negro, but from his general manner in alluding to them, especially the dubiousness with which he regarded their boast of friendship.

"Dey claimed to be pals o' your'n—I think dey said 'pals'—an' wanted to drap in."

"To pull off a surprise party?"

"Egzactly, suh, egzactly. An' ketch you unbeknownst, bein's dey was sech ole friends."

"Yes, yes." From the quiet way in which Mr. Stuart received it, Nat feared that his tale had fallen flat, and inquired, "Den you was expectin' 'em?"

"Yes," Clayton admitted, "I rather looked for a visit from these gentry."

"Suttinly, suttinly. Ef dey's coming' to visit you, dey mus' be all right." Which was worth precisely twenty dollars to Nat. "Den I jes as well go back an' tote 'em de news; an' tell 'em you's lookin' fer 'em."

"Just as well," Clayton muttered absently.

Complications.

IT was many a long year since Uncle Nathaniel Stark had got the chance to loosen up his tongue with little Mister Stuart Clayton. Now it wagged like the bell clapper on a frolicsome calf, going over every detail of his interview with Foxyjaw and Fatface—but kept muffled concerning the five dollars already collected, and twenty more that was due him. Yet he told of his engagement to meet them under the magnolia with a tip as to the whereabouts of their wanted man. Clayton listened attentively, but not with that same rapt absorption which the child had always given to Uncle Nat's accounts of Brer Possum's adventures. Sometimes Clayton didn't seem to hear, and the Negro noticed that he was kinder wool-gathering, even before Mr. Stuart interrupted him.

"No, Uncle Nat. Wait, wait. I can't be annoyed by those officers until I get something else off my mind. Then you may tell them that I am here."

"Suttinly, suh, egzactly." With the vision of twenty dollars dangling before him, Nat's eyes grew luminous. "Dere's jes one mo' thing, Mister Stuart. I s'picioned dem men at fust, an' 'lowed dey mought be comin' to 'rest some nigger off yo' place, 'cause I seen a pair of nippers in de car."

"Nippers? Yes, naturally."

Even this suggestion did not seem to rile Mr. Stuart. It appeared like he quit thinking about nippers right away, for a wholly different expression flickered into his eyes as he motioned Nat to a seat beside him on the log and asked:

"Uncle Nat, did you happen to see two ladies out riding this afternoon?"

"No, suh, never saw none, excusin' dem two what lef' our house."

"One on a gray horse and one on a black?" he questioned briefly.

"Yas, suh. Dat black's de major's Glencoe, out o' Sassy Bess, by Lawd Bennington. He's a pow'ful high stepper. An' de gray——"

"Never mind the horses. Did you know the ladies?"

"Bleeged to know 'em, suh, when I waits on dem ladies ev'y day. One of 'em is Miss Barbara Stark, de major's daughter. Don't you 'member when she was a teeny little chile, an' you come over dere one time, an'——"

"But the other lady, the other?"

"She's Miss Adelaide——"

"Miss Adelaide?" Clayton bounded up from the log and blood went rushing through his veins again. He felt the strength return to his arms. Old Nat also felt the power of his arm when Clayton grappled both his shoulders and repeated, "Did you say 'Miss Adelaide?'"

During his long absence from the States Clayton had forgot that household Negroes usually address a matron by her christian name. Old Nat had forgot nothing; neither could he remember anything while Mister Stuart kept shaking him so rapid. Nat's teeth knocked together like castanets as he looked up and answered:

"Miss Adelaide—leastwise dat's what she calls her own sef'."

"Then she's a young lady?"

"Not so pow'ful ole; her an' Miss Barbara's nigh 'bout de same age."

"But she—she's not married?"

"O, yas, suh. 'Cose she got a husban', suh, an' by rights I oughter call her Mrs. Razzle. But dat name comes so onhandy."

"Mrs. Razzle?"

"Yas, suh, dat's her husban' in de white hat what lef' dis landin' jes befo' I come. Dey's stayin' at our house."

"Razzle? Razzle?" Clayton repeated.

"Yas, suh. Sho is a funny name?"

"Very funny."

But there was no hilarity in Clayton's attitude as he sank again upon the log and appeared to be studying so hard that old Nat dared not speak another word. Presently, and without glancing up, he inquired:

"Uncle Nat, you will see those ladies when you go home?"

"Sholy, suh; dey'll be settin' right dere on our gallery."

After a long silence and much pondering, Mr. Stuart seemed to get his head sot, then turned and asked:

"Will you do something for me?"

"Do somethin' fer you? Lordee, Mister Stuart, it's already did."

"I thought I could rely on you—just to carry a note."

"Dere, now!" Old Nat laughed and slapped his thigh. "Ain't dat yo' pa' all over ag'in, in his sparkin' days? When de gen'l was young he used to be all de time sayin', 'Nat, I wants you to tote a note.' I was de chief note toter fer yo' pa an' Major Stark, whilst dey was co'tin' de ladies. Dey coted plenty ladies. Huh! I knowed enuff to hang 'em bofe."

A Note to a Lady.

HIS good old days were coming back, and Nat gabbled on delightedly while Clayton searched his pockets for paper, and found nothing except an envelope. The sound of nearer voices floated across the water, so Clayton stepped to the bank where he saw two boats apparently headed for this landing.

"Uncle Nat," he pointed, "are they coming in here?"

"No, suh; Mister Razzle's fixin' to go home."

"Razzle? Razzle?" Clayton kept trying to remember. "Uncle Nat, what is that name?"

"Jes Razzle, nigh as I kin git at it—Mister Flory Razzle, what runs a bank in N'Yawleens."

"Oh!" Clayton exclaimed. "Razilly? Florian Razilly?"

"Yas, suh. Dat's how de major speaks it."

This gave Clayton something else to consider. The banking firm of Gaumont & Razilly were financial agents for the Dictator of Salamanca. Razilly's awkward presence might not be a mere coincidence, which made it all the more imperative for Clayton to escape this night. This complicated the matter, but did not change his decision to see Adelaide.

"Uncle Nat," he urged, "get your dugout ready to travel."

"Ready, suh; all steamed up."

Hastily splitting open the envelope, Clayton began to write on the inside, and no seasoned veteran of intrigue would have set down such words in black and white.

Brief, hurried, and direct, they admitted of no two constructions, that "Adelaide" had been meeting the writer in secret and had left him saying that she had something more to tell. So Clayton implored her to meet him again at once, as he must leave the United States that night and might never return. He would come to her at any hour, anywhere, and she could trust Nat with her answer.

He covered the entire open space on the envelope and left room at the bottom for a cramped signature, "Stuart Clayton." No man of sense would sign his real name to such a paper, which he folded and wrote on the other side a single word, "Adelaide."

Clayton did not think, but the envelope already bore his typewritten address, "Señor Stuart Clayton, El Jucaro, de los Minas, Salamanca." This he scratched out with his pencil.

"Now, Uncle Nat," he cautioned, "be careful with this. It might cause trouble."

"Egzactly suh, egzactly." Nat grinned his experienced knowledge of such affairs. "I makes it a p'int never to stir up no trouble fer white folks."

"Be sure that nobody sees you give this to the lady. You know Mrs. Florian Razilly?"

"Mrs. Razzle!" Nat exclaimed, and his eyes bulged like a crawfish. "Dis note ain't fer her?"

"Yes, for Mrs. Razilly. Make no mistake."

"But," he protested, "I 'lowed you was courtin' Miss Barbara?"

"I am not courting anybody." And at his tone Uncle Nat shut up.

"Bring me her answer," Clayton ordered, "at once, to the old Fearne graveyard. I'll be waiting there."

"Lawd Gawd, Mister Stuart!" the Negro begged, "don't you come dat nigh to Bennin'ton on no sech bizness as dis."

"Do as I tell you."

"Suttinly, suh, egzactly."

"I'll take care not to be seen. You can beat those skiffs to Bennington. Here's your note. Deliver it."

"Suttinly, suh. Give it to Mrs. Razzle? An' don't let nobody see me? Egzactly, suh, egzactly."

Nat caught the envelope by one corner as if it were hot and started off.

It wasn't for me to say that the girl was the magnet that had drawn me from the commodious quarters of the Hesperus aboard that glorified rat trap of a Montana; but it may be that my face said more than my lips, for I noticed a sudden flush rise from the girl's throat.

"I've no hankering for those gilded Australian ports," I told Capt. Milmay. "I was reared in the guano trade and trained on nitre. The good old west coast for me, sir, if you've no fault to find with my credentials.

"Not a bit," said he. "I was only warning you for your own good. We'll ship ashore now and get you signed on, since you're determined."

When I left him to get my dunnage from Merton's I found I had more money in my pockets than any man ought to carry to sea. The Montana was due to pull out with that night's tide, and if I'd followed the ordinary course of nautical nature I suppose I should have blued the entire lot on a glorious spree. But when a man is thinking hard of one girl he doesn't hanker after the quart pots; so I expended my surplus in curious oddments—boxes of chocolates and trifles that might give a woman pleasure when they were sprung on her in the way of a surprise. Bonbons aren't obtainable in the slop chest of an average windjammer, and old Capt. Mildmay didn't look precisely the sort of a man to pander to the weaknesses of the gentler sex.

"You Are a Brute!"

WE hit the tail end of a rip snorter almost as soon as the pilot left us, and I began to wonder whether I'd made a wise choice. Such a ship as the Montana I've never seen. Overloaded she was, undermanned, with junk for rigging and gunnybags for sails—she reminded me of the sort of thing that might be found lost in the mazes of the Sargasso sea. And the first mate wasn't helpful, exactly—a weary old man with a monstrous grouse against everything ashore and afloat, especially against second mates and skippers' daughters! The crew were gutter sweepings that had to be taught their job, and as the mate didn't volunteer as schoolmaster most of that end of the work fell on my shoulders.

It was during the early days of instruction that the coolness sprang up between Sheila Mildmay and myself. She arrived on deck one morning—we were shortened down to a goose winged maintopsail and carrying too much canvas even then—just in time to see me complete or terminate an argument with a big, bucko Swede who'd once been mate of a Yankee hell ship. A good enough sailorman, but too much drift to his jaws, you'll understand.

It wasn't on account of his seafaring disabilities that I pasted him flat on the deck and dispatched him to his bunk to recover, though. It was because of something he'd said concerning Miss Mildmay, and my face was still red with remembrance of his words when she spoke to me. I expect she took that blush of mine for shame.

"I don't approve of that kind of brutality, Mr. Symes," said she, frowning. Man, you should have seen her then—in a red cap and jersey, with a knee deep skirt and workmanlike sea boots, and the wind makng havoc in her hair!

"No, he's not a nice man, Jorgensen," I answered her. "I was reprimanding him a little."

"It's you that are the brute," said she. "You've almost killed that sailor."

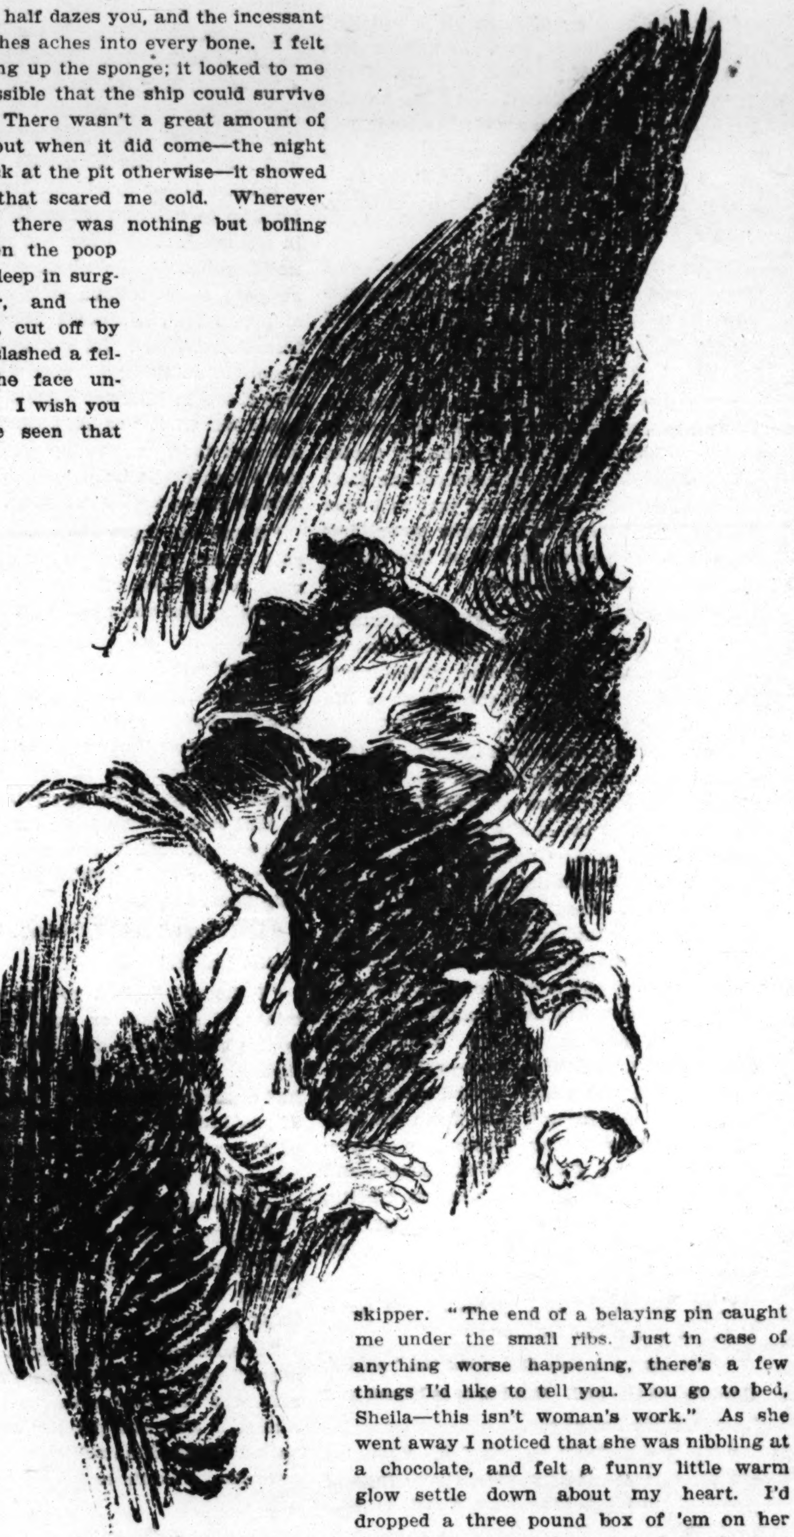
Well, I daresay I could have explained why to her, but that might have meant repeating some of Jorgensen's remarks, and so I let the blame fall on my shoulders. When I saw her later making special soup and delicacies for Jorgensen in the galley I wished he had licked me.

But you'll probably see that I was handicapped from the start in trying to make a good impression on her. Trouble with the hands always seemed to happen when she was there or thereabouts. I've known myself to talk as sweetly as pie to one of those sewing machine agents that had signed on as A. B. for day after day, and then—well, human nature being human nature, there'd be sure to come a time when words didn't serve and only rough housing would do; and, believe me, as sure as I put a shellback through his facings in good deep water style, so surely would I find Sheila Mildmay on the spot, a whole gallery of disapproval.

Fate was against me, and though I left boxes of chocolate in places where she could find them, my votive offerings didn't appear to have any marked effect. She seemed to have a big appetite for them, though, and I wondered a bit until I saw the steward one day with brown streaks at both sides of his mouth.

A Captainless Ship.

THERE came then a night when we were about half through the Bay, a rip snorter of a night. I assure you, man, it was weather! We were worse than a half tide rock; swinging up and up, with every plate protesting, poising on wave crests that seemed to touch the infrequent stars, swooping down into hideous, bellowing canyons of water, where the spindrift rattled like machine gun bullets. I was tired—tired. There's a tremendous amount of physical fatigue about a number one gale, let me tell you. The mere drive of the wind half dazes you, and the incessant motion fetches aches into every bone. I felt like chucking up the sponge; it looked to me to be impossible that the ship could survive the night. There wasn't a great amount of lightning, but when it did come—the night was as black at the pit otherwise—it showed me a sea that scared me cold. Wherever you looked there was nothing but boiling spite. Even the poop was knee deep in surging water, and the wave tops, cut off by the wind, slashed a fellow into the face unmercifully. I wish you could have seen that night.



"Here!" he said, and that was the last I heard for a long, long time.

The mate, Prosser by name, relieved me at about half past twelve, and seemed inclined to be morose about it. He ought to have been on deck at twelve sharp, but he was the sort of man who took advantage of his senior rank. I handed over the ship to him and told what I'd done and how the ship was behaving.

"The skipper ought to be on deck—it isn't fair to leave the responsibility to me," he howled. Anything less than a howl wouldn't have been heard.

"The skipper was knocked down by a sea about three bells," I said. "He said he wasn't hurt, but he seemed happy to be taken below, all the same. So far as I can see, Mr. Prosser, we've got to worry through this blow ourselves." There was a strong whiff of rum on his breath, and his voice was thick, but I was too bone weary to trouble much about such matters. All I wanted was my bunk and some dry gear. I tell you I was drenched through and through. So I started off to my cabin, to reach which I had to pass the captain's door. There was a fine appetizing smell of coffee about, and I felt that I'd give my back teeth for a pannikinful of that same beverage. Sheila Mildmay came out of the skipper's room as I was passing; she shoved a great mug of the hot, fragrant stuff under my nose.

"This won't do you any harm," she said. "And Daddy wants to see you." So I propped myself against a stanchion in the cabin and gulped that coffee down. Uncommonly good it was, too; and after the last drop had been licked from the mug's rim I took off my sou'wester and went into the skipper's room.

"You're wet through," said Mildmay. "You're tired, too. But I'd like a yarn with you, Mr. Symes, if you don't mind. Nip along and get into dry gear and then come back." So I did as I was told; putting on three suits of thick underwear after a hard towelling, and went back.

"I'm hurt worse than I thought," said the skipper. "The end of a belaying pin caught me under the small ribs. Just in case of anything worse happening, there's a few things I'd like to tell you. You go to bed, Sheila—this isn't woman's work." As she went away I noticed that she was nibbling at a chocolate, and felt a funny little warm glow settle down about my heart. I'd dropped a three pound box of 'em on her settee before going on deck to keep the first watch.

Sent Out to Be Lost!

CAPT. MILDMAY caught my arm.

"I've watched you during the last days, Symes," he said. "I fancy you're a man to be trusted. There are things I want to say to you.

"This ship's been sent out to be lost. She's insured above her total value—against total loss. Don't forget that. Against total loss, you understand. Perhaps you don't know as much about insurance as I do, but there are different kinds. Maguire, the Miser, is too mean to do the thing by half. This ship's intended to be lost. Look here"—he grabbed at my wrist again—"I happened to see a case of that extra special cargo that's stowed away on top of the coal down the after hatch. It got a bit broken when it was coming aboard. I had a look, and found it was full of broken bricks and rubbish; but on the bill of lading it was listed as silver watches. See what I mean? I went and had a look at the rest of the cases that had been stowed away, when the stevedores had left and things were quiet.. Every one of 'em was filled with rubbish, but the manifest told a different tale. I'm sorry to keep you out of your bunk, Mr. Symes, but—I've got a notion in my mind that it was a bad day for Miser Maguire when you signed-on here as second mate. And this pain in my liver is just about as bad as it can be."

"What do you want me to do?" I asked.

"The best you can for the ship and those aboard her," said he. "I don't trust the mate, for one thing. He's new—sent down by Maguire. I mayn't be able to do all I'd like to do, owing to this accident. Look here, Symes—I like you. I believe you're a sportsman, else you wouldn't have joined up here when the Hesperus was wanting a second mate. I want you to make yourself responsible for getting this ship through her troubles."

"Now, I'll tell you a thing or two that ought to open your eyes. I sailed under Maguire's house flag for a long time, when jobs weren't easy come by. It was a case of take what they offered or starved. And I had a wife, and little Sheila was growing up. Well, what happened? After I'd served them as well as a man could, my wife went down with something serious. It called for an operation. I was at home at the time. The doctor said there was only one man to do the operation, and he charged a fee that I couldn't afford. So I went to Miser Maguire and told him just how things stood with me. I asked him to advance me as much as would pay the surgeon and dock it from my wages. I also hinted that an increase of pay wouldn't be objected to. What do you think he did? Said that if I liked to chuck up the job I could—there were dozens of men who'd take it on at less pay. He wouldn't give me an advance on account, either—said he'd no security but my pledged word. And so Sheila's mother died, because I couldn't pay the surgeon's fee.

"I was uncommonly fond of that girl's mother, youngster. Everything that counted seemed to stop when she died. I daresay I flew off the handle a bit—you can't blame me. And then luck came my way, after a while. They found me a job with Minister's—good ships, good pay. And it was whilst I was with them that I heard old Maguire had got dipped—trying to make too much money in a big hurry. It was thinking of my dead wife that told me what to do. Vengeance might be the Lord's, but even He has to employ instruments every now and then. I thought I was one of those instruments, and acted accordingly. I offered myself cheap. That's how I came here. After one voyage Maguire told me that the value of tonnage was droppng, and it might be worth an odd pound or two if the ship didn't come back. The underwriters were still working on her old value—so long as the premiums were paid. So then I saw my chance of breaking that miser. I let him pay out his insurance against total loss, and I brought the ship safely home. That troubled him, but he couldn't afford to sack me. He knew that I knew a thing or two about his tricks. And so I was kept in command; but a new mate was sent down. And there's that spoof cargo; and the ship's not worth half what she's insured for. Are you beginning to piece things together? If it hadn't been for this accident I'd never have mentioned the matter to you, but lying here's set me thinking—hard."

He lifted himself in his bunk, and I saw the pain of him twist his face; but there was a cold, merciless light in his eyes as he said: "Can I rely on you to bring this ship out of her troubles? Can I be sure that you'll handle her right?" I gripped his hand and told him that as far as one man's work would go the ship was safe.

"I thought I hadn't made a mistake," said he, dropping back on his pillows. "But you've got a hard job in front of you, Symes. Understand this: The Montana's got to make her port. It's in my mind to show those cases of rubbish to a British consul. What's that?"

It was a tramping of feet on the deck overhead and the choky shout of the mate ordering the deck watch to the pumps.

"Ah, they've started already, have they?" said Capt. Mildmay, and promptly fainted away.

The Battle Begins.

I FETCHED Sheila to attend him and went on deck, where the port watch were holding a Portuguese parliament with a view to abandoning the ship straight off, and the mate seemed more than a bit sympathetic. But I talked to him for the good of his soul, and got all hands to the pumps and managed to keep the old hooker afloat. It would make a long story to tell every detail of what happened; but when I sneaked down the pump wells a few nights later on after we'd got a

RESPONSIBILITY by Henry B Fuller

How Personal Accountability Tends to Weaken Before Social Organization.

THE WILLIAM F. TODDS were a correct, well intentioned couple; from the earliest days of their engagement they had been moved by a fine resolve to "live right." In their pleasant suburb of catalpas, lawns, and colonial columns, they really fulfilled, after a fashion rather above the average, their obligations to home, church, society, and all the rest.

Their children went to day school, to Sunday school, and to dancing school, at each of which they were under competent instructors: "home work," "golden texts," and "manners" all went along together. In the summer the older of the boys went to a scout's camp, and little Edith, who, on several occasions during the past winter, had worn feather and a fillet and crouched in a circle with her mates (the smallest of them all), spent a month in the woods among the Campfire Girls.

Impeccable supervision for both children, and thus their parents were left free to pursue their many interests—too numerous and too usual for specific mention—without the undue intrusion of parental responsibility. Modern society, fortunately, is "organized."

During the absence of the children the old interests were carried on, and some new ones were added. For example, Todd purchased his first motor car.

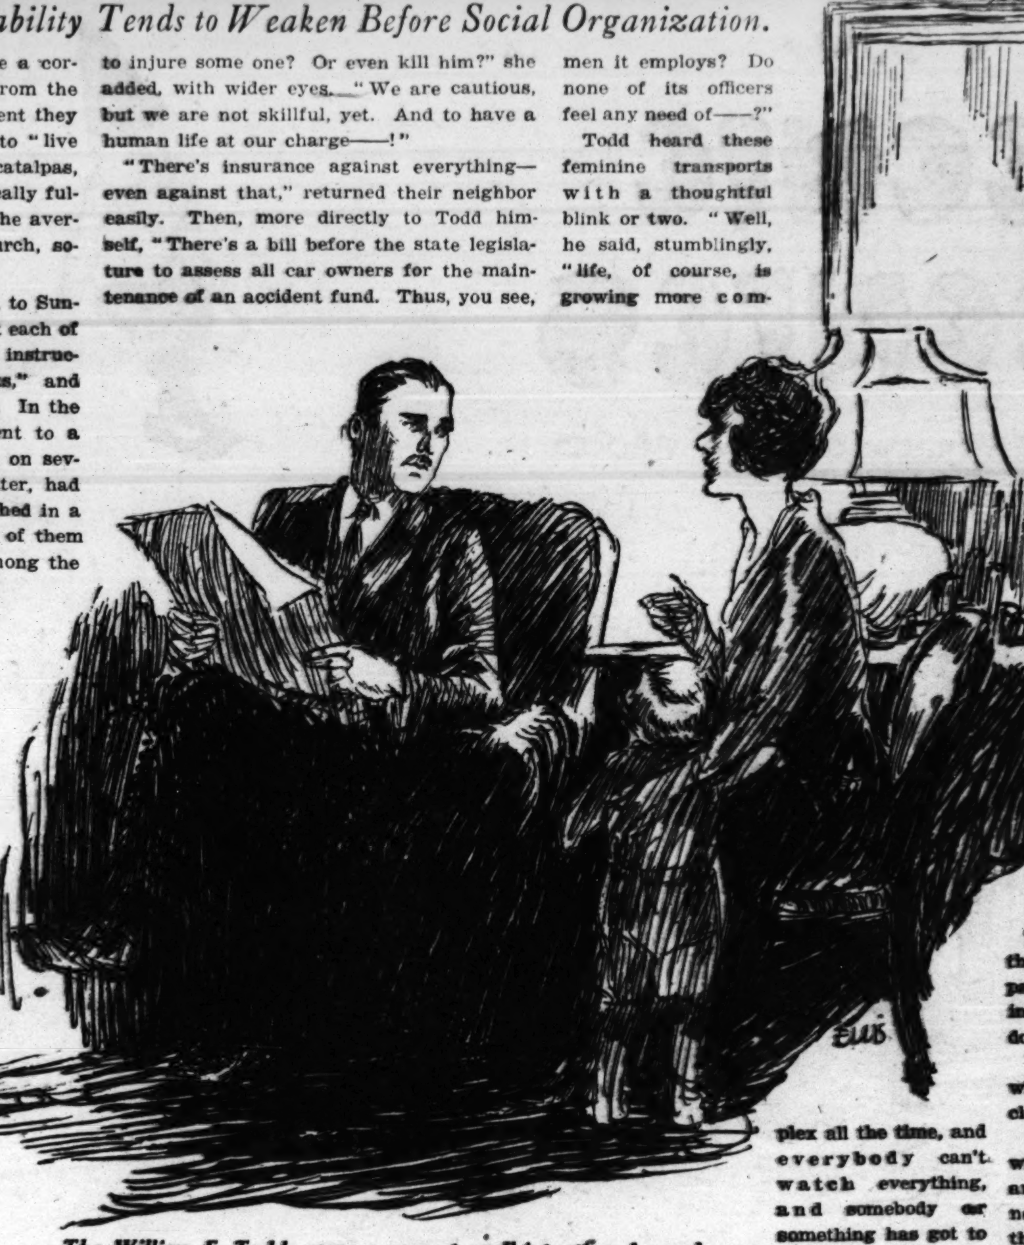
"How could we have got on so long without it?" they were presently saying. "And how pleasant for this fall," was Mary Todd's individual contribution. "Georgie is beginning to be so sensitive about having to go to school on foot."

The Todds learned to manage the new machine with no more than average quickness. There were panicky moments at crossings; there were some bumps and scrapings. The pair did even less well together than apart, and "Something serious is likely to happen to us before long," they would now and then declare. Every scratch on the new car made them wince; every thought of an out and out collision made them shudder.

A kindly neighbor over the way presently gave them some hints as to the various forms of motor car insurance. "Somebody wipes off your lights or drives your whole chassis askew, but do you worry? No, the company repairs or pays."

"All very well, so far," intimated Mary Todd. But she and her husband were careful, conscientious people. "Suppose we were to injure some one? Or even kill him?" she added, with wider eyes. "We are cautious, but we are not skillful, yet. And to have a human life at our charge——!"

"There's insurance against everything—even against that," returned their neighbor easily. Then, more directly to Todd himself, "There's a bill before the state legislature to assess all car owners for the maintenance of an accident fund. Thus, you see, the poor man, who is usually the one to be run over, would——"



The William F. Todds were a correct, well-intentioned couple, moved by a fine resolve to "live right."

"Yes, I see," replied Todd. "And he wouldn't have his damages dribble away in lawyer's fees and court costs."

"Yes," returned the neighbor. "Society, you see, takes care of all those things then, and you——"

"And I," ended Todd, "am relieved of any responsibility."

"You may exercise average care, if you like," said the other, "but you needn't exhaust yourself and your conscience on every little jaunt."

"U'm," said Todd thoughtfully.

"But oughtn't we to feel some responsibility on our own account?" piped up Mary Todd anxiously. If everybody is going to——"

Their caller smiled in an over experienced way, and she stopped where she was.

Within less than a week another neighbor came to their notice. He did not stand against one of their white posts and fan himself with a Panama; he took attention by leaving the neighborhood altogether. "Why," said Mary Todd naively, with a little gasp of astonishment, "I never would have believed this of Mr. Robbins—never in the world!" Mr. Robbins lived but six doors away—itself almost an evidence of reliability and rectitude; yet Mr. Robbins, high in a rather important department of a rather important bank, had disappeared and had taken a portion of the bank's funds (a portion not yet fully determined) with him. But the amount, though vague, loomed large, and it threatened to loom larger.

"Poor Mrs. Robbins!" exclaimed Mary Todd, in an excess of ready, conventional sympathy. "I must run right over and comfort her."

Todd, instead, stepped in, on the way to his office, at the bank itself; he kept his own account there. Two reporters were before him. He heard the bland assurances given there, for public consumption, that the depositors had no cause for concern; the bank was fully insured against such occurrences, and stood to lose nothing.

In the summer the older boys went to a scouts' camp,

"A relief, indeed!" cried Mary Todd, whose brief interview with the embezzler's wife had left the world desolate and bankrupt. "But," she asked, on the rebound, "has nobody got to be honest? Has no institution got to be careful about the honesty of the men it employs? Do none of its officers feel any need of——?"

Todd heard these feminine transports with a thoughtful blink or two. "Well, he said, stumblingly, "life, of course, is growing more complex all the time, and everybody can't watch everything, and somebody or something has got to see that the shortcomings——"

He trailed off into silence, and his wife began to worry about his moral principles. Was he telling her that nobody any longer needed to bother about being careful and honest? Were there to be corporate amends for every sort of irresponsible lapse?

The week following this a life insurance salesman came into Todd's office. He had visited the Todds in their own house more than once, and he knew—or surmised—something about Todd's modest plans for putting a little by toward the growing little family's future. Todd's impression of him as a fellow who took life with a light handed informality was not lessened during the interview.

"We must save," Mary Todd had often said, "Thrift shall be our watchword. We must continue to look ahead for Georgie, and Edith, and Joe." Thrift had sometimes come to mean rather painful scrimping; thrift seemed so much thriftier if it really pinched.

"That's all misplaced endeavor," now said the caller, from his place at the corner of Todd's desk. "You are wasting your energy and cutting into your good times. That's what it comes to—all this needness, nagging anxiety. Let George do it." He slapped himself on the chest, as if he were the grand, solid facade behind which his company performed its labors of collective benevolence.

"I'll think it over," said Todd. And really (as he thought it over), why, if you came down to it—why all this planning and self-denying when organized philanthropy, so to speak, could do everything for you at a fair price? Thrift, seen from this new angle, was but a persistent intruder, a snare, an importunate nuisance.

"But," said his wife, as that evening they canvassed the idea of a policy, "if we can't save for ourselves, if we must just fall back on arrangements made by others, if we don't form the habit——" She was italic here, and her sentence needs no completion.

"U'm," observed Todd again. "This is a life of chance, and if others are organized to take your chances for you——".

He recalled an illustration—or a reference—used by the agent. "If you have a plate glass front and insurance, and the union throws brickbats, are you out? No, indeed; you just sit tight and——" The rest obviously followed.

Well, Todd acknowledged, fate was pretty sure to throw its brickbat some time or other; and if it didn't knock you out altogether it might easily spoil your front or knock out your underpinnings. So that if an earthly providence, in the shape of some company, stood ready to set things right for you——. Again the conclusion was obvious.

Todd already had a small stake in a benevolent association. Monthly dues; occasionally a plump payment when a member dropped out of life. Also, recently, a new treasurer. Todd asked the secretary—apropos of rumors—about the man's general character. "Well," replied the other, giving his hat an ironical tilt, "what great difference does that make? He's bonded by a guarantee company." Upward inflection for this ending, with all its implications — one of which appeared to be that the questioner was a mental lightweight. "Ha!" thought Todd, taking it all rather to heart. No compulsion, then, to be honest; none to select honest aids. Again "society" stood behind everything, ready to make all individual lapses and shortcomings good.

"Really," asked his wife plaintively, when the result of this small investigation was passed on to her, "where does the idea of individual accountability come in? Or doesn't it come in at all?"

Her husband puckered up his mouth into a whistle. Then, having nothing perfectly clarified to say, he puckered again.

The motor car got through the season without injuring itself nor any pedestrian, and the doubtful treasurer did not steal until next year, when he was treasurer of something else; but during the last week of Georgie Todd's outing a portentous telegram came from his camp. He had gone in swimming on a shore strewn with driftwood, and had injured his foot on a nail. His condition was painful and critical, and lockjaw was even hinted at. His parents immediately ejected from their confidence the young medical graduate who had gone along with the little company as a part of his own vacation, and they propelled campward, by an urgent string of telegrams, the best doctor in the nearest large town. Todd himself took the first train—and stage—for the camp. His wife stayed behind and clasped little Jo—glad that he was so little. Two days later, Georgie, as he was, was brought home.

Little Edith had spent a month in the woods, among the Camp Fire girls.

"That man was a bungler!" declared Todd, at once vexed by the futile expense of the cross country trip he had commanded and reassured by the close vicinity of their own family physician.

And, "my dear," declared Mrs. Todd to a sympathetic friend, "the fellow was clumsy and careless—or at least he seemed so to William. And William had to threaten him with the consequences of his malpractice!" she ended admiringly.

The GIRL and the SHIP

by Frank H. Shaw

Roaring Seas, Red-Blooded Men, Plot and Counterplot, Provide a New Setting for the Story of a Gentle Lorelei.

BILLY MERTON shoved his head inside the door of the Officers' room at his boarding house and shouted: "Second mates wanted for two ships. Who's offering?"

"I might," said I. "What ships are they?"

"Meaning that you're going second mate of both?" Billy asked. He seemed to have forgotten that he was dealing with the Officers' room, so I caught him by the collar and hauled him inside.

"I'm no giddy miracle worker," I told him. "I never pretended to be one. I'm just an ordinary man with a mate's ticket." He picked himself up and dusted the thickest of the sand and sawdust from his clothes and composed his features to an expression of civility. If it hadn't been for his red and green eye he would have looked almost appealing.

"They're the Hesperus and the Montana," he said, quite meekly, dabbing at his cheekbone with a handkerchief that had seen better days. "Say, Mister Symes, teach me that left hand jolt of yours, will you? It might come in handy later."

"I've met a white man, thank God!" And he read the marriage service over us.

So I went down to the dock to look those two ships over. The Hesperus—the big ship—gave me a lot of pleasure, I must say. All of eighteen hundred tons, I suppose she was, and her cabin accommodation was beyond criticism. The mate showed me all over her, even down to the extra special bathroom that had been fitted up for the officers—and you don't often find that sort of thing in a windjammer. He told me, too, her average daily bill of fare. Then he asked me to have a small refreshment in his cabin, and it was whilst I was lubricating my throat that I heard a girl's voice singing. It was rather a nice voice, soft and a trifle husky, with a suggestion of melted gold underrunning everything else. The sort of voice that fetches tears to a man's eyes, if you can understand, and sets him thinking of queer little village churches at the sunset hour and the smell of hay and May blossom—O, you know! Sort of voice that makes a man regret the purple patches in his life and reminds him of the days when every goose was a swan and the whole world was green and glorious. You get me?

"Skipper carrying his wife?" I asked the mate of the Hesperus.

"No. He's been a bachelor off and on for forty good years; and he's a woman hater by religion, anyway," I was told. "You're listening to that girl's voice, I see! She's daughter of the skipper of the Montana. We're lying stern to stern with the Montana, and when the wind's in a certain direction it's for all the world as if the girl were singing aboard here. Shall I send a man up for your dunnage?"

"I'll have a look at the Montana first," said I. I didn't tell him that the song the girl was singing was one that my sister used to sing. There have been times when remembering that song has kept me straight when otherwise I might have made a most unholy mess of things. It was a song I was uncommonly fond of, and this unseen girl was putting a lot of meaning into it.

"Have another drink," said the mate of the Hesperus. "And take my advice, don't think twice about that packet, my son. I think you'n I would get on remarkably well together, from what I've seen of you. This isn't a bad ship, and we can run her to our liking. The old man's as soft as putty—eats out of my hand. A good voyage we're booked for, too. Outward to Melbourne with general and there to wait for the wool clip. It's like old clipper days. And we run a good table—and the senior apprentices know their work; they can take charge of a watch on occasion. Just say the word and I'll send a hand up to Billy Merton's for your chest. Come, now—the skipper'll be aboard in half an hour or so, and a word from me——"

If that girl had stopped singing I expect I'd have jumped at the chance; but I felt I wanted to see her. "I'll let you know in a bit," said I, getting up from the velvet covered settee.

"Don't think twice about the Montana," the mate of the Hesperus said, as I crossed the gangway. "She's old, and she belongs to old Maguire—yes, Maguire, the miser. She's hatching with bugs, fleas, rats, and cockroaches. She's bound for the west coast, with coal, and she's a pig in any weather beyond a royal breeze."

I took a look at the Montana, comparing her with the Hesperus. She was mean—O, yes, she was as mean as a Cardiff mate; and you'll remember that Cardiff mates sign on to eat the clinkers so there'll be no waste! She had battens on her rigging instead of ratlines; and she hadn't had a decent coat of paint anywhere since Noah sent out his S. O. S. call. The very name of her owner was enough to frighten any self-respecting man; Maguire the Miser was known in all the seas as a cheese paring, sailor robbing skinflint. Why, he had two S's on his house flag, standing for Steadfast Shipping; but every one who'd ever sailed under that flag knew that the letters really stood for Starvation and Slavery. Even down aft, in that old chap's ships, you got nothing beyond your bare pound and pint.

But that girl was singing all the time I was looking the Montana over; and I felt my curiosity growing. So I stepped aboard, up a gangway that would have insulted a Greek coal barge, and, there being no one in sight about the decks, along to the cabin I went.

As soon as I saw the girl's face I knew which would be my ship. I flatter myself that I am a man who knows his own mind; and when she turned 'round from the piano at my cough and gave me a fair glimpse at her face, I—well, I suppose I fell in love. At least, I went all to water about my middle part, and my tongue got dry, and my hair felt all creepy and cold on top of my head. She sat there, looking at me, with her lips half open and her eyes screwed up and the light from one of the ports ran across her hair, making it look like living gold. It was chestnut hair, I found out afterwards.

"I'm the new second mate," I said to her, as she lifted her eyebrows in inquiry. She got down off her piano stool and came straight over to me with her hand held out. I looked over her shoulder and saw that the piano was properly lashed to eyebolts in the transom, so I judged it was more or less of a fixture, and that she wasn't just there till sailing time. O, I may be a simple sailorman, but even we're trained to observe details.

"I hope we shall be good friends, then," said she, and smiled at me. So then I knew that I was for Starvation and Slavery and anything else that might be coming along. "I'll tell my father," she said.

It was as though the sun had set suddenly when she went away from the saloon—all the light seemed to have gone out of the place. But I moved across and had another look at the lashings of the piano, and decided in my own mind that she was going the voyage. Not that the lashings were anything to brag about; I made up my mind to set them right during my first watch below; but you don't see a piano lashed up for rough weather without drawing your own conclusions.

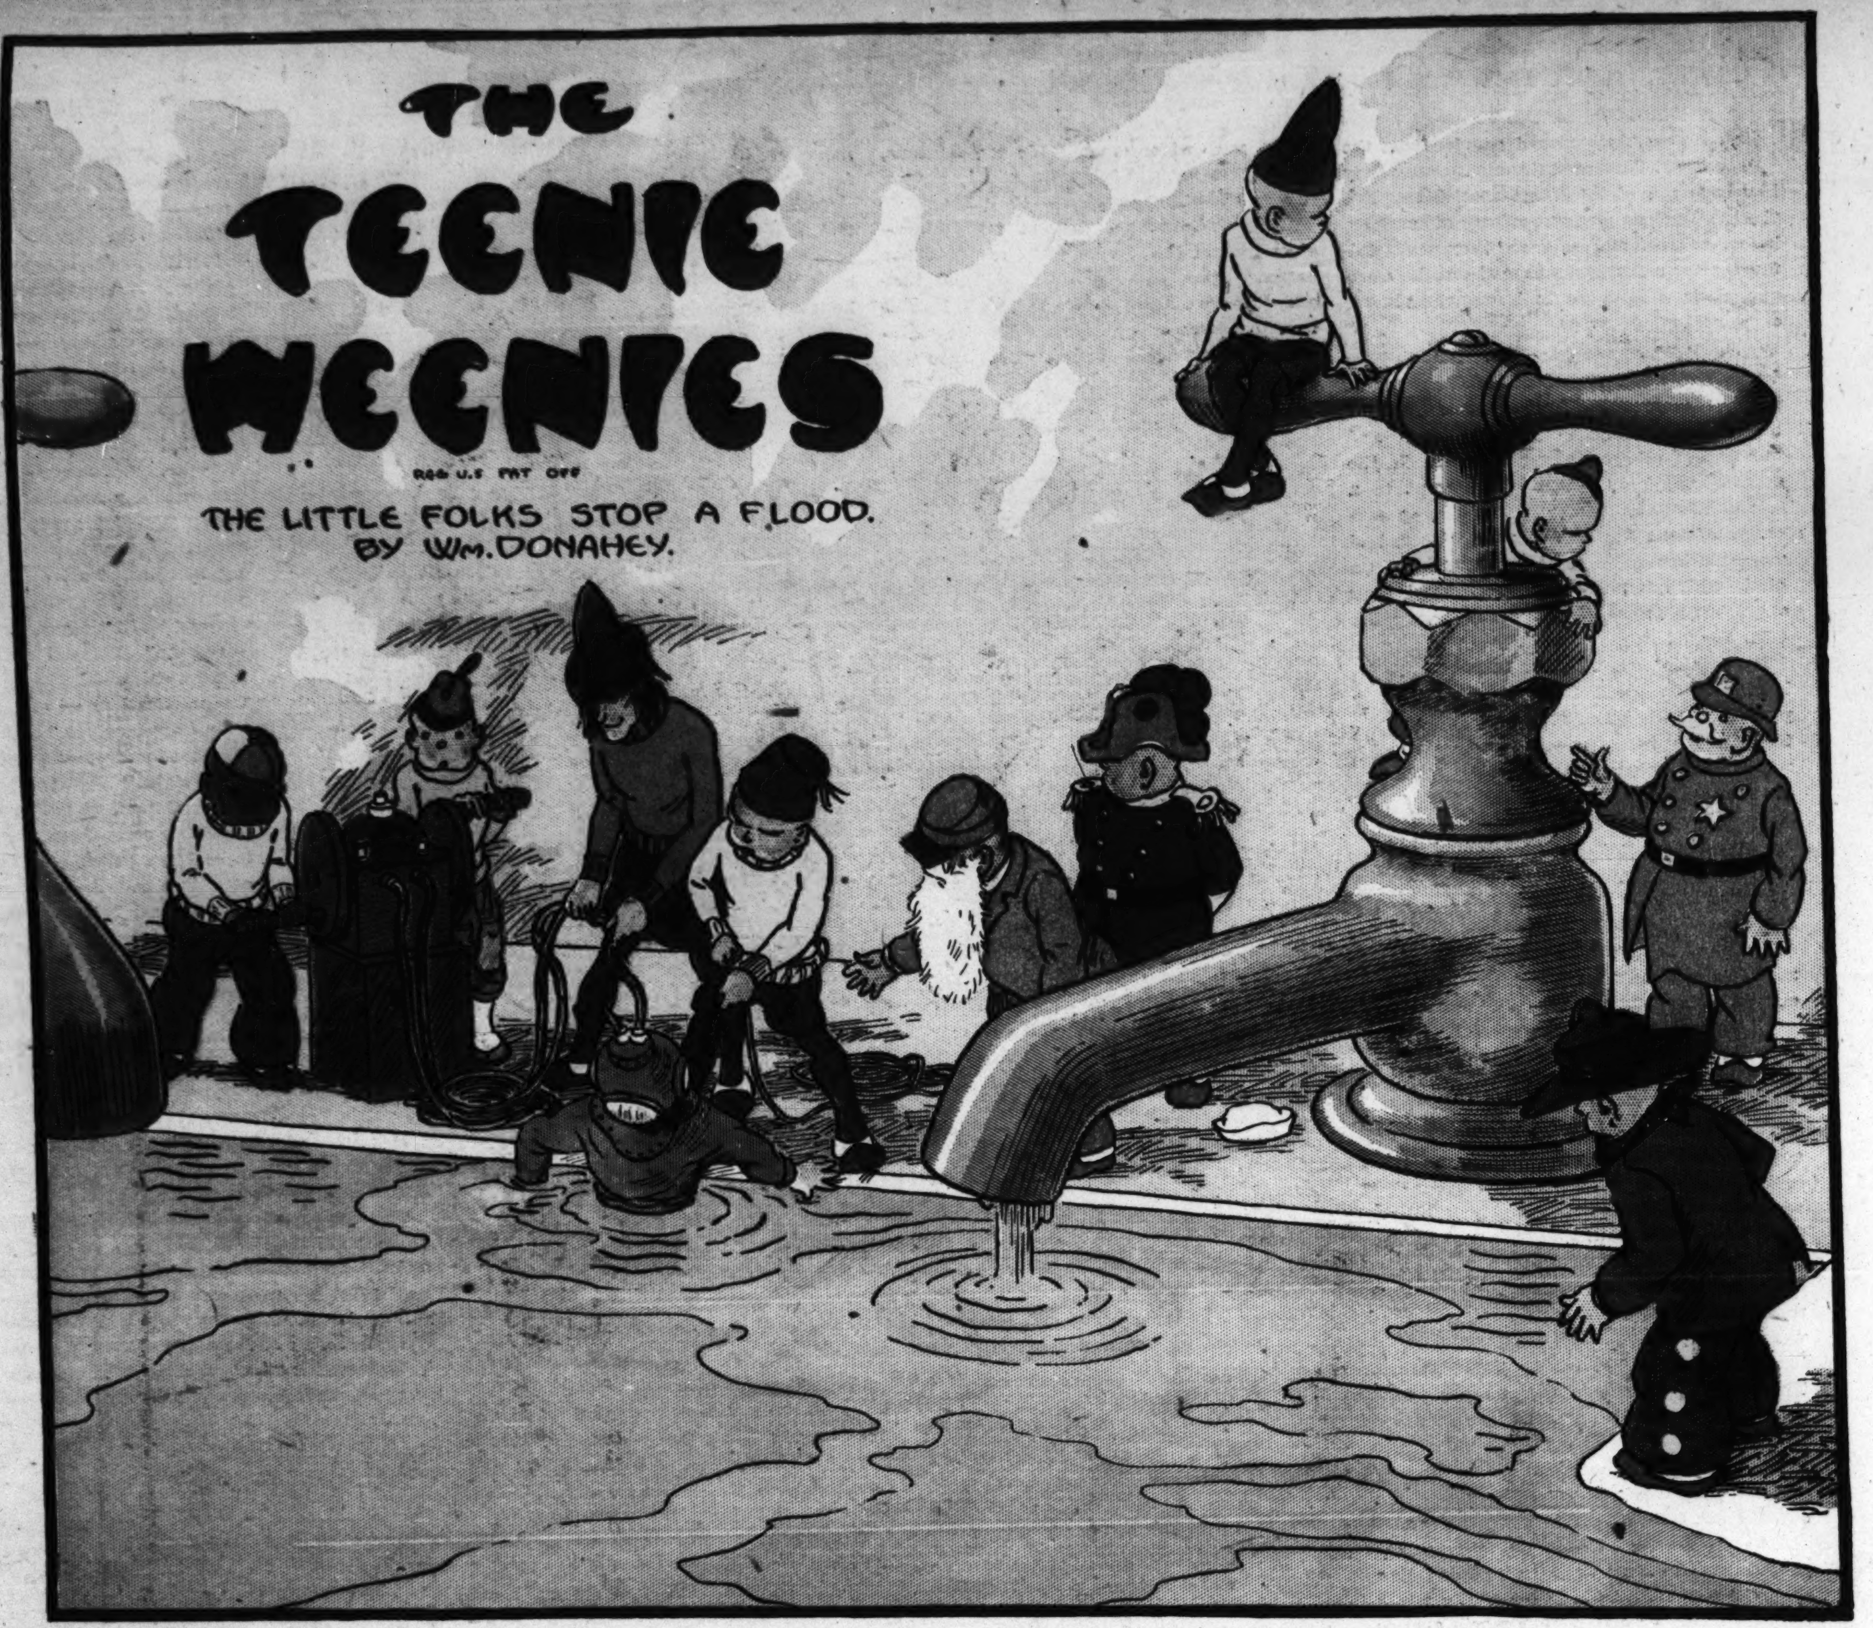
Capt. Mildmay wasn't at all the sort of man you'd expect to find aboard one of old Miser Maguire's ships. He was old, for one thing, and he gave one the impression that he wasn't in the best sort of health, and yet there was a sort of look in his eyes that told of an indomitable spirit within. He had a book in his hand when he came into the saloon, with his finger keeping the place; and I took a quiet squint at the book. Not at all the sort of literature you'd expect a windjammer skipper to be reading, in a manner of speaking; but it happened to be my favorite author; and so, as I was growing keener and keener on getting the berth I opened up negotiations with a quotation from Friend Rudyard, and I saw a bit of a smile come into the old man's eyes.

"He's the one man that counts," said he. "So you're after the vacancy, are you?"

"You seem a fully qualified man, Mr. Symes," he said. "You've got a mate's ticket, too. Did they tell you what the wages are here aboard?" I told him that every one knew what Miser Maguire paid his second mates.

"There's the Hesperus, lying just astern," said he. "She's wanting a second mate, too. The pay's better there, to say nothing of the food. I was talking to her captain an hour or so ago and he told me that he wasn't suited. You might do better if you tried there." I told him that the job was being kept open for me, but that I'd taken a fancy for the Montana.

"Better have a look at your room first," said he. "We're no Cunarder. And there are some men who object to sailing shipmates with women, too. My daughter is making the voyage. I don't want her aboard one little bit, but she insists, and I'm too old to quarrel with her sex."



THE TEENIE WEENIES

REG U.S. PAT OFF

THE LITTLE FOLKS STOP A FLOOD.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"GENERAL, there's a mouse outside who wants to speak to you," said the Cook, looking in through the dining room door. "He says it's most important, about a flood or something."

"All right, I'll be right out," answered the General, and, putting on his hat, he stepped out on to the front porch of the shoe house. The mouse, who had been standing at the kitchen door, ran quickly up to the General and began talking so fast the General could hardly understand what the excited fellow was talking about.

"Take your time. Be calm," said the General.

"It's a flood, lots of water! Drowned out of my home! It's terrible!" cried the mouse, standing up on his hind feet and brushing the tears from his hairy cheek. "Can't you help us, sir? Can't you do something for me and my family? My wife and four babies have been driven out of our home and they are now living in the toe of an old overshoe. Can't you help us?"

"Now, sir," said the General, "try to be calm. Tell me just what has happened and I will see what we can do for you."

It was easy to see that the poor mouse was much upset, for his tail twitched, his ears drooped, and there were dark circles under his eyes.

"Well, you see, it's this way," began the mouse, trying hard to be calm and to tell his troubles quietly. "The people who live in the house where we have been living have gone away. They have a leaky faucet in their bathroom, and they have gone off and left the stopper in the bowl, and the water has filled the bowl and overflowed on to the floor. Of course, the water had to leak through a crack in the floor and run right into our house, which is between the bathroom floor and the ceiling of the cellar. It was such a lovely place for us to live, especially since the babies came, for our home is right under a radiator, where it is nice and warm. Can't you do something for us? Can't you?"

"Well, we could try," answered the General. "Just lead the way and we'll go to see what can be done."

Several of the Teenie Weenies, who had gathered about the mouse while he had been talking to the General, followed the poor fellow, who led them to the house where he lived.

The mouse showed the Teenie Weenies into the bathroom, where a stream of water fell from the wash bowl to the floor with a great splash.

The floor was nearly covered with water, and the little folks had to wade in it almost up to their knees in order to reach the bowl.

When they had climbed up to the bowl they found quite a stream of water running from one of the faucets, and although they tried for some time to shut it off, they could not do it.

It was finally decided among the little men that the only way to keep the water from running out on to the floor was to pull the stopper out of the bowl in order to let the water run away through the drain pipe.

The Sailor took off his clothes and dived several times, but the water was too deep for the little fellow, and he could not touch bottom.

"We'll have to get my diving suit and air pump," said the Sailor as he climbed into his clothes. "That's the only way to get a line on to that stopper."

Several of the little men set off for the shoehouse for the diving suit, and in due time they brought it to the bathroom and hoisted it up on to the bowl.

The Sailor put on the tiny suit, and while the Scotchman and Gogo pumped air to the little diver, the Turk lowered him into the water.

After the Sailor had reached the bottom of the bowl he quickly found the stopper and fastened a stout line to it. Then he gave the signal to be pulled up, and when he had been lifted out of the water the rest of the Teenie Weenies soon pulled the stopper out.

With the stopper pulled out of the bowl, there was no more danger of flooding the mouse's home, and he was quite happy.

"I don't know how I'm going to repay you for all this trouble," said the mouse. "I'm not much good at anything but gnawing holes, but if you ever want a hole gnawed, just call on me and I'll show you a good piece of gnawin'."

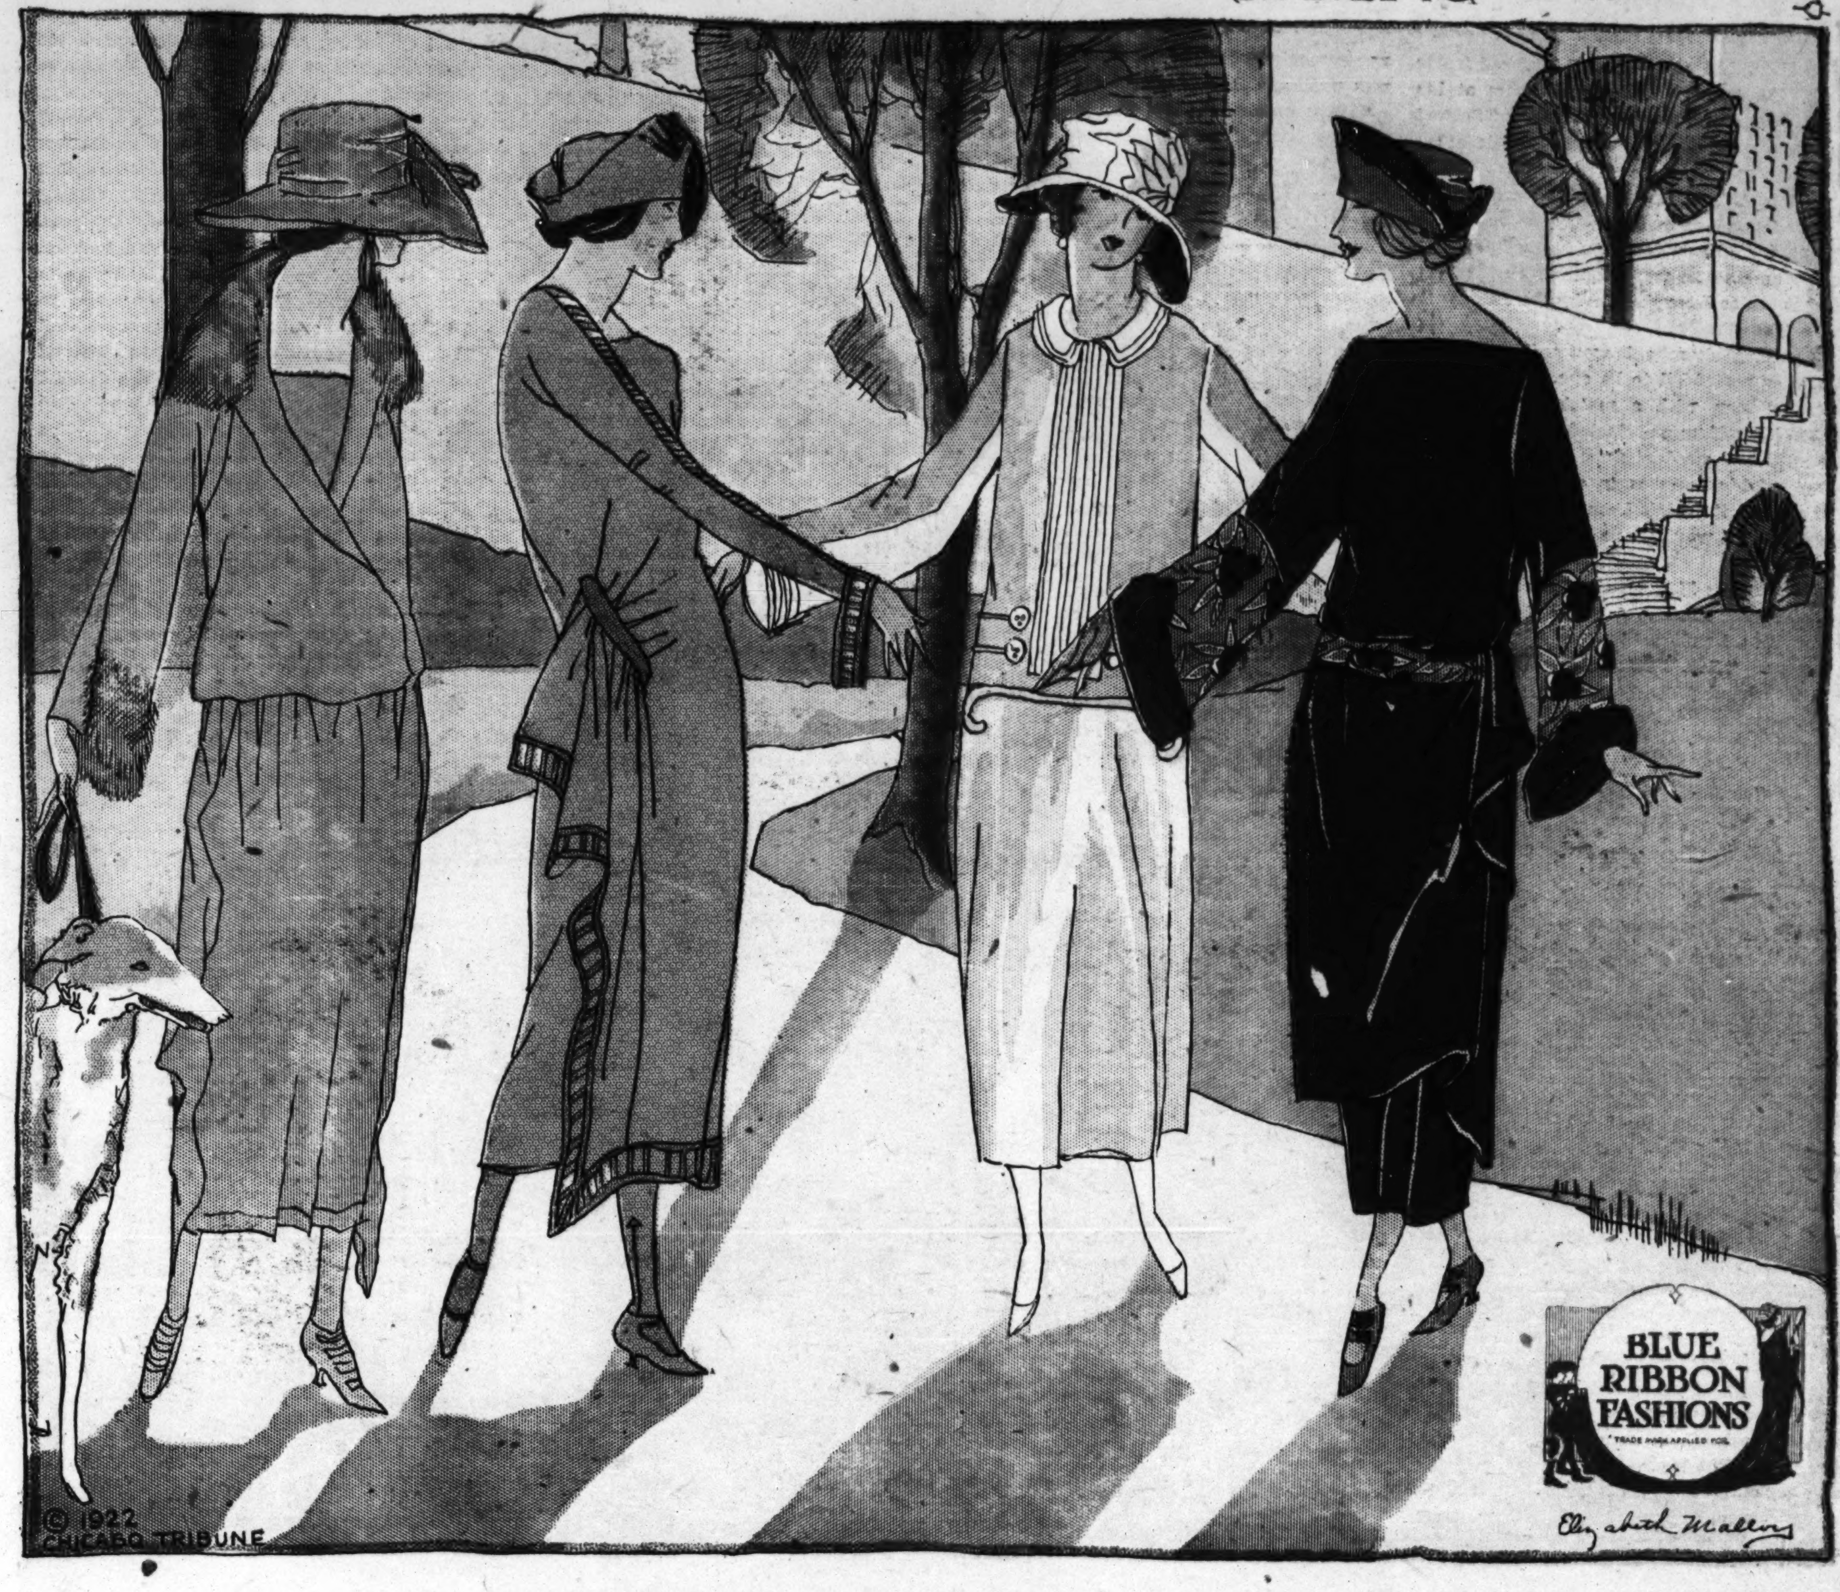
DRAPED SKIRTS EMPHASIZED FOR SPRING

by Corinne Lowe



THAT it is unwise to let your left hem know what your right hem is about is proved first by a gray kasha model with draped skirt, gray squirrel trimming, and touches of jade green. Next, by a tan twill inspired by Callot which makes use of the fashionable self-strip trimming. After an intermezzo of white kasha, combined with tucked white crepe and trimmed with yellow braid, the irregular skirt line again asserts its authority in a graceful frock of red with gray embroidery.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—The little French saleswoman was making as many gestures all at once as Coney island itself. With indescribable rapidity she tried on the new crêpe frocks just arrived from Paris. At last I heard her give a cry. "Voila," said she.

Usually when a French person says that you are prepared for something about as exciting as a man buying a subway ticket or a cat in a grocery store. This time, though, it really meant something. For the little saleswoman had just tied several yards of tomato colored crêpe about her hips. It was a skirt, and it was applied separately from the long waisted bodice which went with it.

"It eez to give zee drape," explained the saleswoman.

This is an explanation which holds good all through the mid-season clothes. Everything is "to give the drape," and this trick of administering the skirt separately is only one means of obtaining the desired result. We find folds prevailing as heartily as they ever did in Athens B. C. If you just treat the human figure as a reel and go right on winding, you'll be sure to get something good.

The draped influence is felt in all variety of clothes. It extends from the sheathlike evening types sponsored by Jenny to the simplest of serges and twills. Just how widely it has affected the latter is shown in the page of early spring street wear dresses given today.

One of the most reputable agencies of the draped skirt is the apron. This is usually tucked up at the left side in order to give the desired effect. It is particularly charming in the afternoon crêpes, but it has been managed so cleverly in the heavier fabrics that the result is anything but clumsy.

A tunic treated in the apron way is shown in the graceful model at the right. This frock jazzes its drape by bringing a fold under the low set girdle of gray embroidery repeated on the long, wide sleeves with their cuffs of self-material. And, by the way, this sleeve has surrendered none of its prestige. It is quite as popular in March as it was in October.

A more frank exposition of the drape occurs in the model of tan twill second from the left. This dress, inspired quite evidently by a famous model of Callot's, is indeed representative of our leading interest. And it brings out strongly one point. The skirts of these new frocks are neither long nor short. It all depends upon the angle from which you take up your binoculars. Thanks to these draped effects and also to skirts which are often cut into deep points at the sides, hems are as moody as hens. They are long one minute and short the next.

The dress I have just described is notable for its trimming details, as well as for its line. For it makes use of the ladderlike arrangement of self-strips stressed by so many French houses. These strips are charming in the crêpe frocks, and one delightful afternoon model of the vivid green now noted so constantly stands out in a large collection because of this treatment used, as in the illustration, down the top of the sleeve. In the case of the crêpe, however, the sleeves are extremely wide.

There are, indeed, just a thousand and one ways of interpreting the strip and lattice work of this spring. But among these must be noted the girdles which Jenny weaves of narrow strips of her dress material. This same woven effect is repeated then at the side closing and often on the pockets of the model.

There is a certain type of feminine mind known as the navy blue one. This will probably stick to its color this spring. More dirigible temperaments, however, will be swayed by the undoubted vogue of the soft tan shades and of platinum gray. Both of these are emphasized by Paris, and the tan kasha frock with perhaps a touch of Persian embroidered fabric has formed some notable contributions to early collections. Tans are also good in the crêpe models, and a simple, wearable frock of tan crêpe may be embroidered moderately in red beads.

Speaking of spring frocks in general, one may say that, with the exception of the black satin dress, color bids fair to rout gloom. Crêpes, for example, appear most often in vivid green, various tones of tomato and rust, cocoa color, and in tan. And it will be seen from the above illustration that even the street dress is convalescing from its prolonged attack of navy and of black.

Kasha is much to the fore for early spring, and I show it in both of the remaining models on this page. At the left it occurs in the fashionable gray with trimming of gray squirrel and jade green vestee. The green is repeated on sleeves which are extremely graceful and interesting. Here again, you see, we encounter the familiar drape.

For southern wear white kasha has scored a tremendous success, and the model second from the right illustrates its potentialities of fashion. Here it is combined with a tucked vestee of crêpe or chiffon, and the touch of yellow braid on the front brings us immediately to a general statement. Braid is much used on the new serge and twill and kasha models, and they are often brilliant about applying it. For example, on one sports frock of kasha the braid is applied diagonally to the skirt from a point above the waist line and is accompanied on its career by tinsel stitching.

This tinsel stitching is a new note sounded in both kasha and satin models. Often on the black satin frocks minute tucks will be emphasized by this fairylike tracery of metal. And a white kasha sports frock has its tucks policed in the same manner.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

TRIMMINGS LOOK LIKE CANDY.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—What was it they used to call that old fashioned candy that looked like spun glass waved? It lay in confectionery show windows on great tins. Anyway, they are using it—or something similar—this year as trimming.

The accompanying middy blouse employs it in the same delicate pinkish yellow, or yellowish pink, as the old fashioned candy. They are using pockets a great deal as garnishment, and on this blouse they appear as an additional little conceit to trim the trimming. It is quite a temptation to drop something into one of those pockets made out of spun candy as the mannikin passes you by.

Do not for a moment imagine that the blouse depends solely for garnishment on anything so conservative as the trimmings mentioned. There is a belt of scarlet straw roses, and the blouse itself is of bright green crepe marocain with a pinked edge at cuff and collar line of yellow organdie.

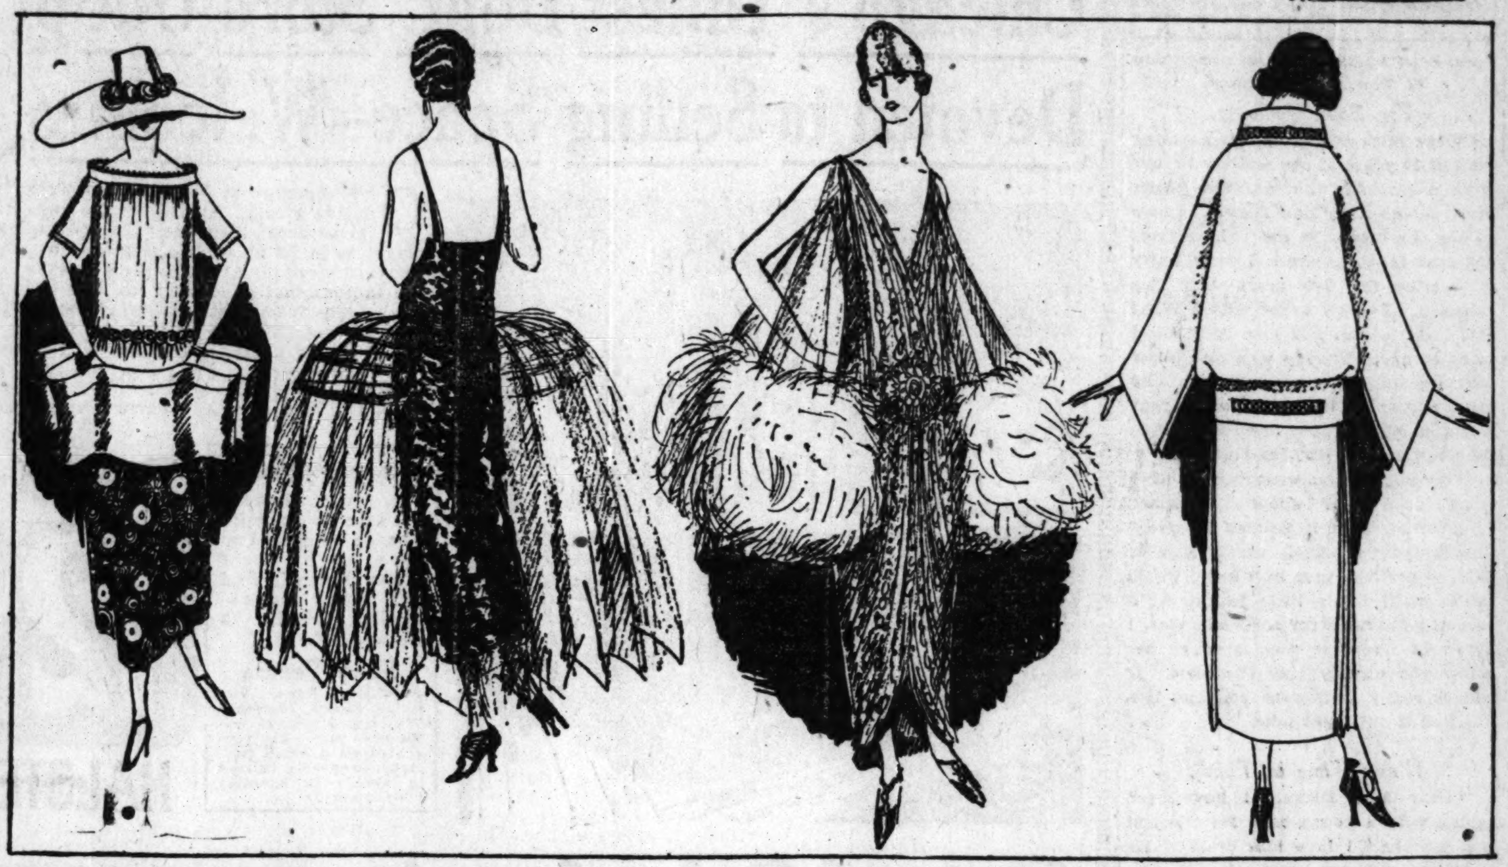
For fear this costuming in itself might be a little conservative for Cannes and the lazy ocean and the waving palms, the designer conceived a skirt to accompany of silk printed in red roses, daisies, and green leaves on a black ground. The hat is of yellow Italian straw bordered in red roses.

I hope this costume will not be too much of a shock to you. Perhaps you did not believe it about colors being "in." In that case it will surely go quite hard with you, for there were little gasps and exclamations of "Good gracious!" when it appeared here, where color is raging at its fiercest. The French, you may be aware, do nothing by halves, from warring to wearing their wondrous creations.

There isn't anything new in line for the moment. They are taking out all of their constructive art in the application of color. The hot water bottles in the drug store windows are in blues and reds. The accompanying sketches are from the new openings of the leading houses. You can look at them and recognize silhouettes which you probably have in stock. And a low belt of bright red and perhaps you can piece out the summer with what you have on hand.

Here is the old friend with the bird cages on the sides. That wide expanse used to be made more in the manner of a George Washington sewing table, but the general effect of width and inconvenience for dancing, dinner, and the opera was the same. These bird cages are built on a steel construction and are of black tulle, which falls below the chemise gown in a pointed border. And it is worth remarking in passing that scallops and points are fashionable.

The gown proper is more elaborate than most others carrying such a heavy load of spectacular architectural display. It is of black silk covered with jet fish scales, and is belted with a ceinture of black and white rhinestones—only I like so much better to call them diamonds. Molyneux made it for Miss Gerard.



This ensemble is the last word in color schemes. | Black tulle cages contribute a striking architectural effect. | The short gauze cape sets off flesh colored tulle. | Patou approves of the conservative black tailleur.

The third dress is based on the silhouette so becoming to the typical American figure. They tell me it is as tall and slender and supple as ever and that the candy manufacturers' receipts have declined alarmingly as one of the consequences of the organized movement for keeping it so. At any rate, this is one of a whole outfitting of dresses that Mr. Molyneux made for Miss Gerard, an English actress, of the same Anglo-Saxon outlines as ours. Isn't the short, swinging cape a wonderful thing to set off this particular long pillow-slip of a silhouette with its drawn in and slashed skirt bottom?

As a value in contrasts between the tight boundary of that skirt and the wide circumference of the mantle, it seems to me worth note from the standpoint of art. That is a band of white ostrich feathers round the mantle. The costume proper is of flesh colored tulle entirely embroidered in pink pearls, with a big design at the belt line in front. The cape, or the sleeveless coat, as the designer is now calling it, since capes are on the edge of the passe—is of silver gauze. A lovely head-dress goes with it of silver gauze embroidered in the pink pearls.

I saw a tailleur today in brickdust red. However, the one in the sketch (from Jean Patou) shows a momentary revolt to the conservative black, so dear to the city of gayety. It is of soft black cloth, and is valuable as showing the great tendency to that tight band round the hips. It is quite as fashionable in tailored suits as in dresses, and shares prestige only with the other silhouette for suits mentioned in a previous letter, where the skirts of the coat extend some six or eight inches below the low, narrow, rather loose belt. These are the only two styles countenanced, and this one is effective, used as it here is in connection with the other style of the momment for low, drooping shoulder lines.

The other popular style which the suit incorporates is the lace-work of garnishment. Materials are braided and interlaced into designs. In this suit they appear on the collar and the cuffs. The pointed, slashed sleeves are effective, as well as the plaiting on the sides of the skirt, used as it is in contrast with a perfectly flat front and back.

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything with marriage, the institution?

W. L. George, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says were "apparently successful." "Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes: how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question: Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor The Sunday Tribune.

Put the Best Foot Forward.

You ask is marriage a failure?
The question's a strange one to me.
Can one be happy though single,
Is what the query should be.

Much has been written on the subject,
All of which has been good.
Yet none have answered the question,
As I was in hopes they would.

My daughter, if you'd not have marriage a failure,
And would start out in life as you should,
Don't speak at all of your in laws
If you can't say anything good.

And if John likes his mother's hash better
Than the way that I make mine,
Just go and ask how to make it;
It will pay in the end, you will find.

My son, if you'd not have marriage a failure,
My advice to you will be
Show the same respect for your wife's mother
That you have always shown for me.

And if it comes to choosing
(God forbid it ever will be.)
Between wife and home and mother,
Take wife and home—leave me.

For the most of your life is before you,
While the most of mine is past.
Don't forget your vow at the altar,
Be true to your wife to the last.

Young couple, before you marry,
Bear this fact in your mind,
There are two sides to our natures—
The good and the bad—you will find.

You have both put your best foot forward,
It's the truth you must confess.
Don't expect good traits in the other
That you know you don't possess.

Don't be too proud to say "I'm sorry,"
When you know you are in the wrong,
Then your home will be filled with sunshine,
And your hearts be filled with song.

L. S.

Love Has to Be Earned.

The most beautiful sentiments regarding marriage are these, I think: "Ah, marriage was to double one's joys and halve one's sorrows by sharing them. It was to learn to think of another first. It was to have for a companion during life's journey one whose hand was always within reach, whose soul was always listening, who forgave in advance and kissed the eyes even before the repentant tears fell—the mother of the children for whom both must sacrifice self. And at the end to know that nothing mattered except separation. Love was a matter of years and years of appreciation; of compromises and readjustments; some of them slow, most of them painful. Love, like the right to be happy, had to be earned."

H. D.

Have the Will to Succeed.

Some one remarked recently that while he was willing to admit that most of the people about whom modern novelists chose to write should be in an institution of some kind, he didn't see why it should always be the good old institution of matrimony. Our trouble is not with marriage as an institution, but with the large number of moral irresponsibles with which society is burdened.

I have known many unhappy marriages; in some cases they were unhappy because of real sins; in others it was some lesser thing, such as nagging or laziness. But in every case the unhappiness came because of some failure of character, a thing that would have wrecked any relation or undertaking in which it was allowed to manifest itself.

No one expects to succeed in business without work, courtesy, patience, forbearance, and occasional sacrifice of personal whims and desires. Yet many people expect to succeed in marriage without any of those things. They seem to think that happiness in marriage will come as a gift from the gods, whereas the will to succeed is quite as necessary as in any other worthy project.

In spite of present day criticism, marriage as an institution still has the confidence of mankind. This is shown by the willingness of divorced men and women to try again, and by the willingness of parents who have suffered bitterly through marriage to allow their children to wed. Do we dare call an institution that thus holds the faith of mankind a failure?

Parenthood is the greatest joy that can come to us, and the care of children our highest patriotic and social duty. Even the critics have suggested no other plan that will give to childhood the protection now afforded by marriage. The men and women whose virtue, honesty, and intelligence are preserving American civilization are the product of the American home, which is built upon our traditional high ideals of marriage as an institution. Is marriage a failure in America? A thousand times no.

The Meaning of Dreams

by Doris Blake

Do you believe in dreams? Are you interested in their meanings?

I hope you would not be foolish enough to take dreams seriously, because that would be too ridiculous—quite as ridiculous as believing in fortune telling as I have initiated you into the secrets thereof. But for the same reason that I disclosed to you a dozen ways of telling fortunes by cards for the amusement of your guests, I am now going to disclose the meanings of dreams, as they have been interpreted by various authorities. This is for your private amusement, and please don't take them seriously, I urge again. I have arranged to present them in alphabetical form. You may wish to cut them out and save them.

Absence—Seeing absent persons in your dreams denotes speedy return.

Abundance—Deceitful security.

Accident—Witnessing one, passing worries; being the victim of one, slow but finally successful in your favorite enterprise.

Accusation—Being accused by a man, great danger; being accused by a woman, bad news; accusing some one else, sorrow.

Acquaintance—Having a fight with an acquaintance, financial distraction.

Acrobat—Seeing acrobats, much joy; to see yourself acting the acrobat, great troubles.

Actors and actresses—Seeing them, fulfillment of your desires; to dream that you are one yourself, much anxiety.

Alligator—Disappointment, danger, business troubles, law suit; killing alligators, success.

Almonds—Seeing them, great happiness, or sorrow and troubles.

Alms—Asking and receiving, bad luck; being asked and refusing to give, want and misery; being asked and giving them freely, good luck, joy, and long life.

Altar—Happiness and a speedy marriage.

Anchor—Hope and influential friends.

Angel—Trouble, beware of powerful enemies.

Animals—As a general rule good luck. Domestic animals signify a hasty return of absent friend, family happiness, and reconciliation of quarrels: wild animals signify secret enemies.

Ants—Alive and a great many crawling over your body foretell that you will meet with misfortune.

Apparitions—To see ghosts, spirits, and the like, in your dreams, is an unlucky sign.

Appetite—Having a great appetite denotes the departure of a friend or relative.

Apples—Seeing them, great troubles; eating them, heavy losses.

Arm—Seeing one, true friendship; if it is a broken, a quarrel.

Army—A quarrel with those whom you love best.

Arrows—Temporary sorrows.

Asparagus—Success.

Automobile—Seeing one, a visit from an old friend; riding one, a speedy journey.

Bacon—Eating some, triumph over enemies; cutting some is sometimes a sign of death and sometimes a prediction of failure in business.

Barber—Troubles.

Balcony—Standing on one or gazing at it means bad luck—either financial worries or death.

Ball—Attending one, pleasure and joy; playing ball, good fortune, perhaps increase of family.

Balloon—Trouble.

Bananas—Seeing them is lucky; if a person who is in love dreams of eating bananas, it denotes his or her sweetheart will deceive.

Band of music—Money.

Bank—Disappointment.

Bankruptcy—Prosperity and great success in business.

Bear—Being attacked by one, persecution by some enemy; if it runs away from you, success.

Beard—Very long, misfortune; white, honors; black, lucky; seeing a bearded woman is a sign you will soon wed.

Bees—Riches, success.

Beggar—To dream of beggars is usually invaluable, especially to lovers and persons of business.

Bells—Hearing them ringing, quarrels and disappointment.

Bleeding—Losses.

Betting—Losses and disappointment.

Bicycle—Troubles and losses.

Billiards—Bad luck.

Birds—Caging some, pleasure and profit; killing them, poverty; seeing or hearing singing birds, successful, profits; seeing them quarreling foretells some great change in your life; to be changed into a bird also signifies some change in your life. If you dream of birds three times in succession you will fall heir to a fortune inside of a year.

Birthday presents—Receiving them, poverty; giving them, an agreeable surprise.

Bite—To be bitten is a sign of great danger.

Blind—To dream of becoming blind yourself may foretell danger; to see a blind person, a warning of danger.

Blood—Seeing it, great riches; losing blood yourself, disappointment, losses.

Boat—Arrival of a friend; in danger of floundering, danger or illness.

Bones—Of animals, financial loss; human, death.

Books—Reading a good book, pleasure and honors; reading a bad one, a disgrace.

Bottles—Full, pleasure; empty, sickness; broken, sadness.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Try Some Jealousy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man of 39 years of age and am in love with a girl for the last ten years, but it seems every time I speak of love to her she laughs at me. She always did care for me. Since I went away in service for five years she has changed. I don't know why. What can I do to win her love back, as I want to make her my wife and know that she does not go out with any other fellows? I love her so much that I cannot live without her. Please tell me what to do. BROKEN HEARTED."

It is mighty disconcerting to have your deep and sincere emotions laughed at, isn't it Broken Hearted? Undoubtedly she feels pretty sure of you, so perhaps your best move would be to make her a little jealous by a seeming fondness for some one else. I know of no other way to make her show you exactly how she feels. If she is really indifferent you had better find it out right now.

Wants Time to Think.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a young man for the last six months. I love him dearly. He told me that he cared when I first met him. Recently, through a misunderstanding, we parted. When I learned it was through my fault I tried to straighten it out the best I could, but somehow we did not come together. The last time I saw him he told me he was going to keep away from girls until he made up his mind. I have not been going with him for a month and as I love him dearly would like to know if in the future he extended an invitation to me would it be proper for me to accept? Also would it be proper for me to return a ring he gave me on my eighteenth birthday? W. T."

Perhaps he is quite honest about his intention of retiring from the world of girls until he has thought it all out. However, I doubt if he will remain in seclusion for long. He'll find life empty without them, likely. But I would not return the ring until later, say, after you have had some further conversation. But I would return it.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A facetious title, perhaps, for so sorrowful a subject! Perhaps I should have called it "Hairs at Large" or "Gone but Not Forgotten."

Why is it one feels inclined to a humorous mood about hair that has lost its attachment for the scalp that raised it and made it what it is today? For the same reason, I suppose, that one laughs at a fellow mortal who is chasing his hat down the street or trying to recover his dignity and his fallen form after a wordless altercation with an icy sidewalk!

There's nothing particularly funny in it for the victim. There's nothing funny at all for the one who finds a thinning and a straying of a former crown of glory. Now, is there, sufferer? I ask you, is there?

They Can't Be Consoled.

For sheer, abject terror there is nothing that strikes at the feminine heart as this confronting a hair vs. scalp divorce. I know it. I had a spell of it once, and so I know the terrors thereof.

And I know from my heavy, heavy mail bag that one may be fat and laugh right merrily; one may be thin and be able to joke about it—but she who is threatened with hair bereavement belongs to the party of inconsolables.

Which brings us back to the main issue: "Why do hairs leave home?"

Answer: Home isn't right and it drives them out!

Factors in Baldness.

In a current magazine Dr. S. Dana Hubbard of the New York board of health gives a concise indication of why a number of the 160,000 hairs on your head fold up their tiny follicles and silently steal away.

"Good general health is absolutely the foundation of health and longevity of the hair," says Dr. Hubbard, in substance. "The blood is the stream that nourishes the scalp, and anything that interferes with the normal feeding of the hair by the blood stream may cause one of the great variety of hair troubles and early thinning. The digestion and the nervous system must be kept in good shape to prolong the life and health of hair."

"Constipation," he further explains, "is one of the greatest factors in baldness."

It shows itself in sallow complexion, lack of energy, headaches, nervous and mental depression, and ultimately in the loss of hair.

Hair Falls After Illness.

You must agree perfectly on this if you just stop a moment to consider that your particular hair loss has been accompanied by some upsetting of the digestive apparatus and some phase of neglected health. Further proof of the direct connection between health and good hair is the loss suffered during or after a protracted illness. Following the flu almost every afflicted one has known the further grief of hair coming out in handfuls. During every sickness of any duration at all the hair sickens and falls out.

Days when you have not been confined to bed, but have felt low in spirits and in energy, your hair was lusterless, lifeless, and hard to dress, wasn't it?

The connection is immediate!

Most of us believe when hair troubles confront us that local measures of correction are sufficient to the recovery of a fine new crop. We chastise ourselves for neglecting the brushing, massaging, and shampooing which we knew our heads should have been given. But few of us go below the surface of the scalp to look for the real cause.

Constipation Too Prevalent.

The local measures are really second in importance, although important

Physicians have said repeatedly their business would be practically nil if it were not for the wide prevalence of constipation. Hospitals could not be maintained. Constipation causes about 75 per cent of the ills of mankind. It poisons the system throughout. It poisons the blood, and, naturally enough, the delicate hairs, imbibing this poison, readily enough depart their place of abode.

How to remedy this trouble? The efficient and lasting remedies are diet regulation, training the organs to a regular routine of habit, and physical exercises to strengthen the abdominal muscles and increase their activities.

Drinking water, six glasses a day at least, is a powerful aid. It acts as a lavage for the entire digestive system. Take water away from a horse, keep it away from him for a certain length of time, and his coat becomes dull and sticky and the light goes from his eyes. Deprive yourself of water and your skin and hair and eyes show deterioration.

The foods that are regulating are green vegetables, fruits, coarse and fibrous foods, and fruit acids. The highly concentrated foods are constipating: canned goods, white bread, biscuits, pastries, rich and greasy meats, and so on.

Exercise Is Important.

The course of Youth Preservers which I gave you recently are excellent regulators of the bowels and of the system. Do them every morning. Do some definite, systematic exercise daily for the benefit of the digestive organs and the blood.

These basic rules attended, consider the hair brush, the finest implement of scalp massage yet manufactured. Keep the scalp clean by shampoos and the daily brushings.

You cannot allow the sweat glands in the scalp to become clogged or trouble rises immediately. The hair brush, used vigorously but not violently, cleanses and massages at one and the same time. It removes the dust and grime of the day. It stimulates the blood circulation, from which the hair gets its growth and life and health.

Washing keeps the hair follicles from becoming stopped up and removes excessive deposits of the oil secreted by the oil glands. The brushing distributes the oil throughout the hair and gives that healthy, wholesome gloss so desirable.

When your hair is dirty, feels dirty, wash it! The scalp and hair must be kept clean.

When Troubles Vanish.

But I want to impress upon you who are worried over falling hairs that your general health has to be looked into.

If it is oily it requires more frequent washing because oily hair absorbs dust and grime more readily than dry hair. Worry will cause hair loss simply because worry affects the digestion, circulation, and nervous system. You cannot starve hairs and expect them to remain with you. You must feed them on good, clean, healthy blood, and that comes from within, not via the hair brush or the shampoo.

Worry and nervousness are corrected only by way of a hygenic mode of life. The mental cures offered are not half so direct in results as pure physical remedies for the mentally sick. But you know from your own experience how troubles have vanished with a rested body and a rejuvenated one, don't you?

Try this on your hair then!

Wants Automobile Books.

"I am a boy 15 years old, just entering high school, and I believe I'd be the happiest boy in the city if I could get one or more of those automobile books offered by C. S. J. I am much interested in automobiles; can run one now pretty well. PAUL S."

Paul, I am sorry to tell you that C. S. J.'s books have been given away. Perhaps some other person can send you what you want.

Fireless Cooker Would Help.

"Will you please ask through your column if there is a fireless cooker no longer needed that I could have? I am working and cook my meals when I come home from work. The children are hungry and do not like to wait so long. I am cooking food which is inexpensive and nourishing and needs long cooking. MRS. F. K."

Here is a working mother who asks a little help. Can any reader spare a fireless cooker for one much in need of it.

Can Teach Crocheting.

"I am a young woman of foreign birth, in too delicate health to do hard work, but believe I could assist myself by teaching crocheting to women of my own nationality if I had a variety of patterns for table scarves. I shall be grateful for patterns or pattern books of any description. A. S."

Surely some one has these patterns and will be glad to forward them where they will help so much.

Interested in Art.

"I am ambitious to become an artist, but in the town in which I live no one teaches art nor is there a public library where I can obtain books. I would like to have some books on art, particularly those teaching how to draw. I will pay postage on anything sent me. E. C."

I hope somebody will be able to supply this ambitious girl with the necessary books.

Here is an ex-soldier much in need of assistance. Surely some one will be only too glad to help him over this trying time.

For Those Who Make Quilts.

"I have pieces of all kinds and believe that some woman would like them for quilts. If you will send me one or more names with addresses I will appreciate it. M. R."

COME INTO THE SUNSHINE.

DEAREST MOTHER: You will be surprised at my taking the initiative, but you know we have talked over this plan a long time. Your being the nicest little mother in the world and my happiness in my own baby girl and in the dear husband you love, too, make me feel I can't let you stay all alone at home in Maine this winter, while we are enjoying the warmth and flowers of

In the years that I was home alone with you, dearest mumsie, when the boys were away, our love for each other became so strong that even with my dear Henry and baby, life isn't complete without you. I often think how hard you worked, sewed, and saved in my school days, that I might enjoy the college course, which means more to me every year. I sometimes wonder if I can have the strength this lovely country. So Henry and I have talked it over and we both want you to take the inclosed check for car fare, and as soon as you can come out here to California to make your home with us.

and vision to do as much for our little Mary as you have for me, and if she can love me as much as I do you, after she has been married two years to the best husband in her world, as I have.

When you get out here, dearest, you are going to have the rest you have earned these many years. There will be work when you want it, in the garden, maybe, among flowers you love, and you will hear the boom of the ocean, just as at home—the Pacific, which I am learning to love as much as I used to the Atlantic.

So will you. Henry and I both find home ties grow stronger with the years, and when you join us, dearest, our life will be complete.

With more affection all the time.

YOUR MARGARET.

That First Love Affair

"Puppy love, calf love"—

That is what the older folk unfeelingly call the first golden love affair of the boy and the girl. But to youth it is a serious matter. Sometimes it shapes lives. Sometimes it deepens into tragedy. But most of the time it is just a roaring comedy of the teens—a comedy that will bear telling now that its principal actors are older, with perhaps a bit of frost in the hair.

What was your "puppy love" affair? Can you tell it now without a wrench of the heart—with a laugh, say? If so—

The Tribune will pay $5 for each story published on "My 'Puppy Love' Story." Write on one side of the paper and make your story brief. Address Puppy Love Editor The Tribune, Chicago.

THE GIRL WHO SMILED.

I NOTICED a sweet faced little lass of about 15 years pass by often during my long illness and wondered who she was. One afternoon when I was feeling particularly blue and lonesome she passed, and when I looked out she waved her hand and smiled at me. Although my heart was pounding about 387 beats a minute and I could hardly believe my eyes, I finally did come to enough to wave back to her.

"My ideal," I thought. "But," my better judgment told me, "she is like all the rest, thinks I'm a lot younger than I am, so thought she would wave to that 'little boy on the porch.'"

Every day I looked for and was cheered by her smile. At Easter I received a card signed "M. D. H." and knew it must have come from her.

As soon as school closed some boys and I went out to camp all summer. I quite forgot the smiling little fairy. In the early fall we moved to another city, but I learned her name and address, and so for four or five years we exchanged cards and greetings, despite the fact we had never met each other.

By that time I had been graduated from high school and struck a pretty fair job. In some way or other she learned when my birthday was and sent me a card. My vacation was coming soon, so I wrote and asked her if I might come to see her.

Yes, she had changed. No longer was she the timid, shy little schoolgirl, but a charming young woman.

That was in September, and in January, yes, you're right, she became my bride. W. J. W.

ORANGE MARMALADE.

MARCH is the marmalade month. To quote Eliza Acton, a famous English writer of cook books about 1860, "March is the proper month for making this preserve, the Seville oranges being then in perfection." One English writer on the making of marmalades makes the statement that it is "in the Seville oranges only that the white part becomes transparent." He advises, therefore, that this part of the sweet oranges, which he combines with the Seville in making marmalade, shall not be used.

Few of us know the Seville orange or how to get it, but some of the commercial manufacturers of marmalade in our midst have these oranges. Perhaps we really do not need this sort of orange, since we have something newer in oranges which will produce, in part at least, the same effect, or that tonic bitter which is so much prized as a "come on" to appetite. I refer to the Washington navel orange, commonly spoken of as navel or California navel. These are also at their best for marmalade making in March, when they are still rather acid as well as firm and stiff therefore easy to manipulate. It is no small item of advantage that these oranges are seedless.

Chinese Use Kumquats.

It is probably not true that the Seville orange is the only one which furnishes a white part, or "rag," the part which has jellying properties, which will become transparent in cooking. The little kumquat, or kumquot, or Japanese orange, out of which the Chinese have long made a commercial preserve, yields perfectly transparent slices, shading out to the dark of the zest when cooked.

Perhaps the English recipes so uniformly call for all or part Seville oranges because these are both acid and bitter. You cannot make a jelly-like marmalade of sweet oranges, therefore our American recipes, as well as some English, call for lemons. Perhaps the most easy to succeed with of all these recipes is commonly headed "amber marmalade," which calls for one orange (for its flavor), one lemon (mainly for its acid), and one grapefruit (for both acid and bitterness). The grapefruit, or pomelo, was but a few years back a bitter thing in juice as well as in rind. It may be used alone for a marmalade, which, however, is lacking in certain desirable qualities.

The Sour or Bitter Orange.

On the authority of Riley M. Fletcher-Berry we may state that the so-called Seville orange is the "sour" orange of our south. In time, she thinks, this orange will come into favor with us, as has the grapefruit. She considers this fruit as one of the few tangible traces of the days of the gallant Spanish explorers in Florida and beyond.

She says of its use: "The sour oranges themselves are shipped in great quantity for making up into the famous bitter Scotch marmalade so much in evidence at British breakfasts, where its tonic qualities are considered to entirely offset any possibility of too much sweet. . . . As a foundation or component of cooling summer drinks, nothing is more delicious than the aromatic, acid juice of the Seville, and it is vastly superior to lemons for Russian tea. Even the lime cannot outclass it for flavor, and it has almost equal power with the lemon in killing typhoid germs."

The Acid Is the Thing.

Orange marmalade is a jellied fruit—pulp and juice and peel—instead of a jellied fruit juice alone. Orange jelly is a far daintier thing, but has not what we moderns call "pep." A real marmalade has real vigor. In the last few years we have so dinned away about the need of pectin for our jellies and marmalades that we have brought into being a new industry to encourage unthrift in jelly making and take the place of a little intelligent study. If I have helped the slightest in this I am sorry, for I have dinned away about pectin, too.

The fact is that we may have pectin enough to make a hogshead of jelly and if it was not well blended with acid, as in apples and currant juices, we cannot make a jelly with it. We need for our jellies fruit juices for flavor, pectin or the jellying stuff, some acid to set the pectin, and sugar to sweeten the acid and modify the pectin agreeably. The first three items we may get from entirely different sources and make what is called synthetic jelly. This is what the old commercial jelly makers used to make.

These old jelly makers manufactured tons of glasses of jelly because, as one of them declared recently in my hearing, "all I needed was water, sugar and acid." When I pinned him down and said, "You must have put in something to make that mixture jelly,' he answered, "Of course I put something in," showing no inclination to tell what it was. He imagined he had a great secret.

An Experiment.

Any woman by a slight amount of study may learn that the things that cause jellying exist plentifully in nature. These are listed in nearly all cook books. They constitute a part of that necessary information which should not be in single recipes but form a part of the principles of things without a knowledge of which we become helpless in actual work.

To show how vital acid is in jelly making you might try this: Wash kumquats, cut up in the thinnest possible slices, rejecting middle if too corky. Measure these slices, add to them three times their measure of water, cook gently for ten minutes. The next day take one cup of the mixture, add a cup of sugar, and cook it to 220 degrees or the usual jelly stage. It may even give the jelly test, of sheeting or of dropping two drops at a time from the spoon yet you will not have a real jelly when it is cold, but something insipid with perhaps a sort of sulphur flavor. You may get same effect with oranges and too litle acid. You could not eat much of it with any pleasure.

Now add to that sirup stuff one, or perhaps two, tablespoons of lemon juice (lemons differ in acidity, although this is not commonly observable) and cook it as rapidly as you can until two drops will fall from the spoon. You will get in five minutes what will be a stiff jelly when cold, and something as much more agreeable of flavor from that sirupy stuff you started out with as can be imagined. You will like it if you like any preserve, I believe. Of course, it would be better to put the lemon juice in first before cooking the kumquats at all. How much you ask? Well, let us consider proportions of each element in the making of marmalade.

Proportions in Marmalades.

We sometimes act as though there was some hocus-pocus in number or in exact formulas. Valuable as number is in helping us to exactness, it cannot be applied to everything. In general, the more quality an edible thing has the less you can impose a formula upon it. You must allow for variations. Pectin and acid and aroma and flavor are all fruit quality things. Nature secretes different proportions of pectin, at different times, in the same sort of fruit. We know that grapes just short of ripeness make better jellies than grapes which have ripened. Some people have said this was because the grapes contain more pectin then. Perhaps they do, but they certainly contain more acid—our sense of taste tells us that—to make the pectin effective.

Yet we must not make the mistake of thinking we can be less careful where we cannot apply number to our manipulations. We must be even more careful than when we can proceed by rule of thumb. It requires more intelligent alertness to the qualities of what we are handling.

Number of Oranges to Lemons.

The proportion of lemons to sweet oranges seems to be according to general practices of different makers, one lemon to four oranges. In some recipes one lemon to each four pounds of oranges is given. But let us notice a few. There is a recipe which calls for seven large oranges, two large lemons, and the pulp and juice of one grapefruit. That could surely not be a sirupy thing with all that acid. Here is a formula which reads: Three large oranges, one lemon, four pounds of sugar, nine glasses of water. Of course, an acid orange like the Seville is sufficient unto itself.

Amount of Water to Use.

The commonest prescribed measure of water is three pints to one pound of fruit, or it is accurate enough to say three times the measure of fruit. But suppose we had oranges only, and these only slightly acid, yet containing enough to set a certain amount of liquid pectin. We might then get an excellent marmalade by using only measure for measure of water, or possibly a cup and a half of water to each cup of fruit. This would be asking but little when we might ask much, since by adding a reasonable amount of lemon juice or substitute we could get three times the quantity of marmalade. Any fruit with a large amount of pectin can be stretched in jelly-making by adding acid just as the pectin can be stretched by making successive extractions from the fruit.

Two English Recipes.

Remembering that bitter oranges are acid, we can understand this English suffrage recipe with the title "Madeira marmalade," which reads: "One dozen bitter oranges, one-half dozen sweet oranges, three lemons. Slice the fruit thin, cutting each one in quarters, and taking out the pips. To every pound of sliced fruit add three pints of water. Let it stand for twenty-four hours, and then boil until the chips are quite tender. Let it stand again for twenty-four hours. Weigh the boiled fruit, and to every pound of fruit add one pound of sugar, and boil again for half an hour to an hour, as the marmalade should be clear and well jellied."

The other one has the simple title "orange marmalade," with the addition "very good indeed," and reads: "Cut the oranges as thin as possible, taking out the pips. To every pound of fruit add three pints of cold water, let it stand twenty-four hours; then boil until perfectly tender, and stand till the following day. Weigh the fruit again, and to every pound put one and a half pounds of loaf sugar. Have it on large meat dishes so that the sugar is distributed all over the fruit. Let it stand so for two or three hours. Then put it in the preserving pan on the fire, but be very careful that all the sugar melts into the fruit before the whole boils. Let it boil until it becomes transparent and jellies, probably about one-half to three-fourths hour."

Amount of Sugar.

Unless the oranges were sour ones this second of the English recipe would surely be a poor one. When the amount of acid gives a compound that is practically equal in balance to a good currant juice, then one cup of sugar to each cup of the fruit with water is needed and no more, but some people like it extra sweet.

Different Practices in Making Marmalade.

Note in this second recipe the method. Instead of cold water as prescribed there, I have found one recipe calling for boiling water. In some of the English recipes it gives the direction "rasp the oranges" after washing them. Thus all the zest is removed and not used. But this when used is true to its name. It gives a true zest to the product. Some people put in only part of the sugar at a time, since the more dense the mixture the more likely the marmalade is to be dark. The safest way is to cook it in small portions.

Orange Constitutents and Qualities.

Since all the fine and essential qualities of oranges may be half destroyed in poor cooking, it is well to enumerate what we have to preserve. One old author summarizes them thus: "In the orange are to be found a refreshing vegetable acid, an essential oil, an exquisite aroma; the two last, the oil and the aroma, are delightfully corrective of the acid." The oil in the zest adds strength of flavor, but with the wrong sort of cooking gives a rather horrid quality, while, at the same time, the qualities in the juice are destroyed when they might be emphasized by it

HEALING CREAM STOPS CATARRH

Clogged Air Passages Open at Once—Nostrils Cleared

If your nostrils are clogged and your head stuffed because of catarrh or a cold, get Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this pure, antiseptic, germ destroying cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head and membranes. Instant relief.

How good it feels. Your head is clear. Your nostrils are open. You breathe freely. No more hawking or snuffling. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed up, choked up and miserable. Relief is sure.

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clean and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

"DANDERINE"

Grows Thick, Heavy Hair

35-Cent Bottle Ends All Dandruff, Stops Hair Coming Out

Ten minutes after using Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous, and just twice as abundant.

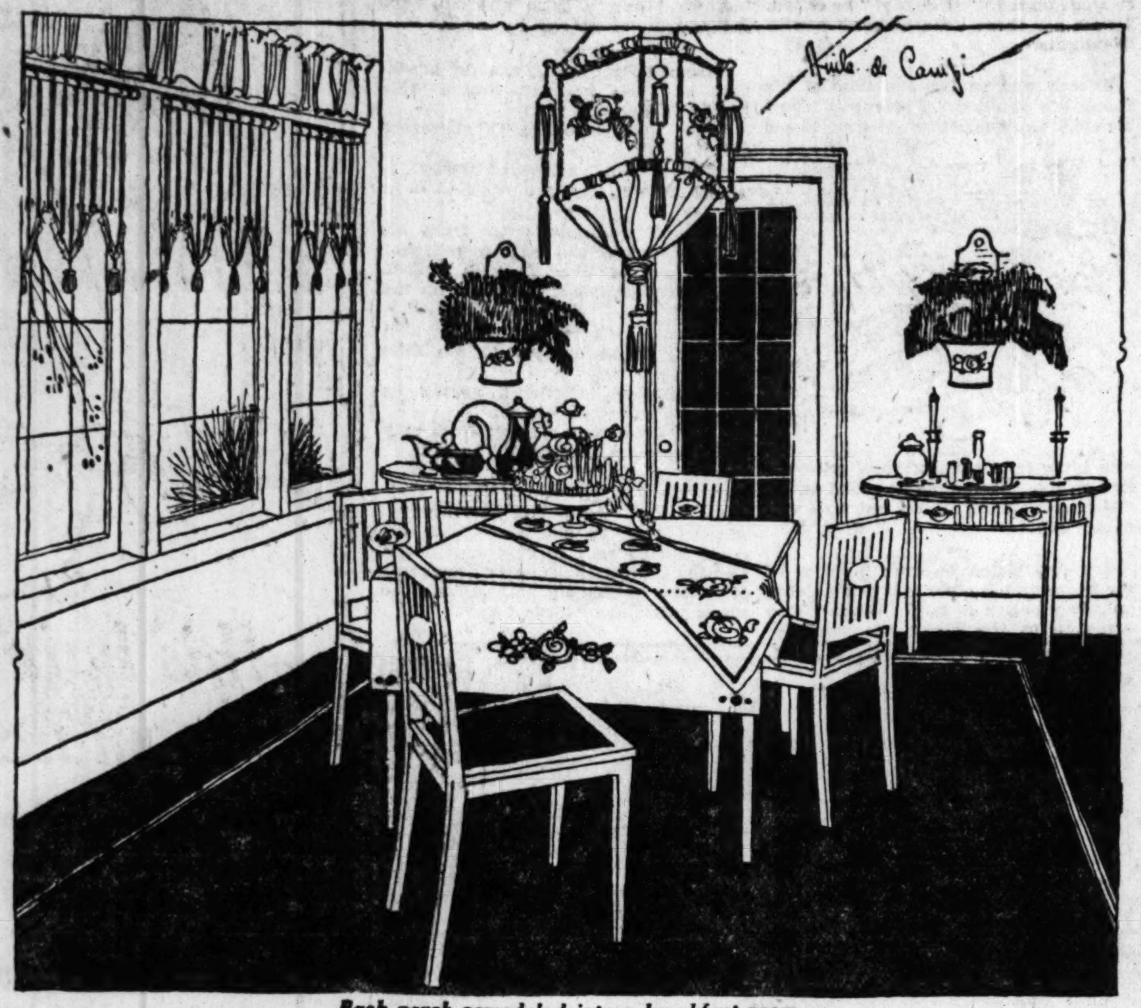
It Lacks Nothing, Even Though a Bachelor Planned It All Alone ::

By ANITA DE C MPI

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



Back porch remodeled into a breakfast room.

WHEN a bachelor sets himself up in an apartment of his own and undertakes to be a housewife, he usually has some eccentric ideas about altering customs that have been made correct by usage. A striking innovation is one that a single man has instituted in his small quarters. Mr. Housewife was his own decorator, and in gleefully arranging the appointments to suit his own taste and his own convenience made the bath tub the principal article of furniture in his luxurious bedroom.

"Why not?" he said. "I like a cold plunge—and then a rest between blankets. And my tub is beautiful—there is no reason why it should be hidden away in a closet."

The tub, which is rather small and made of marble, is shaped somewhat like a bassinet and is placed on a low block of malachite. It is arranged sideways to the wall, and the decorative silver spigots are not at one end but at the middle on the wall side. Above the tub is a narrow shelf holding bottles. Over this hangs a beautiful oval painting with its longest line horizontal. This is flanked by clusters of electric candle lights, and under the lights is a pair of round pictures of ancient architecture.

The furniture is of brown walnut. Two chairs have rush seats. A chest of drawers, with a marble top, has a good, round framed mirror suspended above it. There is no dresser cover. Nothing is on the dresser top but a pair of good sized Japanese vases and a carved rosewood box.

The bed is directoire in shape, and is covered with a spread made of tiger skin. This is so generously proportioned that it tucks in all the way around. The bed is placed sideways to the wall. In its day dressing it has a soft velvet bolster at the head and foot, a large round puff pillow, and two upright square pillows leaning against the wall. On the floor is a foot pillow of black velvet.

Innovations in the remainder of the apartment are not so startling. The whole thing is lovely enough to warrant description. It is palpably the work of a man of culture and good taste—a man accustomed to entertaining so exquisitely that it is counted a privilege to be among his chosen guests.

The reception hall is papered with old gilded canvas, and a portiere hides from view the adjoining living room and dining room. It is just the tiniest reception hall, yet it is interesting. At one side is a mantel of malachite marble with an open fireplace. A pair of pagoda bronze lanterns, instead of being suspended, rests on the mantel shelf at the ends, with a low bowl holding a jade tree of flowers between.

A triangular shelf built in the corner of the wall is painted black and has a narrow panel of black embroidered satin hanging straight down to the floor at either extremity. This leaves a wide opening between the two panels, disclosing a golden Buddha on a small triangular table. The glow of the statue is intensified by electric lights which are concealed behind the panels and, shining full on the statue, cast a shadow at both sides of it.

The table is covered with an oriental embroidered piece of crimson satin. Directly before it on the floor is an incense burner, placed directly between a pair of highly ornamental oriental sandals. These are within the inclosure. Outside of it on the floor are a carved ivory sword and a long, soft prayer pillow. On the shelf forming the top of the inclosure is another bronze lantern. Across from the fireplace is a wide spring upholstered bench raised one step up and covered with brocade and pillows. There is no movable furniture in this room, yet it has comfort, mystery, and charm.

The doorway leading into the living room is an arched opening. Crossing it is a square pole set down about a foot from the top. This is fitted with square curtain rings instead of the regulation round rings. The portiere is of jade green taffeta. A row of jade glass beads as big as marbles are sewn to its lower edge, weighting it down nicely. The portiere is dropped about eight inches from the pole at the top and is connected with the rings by means of jade green silk cords. The effect is pleasing. This handling we gladly suggest to any one of our readers who find on moving into new quarters that their portieres are too short to fit the changed door space.

Lovely is the decorative appearance of the doorway between the living room and dining room. The opening is Gothic arched, and neither portieres, doors, nor screens are used. Instead is a graceful wrought iron double gate. The walls are painted a pale tint of jade green. A cornice, artfully curved, has the electric lights which illuminate the living room concealed behind it. On the wall in lieu of pictures are several wonderful specimens of batik.

The dining room has no cornice. Side lights are supplied in clusters, with wrought iron candle brackets, and these are supplemented by three branched candlesticks holding wax candles. A long, low walnut sideboard nearly fills one end of the room. Above this is a medallion bas-relief. The only other wall ornament, for there are no pictures, is a cunningly modeled wall fountain. The floors of both rooms are completely covered with velvet carpets of deep dull jade green.

The back porch has been glassed in and made into a breakfast room. The walls and furniture are painted in two tints of light lemon yellow, with trimmings of Wedgwood blue. The floor is covered with a huckleberry blue carpet. The blue silk lamp shade, made over intense blue glass, casts a curious light, changing the color scheme to green at night.

The kitchen is cheery. The wall is light gray green. There are no china closets, but shelves have been knocked into the wall. The woodwork of these is stained dark brown. The shelves are shallow. The plates, gayly decorated, are stood upright behind protecting strips of wood which are painted bright scarlet. A grandfather's clock ticks pleasantly in one corner. Beneath a dish rack stands an old walnut hutch that would do credit to a living room. Pots and pans are huddled behind its concealing doors, and silver and nappery are in its drawers. Several square stools have squarely boxed cushions upon them, and these have slip covers of green plaid gingham. The rather long lower sash curtains are of green chambray, and the shallow upper ones are of white Swiss.

Don't you think this is a fascinating little apartment for a male person to have interior decked all by himself? It almost twinges our amour propre to admit it lacks nothing—not even the much vaunted feminine touch!

Beauty

The greatest line of beauty is the curve. This beauty is an integral part of every Lloyd Loom Baby Carriage as shown in the exclusive "shell" design of the bodies—a graceful bowl shape, woven of endless wicker, with a continuous sweeping curve from side to front, unbroken by corners or by concealed short ends of wicker.

It was Marshall B. Lloyd who invented the method and loom which weave beauty into Baby Carriages and Wicker Furniture thirty times faster and finer than the old hand weaving method. These inventions cut labor costs, enabling us to weave the finest wickers, use the best materials, employ the most skilled workmen, add the latest refinements and still sell our wicker products at very moderate prices.

Your dealer will explain the Fifth Wheel Reversible Gear; Oil Tempered Springs; Continuous Steel Pusher; patented Double Spoked and Double Rimmed Wheels; patented Automatic Hood Adjustment—features that add materially to the beauty, convenience, comfort and stability of the carriage.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake [illegible]

JUST LIKE A FAIRY TALE.

BESSIE BLACK was an usher in a motion picture theater. Now she's Mrs. Frank Smith (that name's as good as any) and mistress of an estate on Long island. She's probably forgotten she ever said, "How far down?" She has left her middle western birthplace, and the story of her transplanting reads more like fiction than fact.

Bessie's family is a hard working group. Every member of it is employed, and until romance came to her Bessie's pay envelope was turned over to mother every Saturday night.

Then she met Frank Smith. He was a soldier, stationed at the army camp near Bessie's home city. He was lonely, far from home, and dropped into a motion picture theater on one of his rare visits to town. There he saw Bessie and Bessie saw him. She looked past his corporal's chevrons and decided that maybe Prince Charming could appear in an O. D. uniform.

Followed a courtship. It was brief, as Frank's organization soon was to go to France. But there were stolen moments in the back seats of the theater and on the front steps of Bessie's modest home. During their courtship Frank mentioned his own family but briefly, merely telling Bessie that his folks lived at Hempstead, L. I. Bessie pictured a cozy bungalow with mother and dad waiting to greet her and Frank when the soldier should return from overseas.

Bessie and Frank were married just a few days before the corporal left for France. The weeks which followed were lonely for Bessie, but at Christmas time a letter came from Frank's mother inviting her to spend Christmas in New York. Regretfully Bessie wrote that she could not afford such a long trip.

The return mail brought a check for $200.

"Buy yourself some pretty things and use the remainder for your fare," wrote Bessie's new mother.

Gleefully Bessie shopped. But often her conscience troubled her as she thought of the sacrifices Mother Smith must have made to send her that check.

But she went to New York and then the fairy tale began to unfold. She discovered that her new relative had a handsome estate, and servants to anticipate every wish, horses, motors, pedigreed dogs, and a box at the opera. But she also found them real folks, who took her into their family as a real daughter. She made mistakes at first—she confesses she slipped on the polished floors and offered to help the servants with their work. But every one was kind to her.

Frank is home now. The family at Hempstead is complete. And the soldier often chuckles over the joke he played on his wife.

"He can't ever say I married him for his money, anyway," laughs Bessie.

SYRUP PEPSIN IN OLD AGE

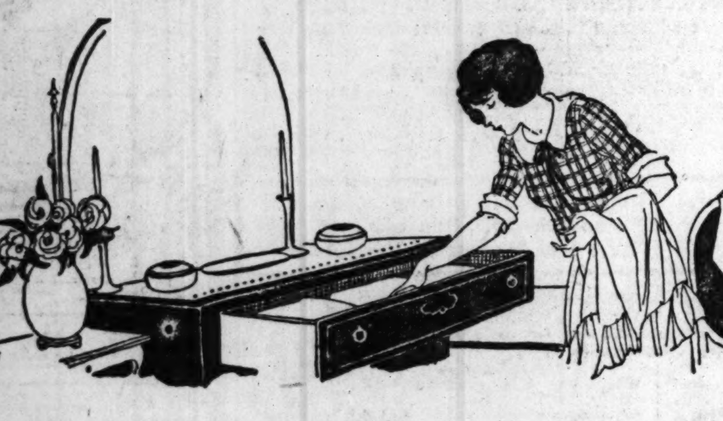
Much used by elderly people for constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc.

MANY men and women, as they grow older, suffer constantly from little ills. The cause is the poisons produced by chronic constipation, resulting in headaches, depression, bloating, sour stomach, bad breath, etc. A single bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will prove to you that you can so regulate yourself that elimination will occur promptly every day. Increased doses are not necessary. It is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin. The cost is only about a cent a dose.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been on the market 30 years and is today the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, the formula has never been improved upon. It is safer and better for you than salts, minerals, calomel, coal tar and such drastic purgatives.

Half-Ounce Bottle Free

Few escape constipation, so even if you do not require a laxative at this moment let me send you a Half-ounce Trial Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE so that you will have it handy when needed. Simply send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Write me today.



Your grandmother knew

Back in grandmother's time, women knew when they were getting their money's worth. Wearing qualities of a fabric were considered first — the spinning of the thread, the fineness of the weave, the substantial feel of the material.

These steadfast qualities they found in snowy white Fruit of the Loom — qualities they told their daughters about, and on down from generation to generation.

Fruit of the Loom

You can make underclothes, nightclothes, sheets, pillow cases, and many other articles of white Fruit of the Loom. Be sure to identify it by the name stamped on the selvage.

Ready-to-wear garments of Fruit of the Loom are made by reliable manufacturers who use the Fruit of the Loom label in every garment. In most stores you can now get Fruit of the Loom in colors—guaranteed fast.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Junior's mother was baking doughnuts, and he had been given all that was good for him. Upon asking for another it was denied him and he reluctantly went out to play. In a little while the man from the grocery came with a sack of flour on his shoulder. Junior followed him in the house and saw his mother give him a nice big doughnut. He said nothing, but went out to play again. In a few minutes he rapped on the door and was invited to come in, whereupon he opened the door and said, "Hello, I am the grocery man, and here is your groceries, now where is my doughnut?" W. W. W.

Robert went to visit his grandmother in the country. Just at dusk dozens of little fireflies were flitting about. Robert had never seen any before and he was amazed. "O, daddy!" he called, "come see these little butterflies with flashlights." G. T.

Russell was having the time of his young life coasting. Suddenly I heard his cries and rushed to the door to see him lying in a heap of snow with the sled on top. Seeing me he called again, "Mother! Quick! Come out here and collect me." J. C. H.

One day Helen was out in front of the house and another girl came along, and they began to talk. When Helen came in to the house she said, "O, mother, I saw a little girl out here just the size of my age." C. B.

As usual Bobby was late for breakfast, and was not radiating a wide awake appearance.

"Did you wash your face?" his father asked sternly.

"Yes, almost," answered Bobby. C. L.

Kenneth was just home from his first day at school and a neighbor asked how he liked it. He replied, "O, pretty well, but it breaks up the day so." N. T. P.

Jimmy spoke sharply to his little brother.

His mother interfered, saying he must not talk that way.

"Gee, I didn't hurt him; I am only trying to raise him right," he said. J. W.

A bright, warm spring morning greeted Jean as she arose, and she could hardly wait to go out of doors. Coming into the house a few moments later, she exclaimed, "O, mother, the air is just full of birds today." V. M. B.

Mandel Brothers, at Spring's Threshold, Formally Usher in "The Mode"

ENTER "THE MODE"—fresh, individual, colorful, charming. The lilt of Spring is in every line of the new manteaux, tailleurs, costumes, blouses,

chapeaux, furs and footwear

France sends a treasure of late fashions—America contributes styles of scarcely less value. The new fabrics—silk, wool, cotton—afford a broader choice of more desirable novelties than in any prior season; and the new laces will add distinction to hosts of fashions yet to be created.

French Hats

The stars of Paris' millinery firmament showered us with scintillant creations—French chic apparent in every shape and shade. Chapeaux from Maria Guy, Antoinette, Suzy, Lewis, Georgette, Marguerite and Leonie, Suzelle, Rose Descat, Hermance, LeMonnier, Germaine, Leontine, Lejonne.

Hats to become every type, to grace every occasion, are included in the Opening Week collections.

Jaunty street styles, tailored effects, stunning afternoon and dress hats.

Misses' and children's hats from France are an interesting Opening Week feature. Fifth floor.

INTERNATIONAL INFLUENCE is apparent in all the fashions of spring.

France and Spain,
Greece and Russia, provide unique motifs

Jaunty bolero jackets remind of Spain; low waisted blouses, colorful, plaque-like embroideries, high Cossack hats and boots, suggest Russian atmosphere; classic lines reflect Grecian originals; and the French "directoire" lives again in slim, draped frocks.

Spring Furs

The choker's the thing to complement tailleur or frock; and it may be chosen here par excellence in natural squirrel, natural mink, blended Jap sable, natural stone and baum marten, natural and blended Hudson Bay sable, natural Russian sable and foxes of various sorts in many colors.

The capelette—a distinct novelty, promised a pronounced vogue—is charmingly developed in mole, natural squirrel, summer ermine, hudson seal, Hudson Bay sable, natural mink.

The capelette sketched is of natural squirrel and has novel, "different points." Fifth floor.

Gowns-Wraps-Tailleurs

GOWNS, formal and semi-formal, are fashioned of "crepey" silks; and frocks for street and outing are tailored from kasha cloth, krepeknit, and spongeen. On many afternoon frocks, sleeves, wide and flowing, add fashion interest. Pictured is an evening gown of silver crepe cloth studded with rhinestones.

WRAPS of luxurious fabrics ornate with embroidery; swinging capes, snug fitting at the shoulder and collared with caracul or broadtail; and swagger topcoats of tweed and camel's hair cloth; all, with their fresh novelty and striking individuality, add much to Spring Opening's fourth floor appeal.

TAILLEURS—the three-piece sort—coat or cape-completed—are predicted a pronounced Parisian popularity; of fine twill, those featured have silk bodice tops and bright hued linings to match. Fourth floor.

The two-piece tailormades have mannish, straightline coats that may be worn beltless or with metal girdle. They are of navy, black or tan twill cords and tricotines, and may be had for as little as $45. The misses' three-piece model pictured, in tan twill and crepe de chine, has a clever, sleeveless jacket.

Shoes

The "Countess" is a smart patent leather sandal, bench-made on a modified last with high arch. It's the new thing for spring.

It has a French cord binding and smart, silver buckle, and needs no "breaking in." $14. Fifth floor.

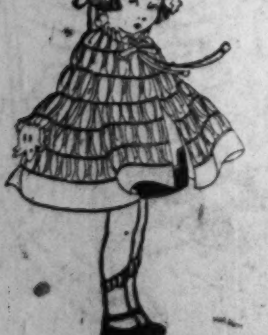
Exclusive styles in patent, satin and glove kid, and smart ornaments.

Corsets

To outward appearance, madame in the mode will be corsetless—but she will be wearing an "invisible" corset—like the new "Lednam."

It is made of a fine, knitted fabric, lends supple lines, holds the figure firmly and naturally. It is available in orchid with orchid trim. $15. Fifth floor.

Rubber girdles are displayed in an interesting array of lengths and in flesh, black and orchid. The sizes range to 38; 2.50 to 38.50.



Infants' Modes

Like mothers' prettiest—such is small folk's apparel for spring. Third floor.

The wee wrap sketched is of jockey red taffeta; the hat matches becomingly. Other wraps of polo, of tweed.

Also, infants' chapeaux from France.

Blouses-Knitwear

BLOUSES—exquisite silk beaded models and charming lingerie effects—are fresh from Paris. Imported dimity fashions smart sports types.

KNITWEAR of pure silk, fiber silk, wool, and stunning silk and wool combinations, graces the Palmetto shop. Particularly desirable are the many jumper models—one pictured. Third floor.

Silks

Crepe weaves rule: vel-ette, krepeknit, creponge, canton, satin canton, crepe roma, crepe de chine, frost crepe, mirror crepe. Second floor.

40-inch all-silk crepe satin, colors and black, special, 2.35.
40-inch all-silk satin charmeuse; black, colors; at 1.85.

An unusually wide showing of Paisley crepes and Paisley vel-ettes.

Dress Goods

Marvella, veldyne and panvelaine are among the latest, loveliest materials for Spring coats, wraps and dolmans. 54 inches wide, in black and latest colors, 8.50 to 14.50. Second floor.

54-inch poiret twills and tricotines, in black, navy and wanted Spring shades; much below regular, at 3.85 yard.

Tweeds—plenty of them—in colors and color combinations, remarkable Opening Week attractions at 2.20 yard.

Laces

Spanish designs in black laces are accorded preference. Wool lace bands and flouncings invariably please. First floor.

Sheer and fine are hand made d'alencon laces and, with hand made novelties, are here in abundance.

36-inch Spanish all-over laces in black, brown, navy; stunning patterns; 2.45 yard.

Ma Potter Gets Thin to Music.

PROLOGUE.

When women get together they talk about the following subjects in about the following order: How to reduce, clothes, other women, how to reduce, their husbands, other women, how to reduce, their husbands, clothes, how to reduce, servants, their husbands, how to reduce . . . one of Ma Potter's friends has a friend who knows somebody who has been getting thin to music, and Ma has decided to try it out all by herself . . . above all, the family must not find out about it; Pa and Mamie and Bill would kid her to death.

OVERTURE.

La vie est brève—
Un peu d'espoir,
Un peu de rève,
Et puis bonsoir.

Life is short—
A little hope,
A little dream,
And then good night.

Scene—Potter Living Room.

Pa, Mamie, and Bill are downtown at their respective jobs, and Ma and the Baby are holding the ancestral fort . . . Ma's reducing records have arrived, and she is feverishly opening the package.

MA (reading circular, which uses that peculiarly insidious blarney to be found only in vacation resort folders):

"Beauty is woman's right. The woman who did not desire to be attractive to others would not be normal."

(The man's right.)

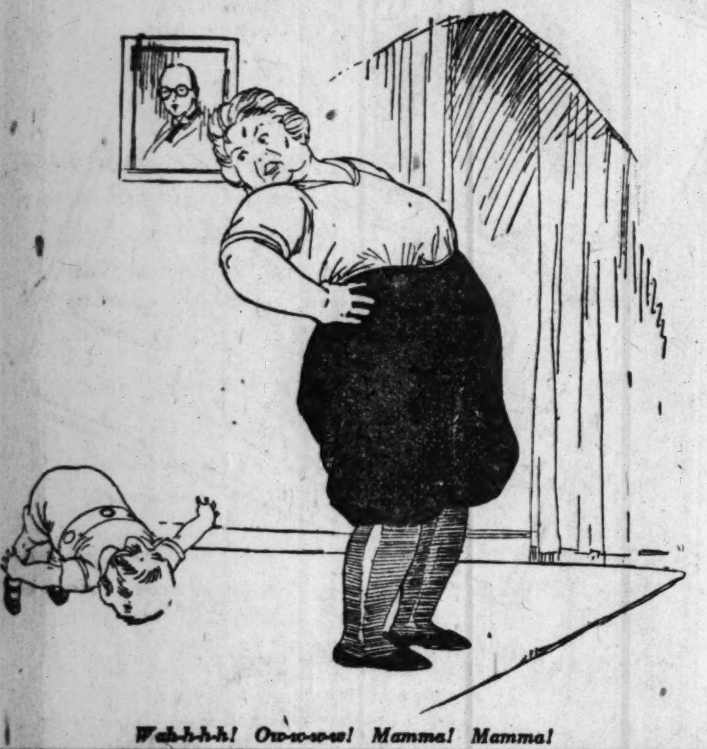
"If a woman be stout, her first step toward beauty must be the natural disposal of excess fat."

(How does he figure that all out? He isn't human!)

"Health is a possession beyond price . . . no woman who is honest with herself will deny the charm of a well balanced, symmetric figure."

(That sounds reasonable enough.)

"Read what Mrs. Geessemyer has to say: 'Have done nicely during the time I have devoted to your remarkable course. So far I have lost fifty-three pounds.'"



Wah-h-h-h! Ow-w-w-w! Mamma! Mamma!

MA (earnestly):

I'd say she was doing quite nicely, too . . .
Fifty-three pounds . . . good glory! . . . ooh!

(reading):

"And here is what Mrs. Emmy Loses writes: 'I have lost thirty pounds and feel like a different person. My husband said, even before I started my fourth lesson, it was well worth the price. I now wear a smaller glove and smaller shoe and I look much different. This town is noted for large women, and I have had so many ask me what I was doing to lose flesh as I did.'"

MA (all buoyed up with hope):

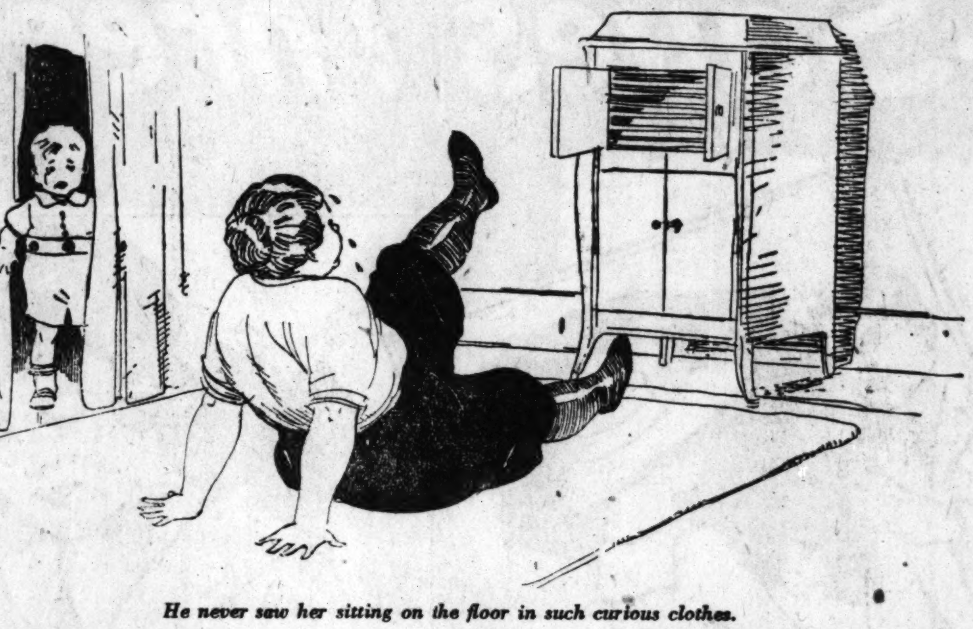
Suppose it worked with me like that,
And I should lose a lot of fat—
Wouldn't Pa get a grand surprise? . . .
I can just see now the look in his eyes.



He never saw her sitting on the floor in such curious clothes.

(Winds up machine and puts on first record.)

Maybe I really can . . . who knows?
Let's see the way the first one goes.

MACHINE:

GRR . . . GRR . . . GRR . . . DEAR MADAM DO NOT BE IN ANY HURRY TO START THESE LESSONS UNTIL YOU HEAR WHAT I HAVE TO SAY YOU MUST BE AS CONSCIENTIOUS IN CARRYING OUT THESE EXERCISES AS I YOUR PHYSICAL INSTRUCTOR AM IN GIVING THEM TO YOU . . . NOW TURN THIS RECORD OVER AND START FIRST LESSON GRR GRR GRR . . .

(Ma stops machine and looks up, suggestions for proper clothing . . . finds she should wear heavy suit of underwear with heavy wool stockings and knickerbockers if possible . . . Ma compromises on the wool undies and bloomers . . . the Baby comes in just at this period, attracted from an interesting exploration in the icebox by the loud talking in the living room . . . stands unnoticed looking at Ma with undisguised interest.)

MACHINE:

GRR GRR GRR FIRST LESSON FIRST EXERCISE SIT DOWN ON THE FLOOR PLACE YOUR HANDS ABOUT A FOOT AND A HALF BEHIND YOUR HIPS BEND YOUR RIGHT LEG ON THE COUNT OF ONE LOWER IT ON COUNT OF TWO LEGS STIFF READY BEGIN ONE TWO ONE TWO UP DOWN UP DOWN . . .

(Baby evidently pleased with music but puzzled by Ma's new game . . . he never saw her sitting on the floor in such curious clothes pulling her leg up and down to music before . . . decides game is worth playing, too . . . sits down behind Ma and goes through same motions with huge delight.)

MACHINE:

SECOND EXERCISE THE SAME MOVEMENT WITH THE LEFT LEG READY BEGIN ONE TWO ONE TWO UP DOWN UP DOWN . . .

(Ma's left leg doesn't seem to bend in the same place as the right one, but the Baby has no such difficulty.)

MACHINE (continuing poisonous little waltz):

ONE TWO ONE AND HOLD THIRD EXERCISE LIE DOWN ON YOUR RIGHT SIDE AND EXTEND RIGHT ARM UPWARDS RAISE LEFT ARM AND LEG AS HIGH AS POSSIBLE ON COUNT OF ONE LOWER ON COUNT OF TWO READY BEGIN . . .

(Another deadly little waltz . . . it sounds sweet to Ma now, but wait until she has done her stuff to its fatal beauty a few dozen times . . . meanwhile Baby, sitting unnoticed behind Ma, is varying exercise by putting first one foot and then the other into his mouth, keeping perfect—for him—time . . . if Ma only could do that!)

MACHINE (crisply):

ONE TWO HIGHER HIGHER HIGHER (Ma flinches and kicks higher than ever) UP DOWN HIGHER HIGHER ONE TWOOne twoonewtomuhmuhmoomoomurmurmumumummmmm (dies).

(Ma gets up off floor with tremendous effort and rewinds machine . . . decides, even though it is against directions, to try some of the more difficult exercises.)

MACHINE (with renewed vigor):

STAND STRAIGHT HEELS TOGETHER HANDS ON HIPS BEND FORWARD ON COUNT OF ONE RETURN TO UPRIGHT POSITION ON COUNT OF TWO READY BEGIN ONE . . . TWO . . . ONE . . . TWO . . . FURRD . . . TWO . . . FURRD . . . TWO . . .

(FURRD is talking machine for "forward" . . . Baby behind Ma tries this one and succeeds first time . . . on the second FURRD, unfortunately, he goes over too far FURRD and lands on his small but tender nose.)

BABY (feelingly):

WAH-H-H-H! OW-W-W-W! MAMMA! MAMMA!

(Ma rushes to pick up Baby and then rushes to stop machine, which is breezing right along . . . drops Baby in excitement . . . finally gets Baby pacified and machine started again.)

MACHINE:

SAME POSITION BEND BACKWARDS ON THE COUNT OF ONE STAND ERECT ON THE COUNT OF TWO READY BEGIN . . . ONE . . . TWO . . . ONE . . . TWO . . .

(Melodious march, very gay . . . Ma by this time doesn't feel so much that way . . . Baby has taken up his place behind her and tries to play glad game with her again . . . puts trustful little hands on his hips and bends backwards confidently, just like Mamma . . . floor suddenly rises up and hits him on the back of the head . . . gives one murderous scream and passes out of the picture . . . Ma dashes to pick him up.)

MA (wildly):

Baby . . . talk to me . . . what'll I do?

MACHINE (serenely):

ONE . . . TWO . . . ONE . . . TWO. . . .

MA (forgetting it is a machine):

Keep quiet a minute . . . will you, please?

MACHINE (reproachfully):

STRAIGHTEN YOUR BACK . . . STIFFEN YOUR KNEES.

MA (snuggling Baby to her):

O, what'll I do . . . O, what'll I do?

BABY (coming to life):

BLAH . . . WAH . . . BLUH . . . BLOO!

MACHINE (fiendishly):

ONE . . . TWO . . . ONE . . . TWO . . .

(So far the first lesson . . . but will Ma be able to keep the secret sacred from the rest of the family? We shall see.)

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

The IDEAL FLOOR

Armstrong's Linoleum laid by The Richardson-Method

Linoleum is a floor covering of great durability. When it is properly laid—by the Richardson-Method of underlaid felt—it at once becomes a smooth, waterproof, germproof, resilent floor which can be easily cleaned and readily removed. Our special process insures a permanent floor that cannot bulge or crack. The colors in the patterns of our Inlaid Linoleum go through to the back insuring a freshness and beauty of coloring throughout the life of the goods.

Advantages of the Richardson-Method:

1. The Linoleum at once becomes a solid, non-absorbent floor which can be easily cleaned and is free from cracks.
2. The felt foundation, which is pasted to the floor, absorbs most of the expansion or contraction that may take place in the wood or concrete base.
3. The felt layer cushions the Linoleum, making it resilient, thereby lengthening the life of the Linoleum.
4. The possible damage from water when laid by other methods is eliminated by the Richardson-Method.
5. Economical both in first cost and in the constant savings in maintenance expense as compared with other methods of laying and types of floors.
6. In most cases the work is completed in one trip, making it unnecessary to return and disturb the room, which is usually the case when Linoleum is laid by ordinary methods.
7. If Linoleum is laid by the Richardson Felt Underlaid Method, the goods can be removed without damage to the Linoleum and the floor can be easily cleaned and will not show stains.

Recommended by business men

The following are a few of many corporations who have found the new Richardson-Method to be the most satisfactory method of better linoleum laying and are pleased to recommend it.

How Linoleum is laid by the Richardson-Method

The floor, whether wood, concrete or tile, is thoroughly brushed. A coat of Rich-Tex paste is applied to the entire surface to be covered. Deadening felt is then laid and rolled out to remove unevenness. Special cement is next put on the felt and the Linoleum is stretched over the felt, rolled and trimmed. The edges and seams are then waterproofed, preventing damage from water and greatly lengthening the life of the goods.

The Richardson-Method is suggested for use in Offices, Homes, Stores, Hospitals,

Billiard Halls, Theatres and Public Buildings.

Center of Attraction.

Our seats were choice ones in the center of the second row in a large motion picture theater. When I rose the people between us and the aisle stood up to let us pass. My husband led the way. When I attempted to follow I discovered I was held fast to the seat. Examination disclosed that a tassel of my coat had caught in the framework of the seat and was wedged so firmly I could not extricate it.

After my husband, the stranger on my left, and I had struggled with it vainly in the darkness an usher came to our rescue. With his flashlight and cane and considerable dexterity he released me. With a sigh of relief I again rose to go. The people who had resumed their seats stood up again. And then, to my utter confusion, I found the tassel on the other side of my coat was caught.

Again an usher was summoned, but this time he was unsuccessful, so I had to sit there and wait until they called another. As we walked out I was conscious that every eye was following me with amusement. In fact, I am sure I received much more attention than the film. C. S. A.

The Fugitive Emerged.

We were three young men who lived in the same town and were attending the same college, which was located about 100 miles from our homes. We were good friends and always traveled together when going to and from the school. It was the Christmas vacation, and we spent all the money we had left for tickets to our homes, boarded the train, and were comfortably located in the smoker in two seats turned facing, for we meant to indulge in a social game, when, to my consternation, I couldn't find my ticket.

What could be done? My friends suggested that I crouch between the seats, where I could be hidden from view by them, our overcoats, and a suitcase, which they held on their knees, until the conductor had taken up the tickets. I did as they had suggested, and was making myself as small as I possibly could and was getting uncomfortably warm when the conductor come for the tickets and I heard him ask my friends why they had given him three tickets.

"The extra ticket is for our friend on the floor," said the boys, and at the same time I was uncovered. When the conductor asked for an explanation they told him that that was the way I always traveled.

One of the boys had found my ticket where I had dropped it on the floor and saw the chance to play this joke on me. I expect to get even with them some time and hope to have him in a more embarrassing position than I was. We are still good friends. C. R.

Interrupted While Dressing.

Last summer we rented a cottage high upon a cliff overlooking a lake. Arriving early in June, we found that the only two houses near us would be vacant for several weeks.

The next morning as I was dressing the hum of a seaplane grew to such a roar that it seemed to be almost over the cottage. I dashed to the lookout, a high platform projecting over the cliff, and was rewarded by seeing several planes flying near.

After the excitement was over I turned around and, to my horror, discovered that our neighbors, who had arrived in the night, had been congregated at the back of the platform, also scanning the sky. For the first time, I became aware of my costume, consisting mostly of silk bloomers and a camisole. I fled in confusion. D.

Never Could Remember Faces.

My brother has a neighbor who always greets him cordially. It seems my brother never could remember who the man was, and would say to his wife, "Who is that man?"

One morning while Charles was waiting for a street car a man in a machine stopped and asked him if he were going down town. My brother said yes, and rode down with him, introducing himself.

The man stopped the car in front of a business establishment familiar to my brother, who said: "So you stop here? I know a man connected with this firm."

The man said: "Is that so? What does he do?"

The reply was, "I don't know, but I believe he has a controlling interest in it."

"What's his name?"

"Thompson."

"That's me," said the man. M. S.

Her Busy Day.

Last week I was cleaning the basement and had set a great heap of things intended for the rubbish box on the steps leading up into the kitchen, when I called to my husband, who was up in the sitting room, to give me the dustpan.

I understood him to say, "You've a blockade on the stairs."

I snapped out, "Well, you know how to get rid of it."

But what he said was, "You've a caller upstairs," and the caller heard me. S. B.

When Time's Not Money.

I received from a dear friend at Christmas what looked like a bank check for $12.24. I wrote acknowledging the gift and proceeded to the bank to have it cashed. The teller smiled and told me that it was a check for 365 days of happiness. I had mistaken the month and date for the amount of the check. You can imagine both my disappointment and great embarrassment. I am past 75 years of age, which accounts for my great blunder. T. H. T.

Mother Was Right.

It happened when I was attending high school. I was at that clumsy age, also, I fear, that know it all age. The sidewalks had an icy coating which made walking difficult. Mother advised my wearing rubbers, but I couldn't see the reason therefor—at least not at that particular moment. I had to run for the train and skidded a little when I walked on the rails, but that was nothing in my young life. I boarded the train, saw two empty seats in the middle of the coach, made a rush for them, and then it was that the ice on my heels turned traitor. I slid up the aisle and landed at my destination—that is, beside the seats—but alas! on the floor, amid my books and paper and also amid gales of laughter from the passengers, among whom was a handsome Apollo by whom I had been smitten for a long time. E. P.

The Truth About Father.

I took my five year old to church. When the sermon was over I hurried to the vestibule where I met one of the deacons.

He said, "I'm glad to see you here."

Before I could answer son Warren piped up, "I wanted to bring my daddy, but he wouldn't come." E. S.

Computing the Profits.

Our town gave a home talent play in which I was chosen to play the leading part.

The evening of the performance we were all back stage making up for our different rôles, when I decided I would run out and peek through the curtain to see how large the audience was. I did this not realizing that it was almost time for the curtain to go up.

Imagine my embarrassment when the curtain slowly rose, and there I was standing on the stage, my hair hanging, and a comb in my hand. I didn't know which was to run, but finally I found a way out amid the loud laughing and applause of the audience. M. G. D.

Joy Was Short Lived.

I was 11 when I first entered a city school and was extremely shy. When called upon to recite I was in agony. We were required to stand, and it made me so nervous I usually got zero.

During geography class one day we were studying products of the United States, and the children went to the board and each wrote a product in colored chalk on the map. Oranges for California was the only product I could think of. I was positive there was something I could do right at last. I was so glad! So after some moments I gained enough courage to raise my hand and I was told to go and write on the board.

Seizing a piece of chalk, I was about to write "oranges" across California's face when I saw it was already there in a dark brown color which was not discernible from where I sat. I hesitated; then, seeing the lower part of the state had not been marked, I wrote the word there.

"We are not studying lower California today," said my teacher in chilling tones.

I went back to my seat, totally eclipsed for that day. R. K. C.

Just Married.

We were just married and had started housekeeping. Thinking I heard my husband's footsteps on the stairs I crawled up and looked over the transom of the door, and as I did so yelled "peek-a-boo" as loud as I could. There stood the minister who had married us. Which was the more embarrassed would be hard to say, as he had to help me down from my perch. C. L.

It costs much less than the high priced brands. And but very little more than the "big can" kinds that can never be depended on. When you pay more than is asked for Calumet, you are squandering money. No matter how much you give, you can't get a better leavener.

When you buy cheap powders, you do save a few pennies on the cost, but poor baking powder is the most expensive in the long run because it spoils and wastes many dollars worth of baking ingredients.

The moderate cost of Calumet, combined with the highest merit, establishes the greatest of baking powder buying economy.

Calumet has been on the market for 30 years. Long past the experimental stage. It is used by more housewives, more chefs and Domestic Scientists because experience has proved it productive of best results at the most economical cost.

Calumet is sure. It never fails. Cakes, biscuits, every baking in which Calumet is used, comes from the oven just right—light, tender, perfectly raised and thoroughly wholesome.

Look Out for This

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 oz. Some baking powders come in 12 oz. cans instead of 16 oz. cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.

Calumet bakings are never thrown away. Not a slice of cake, a crumb of biscuit nor anything else baked with Calumet ever spoils or dries out. They are too good to last—and are good to the last as they stay moist, fresh and tender.

Calumet is one of the greatest savers of food—one of the most effective means of keeping down the high cost of foods—without sacrificing food quality.

Try it today. Your grocer will refund purchase price, if you are not absolutely convinced of the fact that Calumet is the best leavener you ever used at any price—the most economical.

MEN'S FASHIONS

Backless Vest for Summer Wear. Checked Model with Shawl Collar. Pin Stripes in English Flannel.

By A. T. Gallico.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

THEY ARE WEARING FANCY VESTS AGAIN.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There is nothing new in the world. This applies not only to the sphere of chemistry but also to the world of fashion. Style is but a cycle. We are constantly reviving the old because we cannot invent the new. This does not mean that we shall necessarily turn once more to such ancient costumes as the doublet and hose, although there is no reason why we should not. Have we not adopted knickerbockers as a holiday relief from trousers? Hundreds of years ago, before the Romans conquered Britain, the forerunners of the present English citizens were wearing long trousers. Then trousers went out of fashion for a few hundreds of years. Now they are again in style.

All this leads up to the fact that we have at present obviously borrowed from the past of 100 years or so ago, and are wearing fancy vests.

Ever since the beginning of the eighteenth century there has been a great deal of attention paid to waistcoats. Much mention is made in the annals of clothes, both in England and America, of rich flowered silk and satin vests, plush and velvet of bright color. At the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth centuries, the waistcoat was almost the most important part of a man's costume. A record from 1794 gives the inventory of a man's wardrobe, and I understand that the great English statesman Fox and the famous writer Lord Carlisle "made a journey from Paris to Lyons for the sole purpose of procuring something new in waistcoats, and talked of nothing else by the way."

Styles in the eighteenth century changed as rapidly as they do in the twentieth. In 1794 vests were cut low over ruffled shirt fronts, reminding one of the jazz styles of a few years ago when the object was to have as much silk shirt as possible showing underneath a low cut vest, while in 1805 it is recorded that waistcoats were cut high and single breasted.

In the last twenty-five years fancy vests have not been numbered among the popular articles of clothing, the vest of the same material as the suit having taken its place, except in the case of evening clothes. But four or five years ago there arose a tremendous demand for the novelty vest among certain groups. The popularity soon died down, but this season it is again picking up, and more and more lookers out for the novel and different are adopting the fad.

So far the conservative men have shied clear of it, for the same old reason that it is off the beaten track. We must except, of course, those elderly business men who always wear a white pique waistcoat with business suits. Conservative people possibly associate the odd vest with vaudevillians or third class actors who delight in startling models of huge checked design of loud coloration, but the fancy vest does not necessarily mean this. Any attempt to overdo the idea, to wear loud vests would be decidedly bad taste. Yet there is no reason why a modest waistcoat of odd color or material should not be worn by the well dressed man.

Especially in hot weather, when vests are worn by men who are careful in their dress and yet find a worsted one only an added warmth, is the fancy waistcoat valuable. Linen or pongee is a cool substitute. Some of the manufacturers make lightweight vests with most of the back cut out, as the model in the drawing on the left.

Even lightweight flannel, which is the other popular material used in fancy waistcoats, is cooler than woolen materials. Most flannel is imported from England, and is in best taste in a solid color, tannish gray or buff, or with a pin stripe or a three-eighths or three-quarters inch check of black and white, black and blue, or black, blue, and brown.

As to the cut, there are some with collars and some without. Fifty per cent are single breasted, while the other 50 per cent are double breasted, the latter especially having a tendency to be straight across at the bottom, making an effect practically the duplicate of vests seen about 1870. Occasionally a shawl collar is observed, but for the most they are notched, plain, or peaked.

Some young men who wear such vests figure that they might as well have them decidedly fancy, and to accomplish this they have the pockets at odd angles, buttons on the flap, or patch pockets. But the same advice to keep details as simple as possible in order to be dressed in good taste applies. The vest of odd material needs little trimming to make it different from the ordinary.

Answers to Queries.

"WORRIED": With a tuxedo you should wear a black bow tie. A wing collar is in the best taste, although some men still cling to the turnover collar with the dinner coat.

No Need to "Break Them in"

Cantilever Shoes are comfortable, easy, the first time you put them on! No need to "break them in" slowly and painfully. No need to suffer till the newness wears off. In Cantilevers your foot is not compelled to assume the shape of a shoe. For the Cantilever Shoe is shaped like the human foot. It is built on the lines of good [illegible]—graceful, sensible. It is made [illegible] perfect comfort.

The foot has freedom to arch and bend, to move and exercise, unhampered. The shank of a Cantilever is not stiff and unyielding. It flexes with the action of the foot.

The natural inner sole line and the well-set heel combine to encourage correct posture. Ordinary shoes, which twist the toes outward, cause all the weight to fall on the inner side of the arch, its weakest point. But Cantilevers distribute the weight properly; they correct and prevent flat foot. They enable you to walk or stand with less fatigue. And they are good looking.

THE STANDARD OF RUG QUALITY

Bigelow-Hartford—a name that ends all question about quality. The life of a Bigelow-Hartford rug is measured by decades—not by years. Many a Bigelow-Hartford rug has passed its quarter-century and half-century marks.

When you buy a rug, the best way to know what age it will attain before you have to buy its successor, is to be sure it has the word "Bigelow" or "Hartford" woven in the back. Then its successor probably will be purchased by your children or grand-children.

1338—Woman's apron. Sizes 36, 40, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36 inch material.

1325—Women's house dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 36 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

A SCHOOL dress for spring days, made of wool jersey, fine serge, or challis, by pattern No. 1322 would be smart looking and sensible.

The dress is cut in two pieces—front and back—and there is a short opening in the back at the neck so that the dress may be put on and taken off easily. One often sees blouses and dresses for young people and grown women made with this short opening, which spreads apart in an untidy and unsightly fashion. Of course, it is impossible for a place of this kind to lap, but a narrow extension hem can be set on when the binding is being attached, and a snap—the smallest size—may be sewed in the middle of the length, which, when fastened, will keep the back together perfectly and will be invisible.

If the dress is in a solid color, the collar, pockets, and cuff edges could be finished with a binding in a contrasting color in satin or taffeta. The pockets have smart looking little tabs that fold over, and the cuffs are finished with the same shaped tabs, but on the cuffs they do not lap, instead they are set up on the sleeve and held in place there by a button. The sleeves are set in and show little or no fullness over the shoulders. If long sleeves are preferred, they are gathered at the wrist into a narrow band.

A narrow ribbon bow would be pretty worn at the neck, and the belt may be a narrow one of patent leather.

In cutting be sure to allow for a hem at least four inches in depth. It should be hemmed by hand, slipping the needle under the fold of the hem for the length of an ordinary stitch, then bringing it out and catching the under side of the dress material—taking care not to let the needle go through to the right side of the dress. And do not pull your thread or silk too tight in hemming.

If wash materials are preferred, chambray will combine attractively with a checked gingham, and a half inch wide footing would look well whipped to the edge of the collar and cuffs.

Pattern No. 1338 is an interesting apron and will doubtless appeal to many. The front is cut in one piece from top to bottom; the back pieces are also cut in one length, but the upper part of each back piece curves out and down, shaping into a jaunty looking belt. These pieces cross in the back, as the picture clearly shows, and at the under arm are joined to shorter belt sections which button in the middle of the front.

Finish the armholes with a shaped facing, and make the belt pieces double. The square neck should also be faced, and the trimming could be in the shape of contrasting colored bias bindings or half inch bias bands; or ricrau would look well. There are large pockets—one on each side of the front—that help to make the apron a decidedly complete affair.

Pattern No. 1325 is designed especially for one of those attractive house dresses for afternoons at home. Wash material is attractive and serviceable as well. Skirt and waist are cut separately and joined at the waist line. The waist fastens under the collar at the left side front. If gingham is used for the dress the collar and cuffs could be of organdie, and the edges, also edges of the collar and pocket laps, could be finished with bias bindings. A pretty touch is given to the dress in the overlapping buttoned ends of the collar. Cotton ratine or mercerized poplin would be good looking made by this design; it would look well also made in some one of the lightweight woolens or silks.

Why I Told My Last Lie

Why did you tell your last lie? Was that the "easiest way" out or did it get you into a worse fix? Tell what happened and how you felt about it. Perhaps you told what wasn't true to help somebody else out of a difficulty. Tell what impelled you to do it. Address your letter to Lie Contest Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Waiting for the End.

I was 5 years old, stole some tomatoes, and lied out of it. My two older sisters put me through the third degree of honest, truly cross your heart, and hope to die. They then told me that I would be dead before tomorrow morning if I had told a lie. Did I confess? No. I held my ground. The rest of the day my heart was heavy and my step was slow. My soul suffered untold anguish. That evening I kissed my mother and father for the last time, said my prayers, and went to bed. I lay awake for hours, silently weeping, waiting to die. Morning dawned and found me still on earth.

J. O.

Leaving the Purse Flat.

My last lie was a recent one, and I have promised myself it will be the last for a long, long time. The milk man usually collects on Monday morning.

Having forgotten to ask hubby for my household allowance for the week, I didn't want to hand over the little money I had in hand, so I said, "Sorry, but I haven't anything less than a $20 bill, so I'll have to ask you to wait."

"That's all right, lady," he said. "I can just as well change it for you as not."

H. E. H.

Evidence to the Contrary.

I just returned from the store with my shopping bag full of groceries. My neighbor came in to borrow, as usual, and asked for butter. I said, "I did not buy any today; I will use up my jelly."

Just then my son unpacked my groceries and laid the pound of butter on the table.

SEWING FOR THE CHILDREN.

AMONG the fascinating belongings of the small baby one always counts a double gown as one of the necessities, and one that every mother will like is made of fine white cheese cloth. It is lined with the same material and between the two is a layer of cotton batting. One can't imagine anything much softer or lighter or warmer for the small baby.

Of course, it should be made quite loose, allowance being made also for the interlining. The outside should be stitched up, and the seams pressed open; then the neck, front edges, and bottom are marked for turning in. The interlining is cut like the outside, except that seams are not allowed, and it is pinned and then basted in place, after which the shoulder and under arm seams may be easily catchstitched together. The edges of the garment are turned up over the batting, and basted down. Then the outside is tacked at intervals to the cotton batting with worsted.

The lining is stitched together and pinned in place, the edges turned in to match the outside, and finished with a rather deep blanket stitch in the worsted.

The sleeves are set in ones, finished at the bottom with the blanket stitch. Narrow ribbon ties the gown together at the neck, and that is all there is to it. China silk, albatross, or fine French flannel also make good double gowns; but the cheese cloth, with the interlining, seems the best of them all.

For a small child there are smart looking rompers made of chambray or gingham in a solid color—pink, blue, or brown. The waist is cut with kimono sleeves, and has buttons down the back. The small trousers are set into an inch wide band, and button to the waist. The lower edges are set into bands. The bands, sleeve, and neck facings are in white, and are finished with a short running stitch in black. This running stitch is on the edge that is next to the garment.

Little dresses for morning are also made of these chambrays, and the bottom is finished with a deep hem which is outlined at the top with the running stitch in black—this stitch at intervals being carried up on the skirt in an oval or circle.

Yellow is a good color for some of the older girls—particularly if the hair is dark; and a simple, chemise style of dress made of a rather heavy linen in a perfect shade of yellow is decidedly smart with white collar and cuffs—of linen also. Yellow straps are set on the under arm seams for the sash of five inch wide black taffeta ribbon to slip through, and the three gaily embroidered flowers on the sash—the part that goes across the front—are all the decoration the dress needs

Beauty Answers

JULIE: THANKS SO MUCH FOR the exercise, which I shall present now for the benefit of those troubled with thick hips and ankles. I like to get these tried-out-and-found-good exercises, you may be sure. Particularly a good leg reducer. Readers, Julie says this exercise slenderized her hips and legs after she had kept it up consistently and daily for eight weeks: With her left hand she held on to the end corner bedpost and swung right leg back and forth from the hips at least fifteen times with a good full swing. Remove all valuable bric-a-brac from the room, she advises. Reverse to other hand and opposite leg. Then swing to side full stride the same number of times.

MOTHER: A GIRL OF 16 AND five feet two should weigh about 113 pounds. If you brush the girl's hair morning and night as you are now doing, and keep it up for several months, there will be a vast improvement in its quality and texture; you may be assured of that. Reefer's Yeast Tablets—

Most people are undernourished even though they eat ample wholesome food. The modern cooked food diet does not contain the three natural Vitamines so necessary to health. Lack of pep, that dull, listless, tired feeling, headaches and constipation, poor appetite, absence of firm flesh, all are due to undernourishment.

Vitamines The three Vitamines which your body must have are found in their most tasty and convenient form in Reefer's Yeast Tablets. This highly concentrated, scientifically prepared yeast product also contains iron and other blood enriching elements. Reefer's Yeast Tablets are sold only direct to you from Reefer's Laboratories. Send for some today. Take two with every meal. Just watch the change. See how your health and strength continue to improve as the Vitamines assist you to derive full nourishment from the food you eat.

Beauty The world is just now waking up to Nature's own beauty secret. Sparkling eyes—a clear complexion—the radiant charm of perfect health—can only be had as a result of complete nourishment. Unless all three natural Vitamines are present, even the most wholesome foods cannot be properly assimilated by the body. Would't you be delighted to see skin blemishes disappear and sharp bones become covered with firm, smooth flesh? Reefer's Yeast Tablets seem to bring about a prompt improvement by supplying the necessary vitamines. If you envy beauty, be sure your body gets the nourishment it craves, through vitamines, the greatest health builder of all.

Use a separate sheet for anything you may wish to write outside of your list of names and your name and address.

3. English words only will be accepted as they appear in Webster's New International dictionary. Obsolete words will not be counted. Both the singular and the plural of a word will not count, either one of them may be used.

9. The first prize will be awarded for the answer containing the largest and most nearly correct list of the names of visible objects and articles beginning with "S" shown in the picture. No other consideration, such as neatness, style or handwriting will have any bearing in making the decision.

10. The full amount of any of the prizes will be awarded to each contestant in the event of ties.

11. The decision will be made by three judges entirely independent of and having no connection with E. J. Reefer. They will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes at the end of the contest. Participation in the contest carries with it the acceptance of the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.

12. All answers will receive full consideration whether or not "Reefer's Yeast Tablets" is purchased. At the close of the contest, when all lists have been graded, the names of the prize winners will be announced and the list of words will be sent upon request to any participant who sends us a stamped, addressed envelope.

THE "PARKER" SUITE

Curved back and arms, fitted with 3 fringe edged pillows, covered with silk tapestry and taupe velour combination. Solid mahogany carved legs.

$295

Many things go into the making of a real home beside the affection of family ties.

Comfort and beauty of the furnishings of your home also play their part.

A well furnished living room—the davenport and wing chair covered with some durable fabric of pleasing color—a gate-leg table of neat design—mirrors—a reading lamp—a davenport table—an odd chair or two, and a rug of soft colors that blends well with all the furnishings—this living room, where you greet your friends, plays a great part in the making of a home.

And so it is with the other rooms in your home. And the knowledge that the furnishings of each room are well made and of good design makes you proud of their possession.

We have gained a thorough knowledge of these facts during our 57 years' experience, and it is this experience that has taught us that the furnishings of a home are permanent investments—that they must be well made so as to give the service expected of them.

Our salesmen have been schooled in the "Better Home" idea. Go to our store nearest your home and consult with them—give them the opportunity of offering suggestions which may prove very valuable to you.

"Come Back," the Fans Cry, "Across This Stormy Water"

By Mae Tinee.

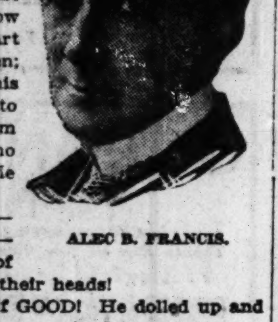
A PICTURE was shown last week called "Conceit." It is a picture that all motion picture stars, and those who hope to be, ought to see.

Not that it has anything to do with the motion picture business. It hasn't. But it hits a certain nail squarely on the head.

There can be no question but that conceit, and conceit alone, is responsible for much of the recent troubles of Hollywood folks. Money, adulation, bootlicking, turned their heads. They gazed upon themselves and thought:

"Well, look who's here! I must be a great feller. Never knew it before—but I knock 'em dead."

The great feller didn't have brains—or, if he had them, didn't use 'em. He didn't stop to think that the CHARACTERS HE PLAYED were what brought in the money and the mash notes. He didn't cast a canny eye at the past and realize how quickly had been banished from the public heart the beautiful chap who denied his wife and children; the handsome hero who drank to excess, abused his wife and youngsters, and was suddenly exposed to former admirers; the leading woman about whom became circulated unsavory reports; the vamp who got too "raw," or whose press agent, possibly, made her SEEM too raw.



ALEC B. FRANCIS.

He didn't spend a moment in reflection and—reflect—that only a few of the old timers remain—as popular as ever—nor ask himself the WHY of their continued popularity. BECAUSE they kept their heads!

No! He looked upon himself and found himself GOOD! He dolled up and began to four-flush to the gallery.

And the gallery "GOT" him, in a way he never dreamed of. So did the balcony and the main floor.

They said, "Poor boob!" and looked about for some one to supplant him.

Which is the reason why one of the most popular of the male stars is now running second in the race.

Why another, who began "personally appearing" and so neglecting his pictures, has suddenly seen the back of the public's hand.

Why many favorites, both men and women, are being coolly and absolutely displanted by a new and unknown team of players who realize they've got to make good to stay and consequently are bending all their energies on their work instead of parties, Russian wolf hounds, outré automobiles, and something new in the way of publicity and sensation.

In "Conceit" the man is a braggart and four-flusher. He seems yellow until almost the end of the picture. Then a friend, who feels that at heart he's really all right, locks him in the room with a "pug," supposedly there to teach him the gentle art of boxing.

The "pug" does his duty. He lands with both fists. The sad bird cringes and hides his face and takes a lot. Suddenly the boxer yells:

"You're yellow!" and hits again.

Latent manhood asserts itself, and the man who had for so long been a proven coward and braggart smashes into the tormentor with his two fists and makes him hear the birdies. And, brought to the hurtling realization of the mess he is and has been, he smashes his way back into the estimation of other men and his wife.

All right—the American public is Hollywood's "pug." It's landed on the screen players and landed HARD—and with considerable cause. But there is no reason on earth why the fans should finally prove their point.

Way down in their hearts they're crying that their favorites may prove NOT yellow.

Go to it, Hollywood! "Come back!"

CLOSEUPS

JUNE ELVIDGE.
[Moffett Photo.]

When Fox refilms "A Fool There Was" June Elvidge will have the rôle formerly played by Theda Bara, Lewis Stone will have Edward José's old rôle, and Irene Rich will also be seen.

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks are said to have recently paid $150,000 for a new studio.

* * *

Harry Knoles, a well known director, was recently married to Rosina Henley, a niece of the poet, the late William Ernest Henley. His bride, we are told, is something of an authoress, and, since marriage, a scenarioist.

* * *

It is rumored that Margarita Fischer, who used to be a prime favorite in old "American" days, will return to the screen under the direction of her former director, Harry Pollard. The two are married, you remember?

Still interested in the firms who want ideas? I have some lists and tips on scenario writing left.

KICK KORNER

B. B. writes: "Dear Miss Tinee: I heartily subscribe to a kick in last Sunday's issue. The producers surely do need a legal department. Particularly when the mortgage is foreclosed on the old homestead. The poorest dub lawyer in the world can stall off eviction for eighteen months at the least, but some of our directors have the old folks in the street in about two hours. Personally I'm sick of the pretty boys and the lovely heroines. I like to see the high class character actors. I believe they do the finest work we see today on the screen—such people as Theodore Roberts, Alec Francis, Barney Sherry, James A. Furey, Josephine Crowell, Kate Lester, Kate Bruce, Mary Alden, George Seigmann, to say nothing of Mary Carr and Vera Gordon."

Close Observer comes with this:

"Dear Miss Tinee: Here is something for your Kick Korner. Being able to pass a close observation on a certain picture, I have been able to detect a great flaw. In the start of the production I notice a nice long letter signed by the maker telling the world how the star risked her life for the enjoyment of the audience. So I naturally was anxious for the last reel to appear. After six long, tedious reels had elapsed the great event happened, but behold, what did I see! It was not Miss '——' on the logs, but a man dressed in her clothes substituted. This is done in almost every thriller, but the producer does not advertise that he doesn't do it."

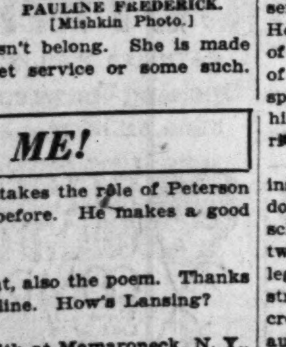
Just a Dreamer feels terrible! She says:

"Saw Pauline Frederick some few weeks ago at our neighborhood theater. Whenever she is playing near I make the effort to get there, but I never want to see her submerge her talent in such a mediocre picture again. Why, her part, it seemed to me at least, could be taken by a beginner. I think the name of the piece was 'The Sting of the Lash,' and she seemed so out of place, such a kind of woman being such a kind of wife to such a kind of man for three whole years. Uh! Uh! She doesn't belong. She is made for bigger and getter parts—international or secret service or some such. What do you think?



PAULINE FREDERICK.
[Mishkin Photo.]

ASK ME! ASK ME!

EVELYN: You're right. J. W. Johnston, who takes the rôle of Peterson in "The Ruling Passion," has been on the screen before. He makes a good heavy, don't you think?

LANSING, MICH.: I received the letter all right, also the poem. Thanks for both. Sorry, but what you request isn't in my line. How's Lansing?

* * *

M. S. L.: Send your communication to Mr. Griffith at Mamaroneck, N. Y., and he will receive it. Glad to be of service.

BEATRICE DEE: If he's married I hadn't heard of it. Yes, Mr. Stanley has been on the stage—in stock and répertoire. I haven't his exact height on record, but if you will write to him at 207 South Ardmore avenue, Los Angeles, he'll probably be delighted to give you any statistics you feel you need.

* * *

CAROL: We have no information on the subject of Mr. Chaney's personal affairs. Sorry.

* * *

R. A. S.: I did comment upon "Star Dust," and entirely agree with your opinion.

PEGGY: Suppose you write and ask Mr. Valentino where he got the

By Eye Witness.

Fifteenth paper—"Hamlet," and Adventures in the Variorum.

WE say we read "Hamlet." We do not. We peck at it. We see it enacted two or three or four times in our lives, and then, like the honest colonel of dragoons who saw Irving's Hamlet and was asked how he liked it, we "enjoy the quotations." Only we are not so honest as he was.

From the store of editions of Shakespeare that have remained unopened and uncut since the day Marion was married—when all the bridesmaids said, "O, what a pretty set!"—you could assemble enough copies of "Hamlet" to equip all the poor-boys-who-will-become-famous in this country, thus enabling them thirty years hence to tell the helpful magazines of What I Owe to My Early Reading of Shakespeare. They put in the Bible, too. 'Tis equal cant.

The tragedy of "Hamlet" is not that final scene which moved even the hardy and expeditious Fortinbras—Hamlet's antithesis—to exclaim, "O, proud death, what feast is toward in thine eternal cell?" The tragedy is that a highly exciting and thought-provoking story has been lectured and essayed almost to death. The generality of mankind—which is Macaulayese for most people—get at "Hamlet," if they get at it at all, through the lectures and essays. They do not get at it through the sole method which would make it their possession. That method is to read it with the Furness variorum edition of "Hamlet," which will give back to us the significance of some of the grand, sinewy, savory old words in the play that have dropped out of current speech—or have become blurred and enfeebled—and which will impart much of the extraordinarily picturesque and often very illuminating sidelights and fullglares which actors have brought to bear on the rôle of Hamlet. That edition, two portly volumes, will cost you $12, but, if you really wish to know Shakespeare, you will never make a better buy. The way of knowing which it makes possible is not boresome. Sometimes it becomes as exhilarating as a game.

I feel sorry for a boy or a girl that sits down to "Hamlet" without a helper. And yet it is without helpers that the poor lambs have these master works thrust upon them. The youngling is expected to catch up, as he reads, a knowledge and an understanding of things which his elders neither know nor understand. So reading, he must many a time wonder what the people in "Hamlet" are raving about. He will come upon the words "extravagant and erring" (Act I., Scene 1, Line 154) where they are used in a sense that implies neither absurdity nor wrongdoing, but only wandering. He will find the words "admire," "admired," and "admiration" used in a sense that has so little to do with the sense of an enthusiastically favorable impression that to read them in that sense is sometimes to reduce the text to gibberish and sometimes to distort it.

There is more than the mere learning of new-old definitions in digging into words which, as you might say, drifted away from us across a sea of centuries and now are cast, maimed and changed, upon the shore of our time. They become, if we will tenderly examine them, messengers to us from our fathers that have lain three hundred years in their grave, speaking to us their speech.

The fancy is pretty enough—but let us be specific: Let us, as Hamlet says to the First Player, "study, for a need, some dozen or sixteen lines," starting with the thrill Shakespeare wanted to communicate to his soldier auditors. Did ever a story begin better!

BERNARDO. Who's there?
FRANCISCO (on sentry-go before a king's castle. It is midnight and very cold.) Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold yourself.
BERNARDO. Long live the king!
FRANCISCO. Bernardo?
BERNARDO. He.
FRANCISCO. You come most carefully upon your hour.
BERNARDO. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.
FRANCISCO. For this relief much thanks: 'tis bitter cold,
And I am sick at heart.
BERNARDO. Have you had quiet guard?
FRANCISCO. Not a mouse stirring.
BERNARDO. Well, good-night.
If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.
FRANCISCO. I think I hear them. Stand, ho! Who's there?
HORATIO. Friends to this ground.
MARCELLUS. And liegemen to the Dane.
FRANCISCO. Give you good-night.
MARCELLUS. O, farewell, honest soldier:
Who hath relieved you?
FRANCISCO. Bernardo has my place.
Give you good-night. [He departs.]
MARCELLUS. Holla! Bernardo!
BERNARDO. Say,
What, is Horatio there?
HORATIO. A piece of him.
BERNARDO. Welcome, Horatio: Welcome, good Marcellus.
MARCELLUS. What, has this thing appear'd again tonight?
BERNARDO. I have seen nothing.
MARCELLUS. Horatio says 'tis but our fancy.

There are three and twenty lines.

Did Dumas in his liveliest strain of cut and thrust ever drive his atmosphere in upon a scene with surer swiftness and precision! What do you glean from this staccato half page? I glean first that in the mind of the man who utters the first two words of the play a state of terrible nervous tension prevails; for any soldier will tell me that Bernardo, when he challenges a sentinel, violates one of the fundamentals of military usage. Therefore he, himself a soldier, must be in a high state of excitement, or of anxiety—or both—so to err. Thus Shakespeare, with the first two words of his play, rouses the interest of our soldier-spectator. Pregnant words in themselves, then, and the source also of a fine phrase by that prince of fact-givers and analysts, Samuel Coleridge; for, of this faux pas of Bernardo's, he said, "A brave man is never so peremptory as when he fears that he is afraid."

The sentinel resents the breach curtly, and says, "Nay, answer me," and Bernardo replies, "Long live the king!" Now, watch your step, for you will be saying that "Long live the king!" was the password for the night. It was not. In Shakespeare's time—and this play is a picture of Elizabethan England at the end of the sixteenth century, and not of Denmark in the eleventh, which was the real Hamlet's time—in Shakespeare's time, I say, "Long live the king" was the equivalent of the phrase "A friend," which we give when we are challenged by a sentry.

We approach this sentry, Francisco, and learn, apropos of nothing except that he is glad to be off watch, that he is "sick at heart." About what? Ah, Shakespeare does not tell. He is busy with color—laying it on boldly, shrilly—in staccato, as it were. He must work fast. He does. He has used eight and a half lines (two of them of one word each), and has given you tension, cold and melancholy, and a watch being very strictly kept. We have been hurled into the situation.

Once, in the state theater of Sweden, I saw them emphasize all this bleakness and mystery in a masterly way. The stage was almost dark. The four entering and departing soldiers moved against a kind of bluish darkness—battlements and a chill sky very faintly and remotely indicated. But you did not lose their faces—neither the anxious one of Bernardo, nor the skeptical one of Horatio, nor yet the expectant one of Marcellus. For, to the left of the stage as you faced it glowed a brazier, and as the shuddering men passed to and fro they would pause sometimes before it and warm their numbed fingers, and as they bent above it its red glow shone upward upon their faces—darkness all around them still. It was masterly. They had gripped Shakespeare.

The obvious disclosures from a moderately attentive reading of Shakespeare are not negligible. There are some not so obvious, and they demand stricter attention. Carlyle said that he who knows only his own language knows not any. However that may be, it is certain that he who knows his own language in only one period of its development knows very little about it and misses a great deal of important word history. Bernardo speaks of Horatio and Marcellus as "the rivals of my watch." If you read the word only in the sense it has today, you will read precisely the opposite to what Bernardo meant. He meant neighbors, partners, for he used the word in its original significance of near neighbors (rivales) by the same brook (rivus). In the first printed text of "Hamlet" Bernardo did say "partners of my watch." Why did Shakespeare make the change? We do not know. But we get a fleeting glimpse of him at work. In any case this is the only place in all his plays where he used rivals in its earlier sense.

Go now to line 41 in this scene. The Ghost appears to the soldiers, and instantly Marcellus says to Horatio, "Thou art a scholar; speak to it." Why does he say that? Because Latin was the language of exorcism, and only scholars had Latin. Try line 65 of this same scene. Marcellus is saying that twice before has the Ghost come and "jump at this dead hour." Jump was a legitimate adverb in Shakespeare's time, and meant "just," but was considered stronger. Toward the close of this scene the stage directions say "The cock crows," whereat the Ghost vanishes. When Garrick played Hamlet the audience used to hear the sound of cock crowing. Now such business would only rouse laughter.

Thus does taste change with the lessening of man's credulity. Everything is valid if everything is believed. In England, so late as Garrick's time, you would find that nine-tenths of your theaterful believed in ghosts.

Thus, with a few thrilling lines of the text in a paper-bound copy of "Hamlet"—and that copy laid open on the corresponding page of noble old Furness—you start on your adventures in the Variorum. You have nearly 4,000 lines to go—new entertainment, new instruction, new illumination, and the quaint, the curious, and the unexpected leaping up to you from nearly every line of the play now, for to nearly every line the wise old scholar has brought his profitable bit, not of routine "commentary," but of helpful fact and enriching allusion gleaned from the whole vast field of Shakespeare lore. Bon voyage!

Next Sunday—Holmes' "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table."

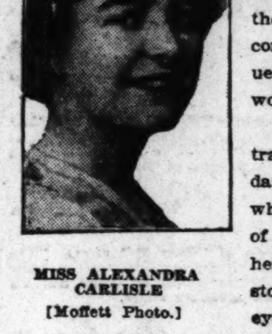
"The Truth About Blayds" Is Its Center of Gravity Is Shifted

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, March 18.—A bit underwritten is the new play by A. A. Milne, "The Truth About Blayds," in the Booth theater. The actors, sensing some such fault of too much perfection in the original of the work they are doing, overact it in one or two places. Mr. Milne takes the tragedy of Blayds too lightly. Miss Alexandra Carlisle takes it too heavily. Between these two interpretations lies a clever little trick of a tale, shorter, I suspect, than the time Mr. Milne takes to tell it, but just the sort of outline for him to fill in with his talent for pretty and diverting detail.



MISS ALEXANDRA CARLISLE

Miss Carlisle's persistence in taking all of "The Truth About Blayds" as a very serious matter, fit for meaningful elocution, conveniently illustrates the points in his story which Mr. Milne, always the comedian, has seen fit to pass by; points where Samuel Shipman, for instance, always the tragedian, would press his greatest weight.

Mr. Milne is not seriously concerned with the tragedy in the predicament of Blayds' spinster daughter, Isobel (which Miss Carlisle finds so sad), when the famous old poet, survivor into the present of the greatness of the Victorian era, confesses to her on his deathbed that his verses have all been stolen from a man long dead. He has but half an eye for the sadness of her sacrificed state, a wasted human offering to a god of belles lettres who has been proved false. But he has a whole and winking one for the comic things around her.

The pumped up importance of Blayds' son-in-law has had all the air grotesquely let out of it, and here is pompous William Blayds-Conway, Esq., delivered to the pen that learned to lampoon in the pages of Punch. And the female Blayds whom William married, moistening many handkerchiefs with the tears of a pure type Œdipus complex, is she not good stuff for Milne's gently ruinous ridicule? His pleasure is to gibe the unlucky self-revelations of a household which has had all the inheritance of the glory and fortune of a famous name rudely swept from them, and his main business is doing that brown.

The center of gravity of the play will thus be found in the pungently ironic scene of the second act, when these various selfish folk are confronted with the proof that they and the nation have just conducted a fine funeral for a venerable fraud, and again in the family council of the third act, wherein they cautiously and with many droll sophisms start out to make a second secret funeral for the truth.

In the Booth the center of gravity has been put, wrongly, I think, in the undoubted powers for moving sentiment of Miss Carlisle's acting. It makes too much gravity in the Booth.

Mr. O'Neill Hogties and Skins a Hero.

The horrible thing about these strange O'Neill dramatic proceedings in the Provincetown Players' little theater in MacDougal street is not the hair on Actor Louis Wolheim's bare and sweating chest, nor the fervid vocabulary which O'Neill has put in his large trombony mouth, nor yet the ghastly termination of "The Hairy Ape's" career in the scrunching arms of a terribly realistic gorilla, plus the subsequent hysterias of the women in the audience.

TOM POWERS.
[White Photo.]

These are tricks of the strenuous little theater stage for which report and import from the Parisian Grand Guignol stage have prepared the venturesome playgoer. My sweat in the overpacked MacDougal street house was not chilled by these paint terrors. But it ran cold during the intermissions, when there was time to ruminate on the brain of the man who had contrived the entertainment. Eugene O'Neill has allowed that brain to take on a fine cruel edge and has fallen into a way of using it surgically, as one uses only scalpels. "The Hairy Ape" resembles the same author's "Emperor Jones" only in the formal aspects of its curious construction in the eight stage pictures which O'Neill prefers to the traditional three acts.

Between the earlier and the present work he has made an enormous mental ascent and an equal temperamental descent. "The Emperor" was a type of the reverting civilized Negro. "The Ape" is no type, but a very human suffering man. In "The Emperor" O'Neill dissected. In "The Ape" he vivisects.

"The Ape" he calmly hogties and skins. From the moment the first curtain goes up on "The Ape" and his fellows, lolling half nude in the hell hole of the stokers' quarters of a modern ocean liner, until it goes down on "The Ape" writhing with a broken back in the gorilla cage in the Central park zoo, he is continuously at the harsh mercies of his tormenting biographer.

An Author's Grim Privileges.

Of course, in no play do the characters have much privacy from the author. He can strip and libel at will. The author has all the privileges of a ferret, the characters none of those of the hunted rabbit. No play character is permitted to run.

A decent author will not take the ultimate privilege of the ferret and gnaw his prey after it is caught. But O'Neill has no gentle scruples. He writes the history of a man who never had a chance, following him from indignity to indignity, from stokehold to park bench, to jail, to death, heaping on him the final indignity of this photographic record of his many shames. He has not written or given "The Hairy Ape" a fair play.

The production of the piece is enthusiastically good, particularly in the acting. The Third avenue slang in which it is written presents no difficulties which Mr. Wolheim has not mastered. To use some of that vernacular here, Mr. Wolheim as the Ape is a ham what am. And Henry O'Neill (no relationship mentioned in the program) is, as his pal Paddy, the next best thing.

The Oft-told Truth that Makes One Weary.

One of the attractive things about "The First Fifty Years," in the Princess theater, is that the reviewer does not have to work in a long string of names of people concerned in its production together with, if possible, fitting and variegated adjectives. Henry Myers, a Columbia graduate, wrote it. Clare Eames and Tom Powers act it. That is all. When one has termed the first novel, the second impressive, and the third sane, the personalities are done with, the compliments over, and we can get on to the thing, the play.

MISS CLARE EAMES.
[Standiford Photo.]

If Author Myers is novel, his play is much noveler. Indeed, it is a novel, and its presence as a play on the Princess stage is the merest accident of the writer's imagination. It would not surprise me to learn that Myers had originally produced this record of fifty years of the married life of his two protagonists with a book press in mind, and had changed the opus for the stage simply by handing all the dialogue to two actors and all the descriptive stuff to a scene painter.

Myers speaks of the failure of marriage. His pair start blithely, like the end of a perfect fiction, on a simple honeymoon in a Harlem flat. Thence their course and that of the play is ever downward toward the dumps, until, in an ultimate scene, Mr. Myers sets them in two chairs to glance backward over the anniversaries of their mating and discover that everything was all wrong, always all wrong.

It was. They suffered in Harlem. Things got worse when they moved to the suburbs. They got still worse when the old man began to develop indigestion and the old lady the mood which made Lydia Pinkham famous. And they were wretched beyond repair on the golden anniversary, which the aging couple spent in vindictive silence, having vowed never to speak to each other again.

O, for Another Stevenson!

All this is done very deftly by Mr. Myers and redone veraciously by the two actors. But, I claim discovery, the truth is lately getting easy to tell. The trick of exposing it has become so general among the writing people that it has become just habit. Nothing, nowadays, is simpler than to tell the truth about almost anything, treaties, Tammany, taxes, and tummies. The inhibitions are all down in the mud, the victory over the Victorian complete.

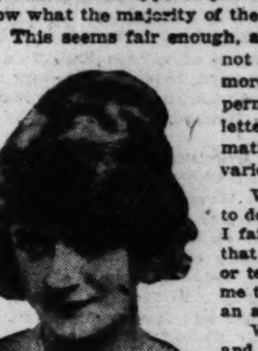
In fact the truth is told so often it makes me tired. It is time again for a quaint and fascinating lie. I want a new Robert Louis Stevenson to write me three hundred pages of circumstantial account of things that could not happen, or another Barrie with three acts of undiluted make-believe. The short and ugly truths that Messrs. Eugene O'Neill, George Bernard Shaw, and Henry Myers lately have been telling me have made me weary, and I want to be refreshed with tall and pretty tales.

Being Late at the Play: the Playgoer Speaks His Mind

By Sheppard Butler.

SOME reference was made in this column last Sunday to the experience of a theatrical manager who has declined to seat late comers during the progress of the first act of his play. Having encountered objection to this procedure and finding himself between the Scylla and Charybdis of offending this or that type of patron, the harried gentleman expressed a desire to know what the majority of the public would like.

This seems fair enough, and inasmuch as a newspaper is nothing if it is not a palladium of its readers' liberties, it seems no more than right that they, as friends of the court, be permitted something in the way of a reply. Many letters on the subject have been received by the dramatic editor. All, in stentorian tones, give voice variously to a single conviction. Thus:



MISS BILLIE BURKE
in "The Intimate Strangers," at Powers'.

We visit New York periodically, and there is little to do there outside of going to theaters in the evening. I fail to remember ever going to a show in New York that started on time and at which at least half a dozen or ten people did not crawl all over me without giving me time to get up and let them by, especially if I had an aisle seat.

We went to see ——— in Chicago Saturday night and enjoyed what little of it we heard. As a matter of fact, it could have been in pantomime as far as we were concerned, since the entire first act was taken up by a lot of our prominent citizens who were late. They tramped down the aisles as if they were shod with iron. The seats were slammed up and down and, shutting your eyes, you could almost imagine that you were in a boiler factory.

I could almost pray that some time, some manager of a local theater will have enough backbone to go back to the old starting of the show at 8:15 and advertise the fact prominently also stating in clear, boldface type that any patrons who arrive after 8:15 will have to remain standing in the back of the house until the end of the first act or prologue.

Another correspondent puts it rather more grandiloquently:

Your story of the irate citizen who feels himself inalienably entitled to the right to suit his own convenience as to the time of his arrival and seating at a performance tells all too well the basic problem that must be met in a democracy. It is simply the old, old question, What is liberty? Is it the right to do as one pleases at the expense of the welfare and happiness of those around one, or is it of necessity founded upon a due respect for the rights of others?

The greatest good of the greatest number is the grease that makes the wheels of community life run smoothly. It is the penalty of group life, and he who does not like it had best seek some Robinson Crusoe isle where he can regulate his life for his own happiness only. By all means, in the public theater, allow those who take the precaution to be on time to enjoy to the full the fruits of their punctuality. What is to prevent this irate person from numbering himself among the punctual?

So much for that. Shall we consider the discussion closed?

Taking the Censorship Bull by the Horns.

An impressive gathering of dignitaries has assembled in New York and formulated a plan by which it proposes to censor American drama at its source. If possible the scheme will be put in effect before the end of the present theatrical season. It is not the project of any legislative body or reform organization, but is sponsored by the actors, producers, and playwrights themselves—said actors, producers, and playwrights being profoundly of the opinion that, if stage censorship is coming, they had better take the bull by the horns and see that it is well mannered and conducted with due regard for things as they should be. A mixed sentence, but perhaps you get the idea.

MISS GRACE GEORGE
[Sarony Photo.]

What the showmen propose is that the municipal government of New York City join them in appointing a panel of 300 representative citizens from whose number juries may be drawn to pass upon any entertainment against which complaint shall be made. The idea has been agreed upon after much travail of spirit and many differences of opinion, and it is hoped the city authorities will like it. If they do, the stage folk will write into all contracts a guarantee that the juries' decisions will be binding and will not be taken into the courts. Any plays or parts of plays that are declared objectionable will be withdrawn forthwith.

The plan has the backing of the Producing Managers' association, the Actors' Equity association, the Society of American Dramatists, the Authors' League of America, the Drama league, and the Better Public Shows association. The last named body includes about thirty-five welfare organizations; the others comprise in their membership most of the important people of the stage. Minority reports, expressing opposition to the jury idea, have been filed by the Messrs. Shubert, A. H. Woods, and Morris Gest, but the others are going ahead with the project.

What they want is to forestall any "political censorship" that may be contemplated by the New York state legislature. This, of course, would be virtually national censorship, since New York produces the nation's plays. The proposed city censorship would be equally comprehensive, but it would be a homeopathic dose, and the showmen, fearing something worse, are not only willing but eager to take it.

Novelties for Fund Benefit; News of the Theaters.

Various novel informalities are planned for the Actors' Fund benefit performance to be given at the Auditorium next Friday afternoon. In addition to the conventional bits from different entertainments now visible in Chicago, there will be five, and perhaps more, playlets specially rehearsed for the occasion.

MISS ALLYN KING
in "Ladies' Night," at the Woods.

One, which goes to Shakespeare for its source, is the pastoral scene from "The Winter's Tale," which has not been acted here since 1910 and which is to be played in this instance by Miss Genevieve Tobin as Perdita and Barry Baxter as Florizel. Another is a rip-roaring melodrama of some sort, to be participated in by Miss Ina Claire, Arthur Byron, Lawrence Grossmith, Miss Elizabeth Risdon, Miss Patricia Collinge, Miss Allyn King, and various others. A third is a satire by S. Jay Kaufman called "Love," which will enlist the services of Miss Francine Larrimore, Norman Trevor and some assistants, and a fourth is a dramatic bit called "No. 1,001," to be presented by the men of the "Little Old New York" company.

Finally, society will do its bit by contributing a colorful pageant entitled "Sports of the World," wherein numerous young women not of the stage will test their ability to sing, dance, and wear gay attire.

Vaudeville at the Apollo will be discontinued for the season at the end of next week, if present plans are carried out. On April 2 this playhouse probably will be tenanted by the veteran blackface comics, McIntyre and Heath, in their new musical comedy, "Red Pepper." This will remain all summer, if it proves sufficiently popular, and presumably will establish the Apollo's permanent emancipation from the two-a-day, since it is said some other playhouse will be used for Shubert vaudeville in the fall as part of the rearrangement involved in the general pooling agreement recently effected.

The New York Winter Garden also is to revert to its former estate as a home of extravaganza. Vaudeville will hold forth there only a month longer, and on April 24 Eddie Cantor will take possession with the entertainment called "Make It Snappy."

* * *

The coincidence of Lent, with its impulse toward asceticism, and the income tax period, with its suggestion of economy, has hit the theaters a body blow. Business generally is bad, and it is predicted that Easter will find many playhouses throughout the country closed for the season.

* * *

Chicago gets a foretaste of such a condition this week. With seven entertainments departing and only five coming to take their places, two downtown theaters, the Studebaker and Central, will be left "dark." This is not a new experience for the Central, but a midseason suspension of activity at the Studebaker is a rare occurrence.

* * *

There is a possibility that a new play by Cosmo Hamilton will be revealed at the La Salle when "The Silver Fox" finishes its course there on April 2. Hamilton, now his own producer, has the manuscript in his trunk and would like the players of "The Silver Fox" to continue in his employ with the new opus as their medium. There has been some difficulty as to terms, and this may or may not be straightened out. If it is, Hamilton will keep the theater for a time. If not, Miss Irene Shipman, in the musical comedy "Lola," will come to the La Salle, fulfilling an engagement already tentatively made. No information is at hand regarding the title or nature of the new Hamilton play.

Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr are to be reunited for further delving into the affairs of Messrs. Potash and Perlmutter. The new opus, by Montague Glass, is entitled "Potash and Perlmutter Motors Co.," which gives an idea of what it is like. Rehearsals will begin this week, with Lee Kohlmar in an important rôle.

Charlton Andrews, who turned "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" into English and helped write "Ladies' Night," due at the Woods tomorrow, is at work upon a stage version of E. M. Hull's novel, "The Sheik." When the discussion of stage censorship was getting under way it was a favorite argument among the "antis" that seven members of the Producing Managers' association refused recently to have any thing to do with the tale. Some one evidently has been found who is not so fastidious.

Leila Taylor and Gertrude Purcell, two young women hitherto little known in the world of the theater, are having a stimulating experience with their romantic comedy called "Voltaire." Within a few days after their manuscript had reached Arthur Hopkins' offices in New York work was started on the production, with Arnold Daly assigned to the title rôle. Then the Messrs. Putnam violated all precedent by seeking the immediate right to publish the drama. Thus a play by virtually unknown authors will appear in book form this week simultaneously with its first performances behind the footlights.

Some such adventure may be in store for an American dramatist who has in his trunk a play suitable for Miss Fay Bainter. William Harris Jr. started for Europe the other day to seek such a work, but experienced an eleventh hour change of heart and instead has issued a call for manuscripts of native origin. Other things being equal, both Miss Bainter and Mr. Harris prefer a play of American life rather than one involving oriental characterization, as did "East Is West." Also, he intimates, there will be need soon of something new for Miss Ina Claire, who has denied the report that she is planning a return to musical comedy.

April 9 is now definitely fixed as the date for Miss Pauline Lord's arrival at the Cort in Eugene O'Neill's "Anna Christie." Miss Francine Larrimore will take "Nice People" to Detroit on that day.

Walker Whiteside departed from Chicago last night with no word to dispel the pleasant mystery as to who wrote "The Hindu." In the face of general suspicion that the "Gordon Kean" of the playbills is Mr. Whiteside himself, he has blandly refused either to affirm or deny the impeachment. Now he goes to New York, where the play is announced as the work of "Gordon Kean and Carl Mason"—possibly in the thought that if one pseudonym is puzzling, two must be doubly so.

Gazing into the future, John Golden, producer, and Frank Bacon, co-author and star of "Lightnin'," perceive that the comedy will reach its three hundredth Chicago performance on the evening of Saturday, April 15. They have asked the Blackstone hotel to prepare some food, therefore, and will entertain the company at a banquet after the performance.

They like Earl Carroll's new theater in New York, but do not care for "Bavu," the melodrama of his own authorship with which he opened the playhouse. It expired last night, therefore, and will be succeeded by "Just Because," a musical comedy with Frank Moulan, Jane Richardson, and various others in it.

"Up" has been discarded as too laconic a title for the new play being prepared for Miss Marjorie Rambeau. They have decided to call it "Jenny Jones" instead.

Franz Molnar's "Liliom," in its wanderings here and there, has been experiencing some of the presumptive problems of censorship. In some cities exception has been taken to the courtroom scene in the Great Beyond, a quaint incident of the play, and it has been deemed advisable to add a note to the program explaining that the episodes in the Beyond are the imaginings of Liliom, and not a serious attempt to show heaven.

Concerning Bert Williams, a correspondent writes to Heywood Broun of the New York World:

"I saw Bert a month or so ago in Chicago. He was lying on a couch in his dressing room when I entered. He told me that his stomach was 'bad, but that's the way I am, feeling fine one day and not so good the next.' Then, to change the subject, he asked 'Did you read the debate in the New Republic between James M. Beck and Felix Frankfurter on the Mooney case?' I had not, but had heard of the article. 'Well, I'm going on in a minute. There's a copy on the trunk. Read it and tell me what you think of it. And there's a few interesting thoughts about Mr. Taft as chief justice in the same issue.'

"We discussed the articles the following day, Sunday, in my room at the Congress—his political reactions were radical—and talk followed concerning psycho-analysis, the movies, Gilpin, 'The Emperor Jones,' Al Jolson, and Eddie Cantor. During the course of our talk I suggested that he close for a few weeks after the Chicago engagement and take a rest. He was obviously in ill health. He refused to think of the suggestion. 'Throw a lot of people out of work? Never. I feel a lot better today.' But he had mentioned a will that day, and knowing that he entertained certain superstitions concerning the making of a will and a consequent impending death, I realized that he knew how ill he really was. . . . I drew that will the other day while Bert was on his deathbed. After its execution he smiled cheerfully, said he felt '80 per cent better,' and spontaneously hummed a Negro air, a sort of 'spiritual.' I rather think that the doctor, his friend Nail, and I were the only ones who ever heard that strain."

Gregory Kelly is to assume, for touring purposes, the rôle played by Frank Craven in the latter's highly successful comedy, "The First Year." Miss Ruth Gordon (Mrs. Kelly) will be with him. So prosperous is Craven with his play in New York that it seems doubtful whether he will ever reach this hinterland.

A melodrama by Dorothy Donnelly (on which, it is reported, Edward Sheldon has collaborated) is about to be produced. It is called "The Lucky Ones," and may have Miss Emily Stevens as its principal player.

The late Edmond Rostand's last work, "La Derniere Nuit de Don Juan," was produced in Paris ten days ago, with Jean Coquelin and Mme. Moreno in the leading rôles. It was well received, but is described as "not a great play."

The New Plays

Drama, Farce, Revue, Opera Among Week's Arrivals—What the Future Has in Store.

OPENING TONIGHT.

"The Ziegfeld Frolic" (Colonial)—A spacious entertainment in the manner of Mr. Ziegfeld's midnight shows in New York, with travesties, living pictures, girls, costumes and kindred allurements. Will Rogers is the featured performer and others involved are Brandon Tynan, Eva Clark, Lotta Miles, June Roberts, Annette Bade, and Arthur West.

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT.

"The Intimate Strangers" (Powers')—Miss Billie Burke, newly returned to the stage after six years' absence in the movies, in a whimsical comedy by Booth Tarkington. The play involves the presence of various droll Tarkington characters, impersonated—very well, they say—by Alfred Lunt, Glenn Hunter, Frances Howard, Charles Abbe, and others.

"The Exquisite Hour" (Princess)—Miss Grace George in a new comedy by Margaret Wright (a name not familiar to theatergoers) having to do with the affairs of an irresponsible husband and a pleasantly cynical wife. The principal rôles, aside from that of the star, will be played by Norman Trevor, Curtis Cooksie, and Margery Maxwell.

"Ladies' Night" (Woods)—Another of those perilous farces, being in this instance a narrative of comic adventures in a Turkish bath. Avery Hopwood and Charlton Andrews are the authors, and the chief participants are Charles Ruggles and Allyn King.

Russian Grand opera (Olympic)—Exiles from the soviet régime in exotic offerings, mostly new to this country. Mr. Moore tells about them on another page of this section.

IMPENDING JOYS.

"The O'Brien Girl" (Cohan's Grand, April 2)—A musical comedy by Otto Harbach, Frank Mandel, and Lou Hirsch. The only George M. Cohan production which remained intact during its sponsor's "retirement" from the stage.

"Red Pepper" (Apollo, April 2)—A musical extravaganza, with McIntyre and Heath as its chief performers.

"Lola" (La Salle, April 2)—Miss Helen Shipman and others in a musical comedy by George E. Stoddard, Ballard MacDonald, and James F. Hanley.

"Anna Christie" (Cort, April 9)—Miss Pauline Lord and other good players in a grisly and highly effective bit of realism by Eugene O'Neill.

"The Dream Maker"—William Gillette, in a play of his own authorship, vaguely reminiscent of his "Sherlock Holmes." Coming to Powers' when Miss Burke departs.

"The Perfect Fool"—Ed Wynn's annual show. Listed for arrival next month at the Illinois.

roses. Probably they grew in his desert. Wouldn't any rose grow for him—anywhere? "The Bronze Bell"? I think not.

D. W. R.: Miss Larrimore's picture has been printed at least twice in "roto."

D. U.: What makes a man's eyes open and shut like a parrot's? You've got me, David! Yes, I've seen a sunflower. Why?

LEE: It's been a long time since I've heard from you. Glad to know you're alive and still thinking of us once in a while. O, I don't mind what you mentioned in your letter. Nottabit! Thanks for your good wishes.

MISS LOTTA MILES in "The Ziegfeld Frolic," at the Colonial.

BROWSING BACKWARD

Browse backward, fans.
Over the long years:
Conjure up the films
That brought you smiles or tears.

L. W. W. has had a lovely time reminiscing! He writes:

"Dear Miss Tinee: Allow me to browse backward into the realms of movies that are past. We all recall the ancient movies of trick photography. How mystified we sat as the impossible unfolded itself before us on the flickering canvas, interrupted by the occasional break in the film, and we all thought that we had reached the height of progress in that line of entertainment.

"Came the comedies, with their chases, and moving furniture unaided by sign of hand, and the films of making funny faces. Then the crude drama, with much waving of arms and excessive gesticulating by the actors all unknown by name to the public.

"We were thrilled by 'The Great Train Robbery,' and 'The Great Bank Robbery.' Then came 'The Vitagraph Girl,' (Florence Turner) and the big fat fellow we soon learned was John Bunny, and the skinny woman (Flora Finch), and the Biograph player with the prominent teeth and ever present smile. Soon names became known, although the Biograph held back till the last in disclosing the names of their players. Writers and directors were given screen credit. The tiny trade marks were left out of every scene and only appeared at the beginning of the film. No one needed to ask who Costello, Sweet, Kerrigan, Johnson, Briscoe, and Bronco Billy Anderson were. To a younger generation these names do not mean much. Today we find as many as ten people given screen credit for the making of the pictures.

"Personally I think the three reels for 5 cents we used to get gave us a greater thrill than our present day de luxe performances. Perhaps we are getting blasé.

"There were many old Edison one reelers that were fine. Two have remained in my mind these many years. 'A Day that Is Dead,' and 'Annie Crawls Upstairs.' 'Sands of Dee' and 'Oil and Water,' Biographs, with Sweet and Walthall, were splendid. I consider 'Greater Wealth,' an old Selig one reeler with Herbert Bosworth, Tom Santschi, and Bessie Eyton, a great picture with a great lesson, and 'The Love of an Island Maid,' with the same cast, was a splendid picture well acted and with wonderful scenery. Lubin's 'The Blinded Heart,' with Lottie Briscoe, Arthur Johnson, and Florence Hackett, was touching and splendidly done.

"Then came the multiple reels and serials. 'Custer's Last Fight,' a 101 Bison, was good, as were many of the Broncho films; one 'The Greenhorn,' I recall. 'Alo Ahoe,' with Willard Mack was a splendid Fine Arts picture of love in the tropics.

"'The Lily and the Rose,' by the old Fine Arts company, was the most evenly balanced picture as to action, outside of 'The Four Horsemen,' that I have had the pleasure of seeing. The photography, lighting, and direction were perfect."

VLADIMIR RADEEFF with Russian Grand Opera Company.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

MISS DARLENE DAWSON.

MISS MARIE WHITING.

[Photos by Raymor.]

Miss Marie Whiting, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo de A. Whiting of 1147 Hyde Park boulevard, will be married to Philip C. Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Hill of Boston, Wednesday evening, May 10, at the residence of her parents. Only the relatives and a few friends will witness the ceremony, but there will be a large reception following it at the South Shore Country club. Mr. and Mrs. Hill will live in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. White Dawson of 4515 Magnolia avenue have announced the engagement of their daughter, Darlene, to Ernest W. Sampson of Chicago. The wedding will take place in May or June.

MME. PIERAT.

Mme. Pierat, no longer young, plays at the Comédie Française the part of an exquisite woman. "But her penetrating charm and fascination are not sentenced in France to eclipse with the fading of her beauty."

Gay Paris Gay No More; French Dining at Home

By Eleanor Gizycka

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paris has changed. I thought at first it was just myself grown old, but the French people themselves are the first to proclaim it. The sparkle and nip have gone. Restaurant life, for instance, is flat, like corked champagne. To begin with, French people of every class of society have taken to eating at home instead of in public, a habit formed during the war chiefly for reasons of economy.

Then, too, during these last years women have universally dressed in black and worn the same kind of make-up and the same type of pearls. It has been impossible to tell the real from the imitation—ladies or jewels—and the innocent from Riggins, Idaho, for instance, is robbed of that pleasurable excitement of former days when the great cocotte, the jeweled bird of paradise, was as distinctive a show piece of Paris as the Eiffel tower, and as easily to be recognized at the first rapt glance.

But one hears that the demi-mondaine has in truth, and not only in appearance, lost her splendor; and that her black frock and questionable pearls are symbolic of a change of era. The magnificent courtesan has been dethroned, they say, along with the other sovereigns of the world—gone with the fantastic spenders of Berlin, Vienna, Petrograd, and Moscow—ousted by the more insatiable vampires of war.

Smile in Vain.

The tables no longer reserved for her at the restaurants are left empty At Ciro's the other night after the play there were just three couples dancing. Passing on conscientiously to the Perroquet, above the Casino de Paris, we found the only real crowd I have seen in Paris; a compact circle of dancers penned in between the serried tables; concentrated, sweating, bestial faces—one really wondered why they tarried. Great animation here, throwing of colored balls, champagne drinking, and screaming and laughter. Some extremely pretty girls. A scene of riot and color, not without charm.

Twice we had late supper at the Café de Paris, where solitary, discontented, and disillusioned ladies smile in vain. Most of the dancing in this once pungent and sparkling frolic now depends upon the activities of four young men professionals who sit together at one table during the pauses in the music, and proffer their services for a discreetly slipped 20 francs.

With fine sophistication these four young men have been selected from violently opposite types. A camellia skinned, patent leather headed South American youth dances on the outside sole of his feet with insinuating undulation of rounded hips. A square shouldered, red cheeked young athlete with muscular calves, Teutonic in appearance, exercises his partners with beautiful rhythm but devastating vigor. A monocled, slim, and vapid faced Britisher, with a tiny mustache and perfect clothes, is correct, precise, and detached. And there is a writhing, vicious, emaciated little French boy, brilliant eyed, a master of the shimmy.

Relics of Happier Days.

The cuisine of Voisin's and the cave is still unsurpassed in Paris, which means unrivaled throughout the rest of the world. But the two small rooms were nearly empty both nights I dined there, and the waiters, relics of happier days, stood about idle and dejected. M. Brassersac himself, as always, in immaculate black; his white linen exquisite, his black soft tie carefully careless; his hair, now white, brushed straight back; his gallant black eye drooping—M. Brassersac has grown very, very old. True, his meridional r-r-r-r-r still rolls and rumbles in all its pristine glory. He is still the personification of sympathy and melting charm. But he moves so slowly from table to table, the dear old man, and uncertainly, as if he were no longer quite sure of his way.

I had half of duck No. 57,257 at the Tour d'Argent at lunch the other day. It took fifty-five minutes by the watch to prepare this duck; the first twenty-five in secret in the kitchen, the last twenty in public, before our eyes. It occupied the entire attention of one of the two grave and portly maitres d'hotel, who dedicate themselves entirely to the creation of this dish. First the breast was carved and laid aside on a silver platter. Then what remained of the carcass was crushed in a silver press until the red blood ran; and this, with an addition of Madeira and white wine, is the foundation of the sauce in which the carved portions of the breast are bathed—bathed is the olny word for it—with a tireless spoon, for twenty-five long minutes, over a double spirit lamp.

Preceding the duck came a beignet of sole; ephemeral, amusing, and succeeding it a melting, dripping, golden pear. But if I were doomed to eat lunch every day of my life at the Tour d'Argent or every day of my life at the average American lunchroom, I should choose the latter, even with the full knowledge that in the art of cooking we Americans rank last; and that in consequence our national malady is dyspepsia.

In the World of Dress.

I have only been to four or five dressmakers in Paris. Worth, Vionnet, Chanel, Jean Patou, and Paquin

Worth, grandpere, became world famous as the couturier of the Empress Eugenie. As far back as I can remember dress, I remember Worth. In fact, the first dress I can remember at all, ages ago as a tiny girl, was a ball dress Worth made for my mother. The slim, pointed bodice was of dark emerald green velvet and the billowy trailing skirts of emerald green tulle, caught up with white snow balls. And to this day I still think it the prettiest dress I have ever seen.

The house of Worth has such an old and solid tradition that a temporary customer is of no special consequence. For that reason Worth will force nothing down your throat, nor exaggerate in price, nor cheat you on materials, nor play tricks with your fur, nor fail you at the last moment. He is not at his best, perhaps, in the wispy, raggedy styles of today. His natural taste is classic, and the sumptuous materials he loves to manipulate do not lend themselves easily to the bobtailed, slimsy draperies now in vogue. But there is the young generation to be considered, and his son, M. Jean Charles, with his modern ideas, has gained a final victory over his father—a truer artist than the younger man ever will be.

Vionnet has gone in for perfection of line. Nearly all her clothes are absolutely untrimmed and uniform in material, divinely cut in subtle points or squares, or long flowing lengths or draped after the Greek.

Chanel makes the most becoming clothes I have seen. They are soft, they are coquettish, they are wise. They are essentially the clothes of the pretty woman. Chanel considers the fashion, certainly, but she considers the woman first. Many a woman, for instance, looks at her best in her chemise. Chanel has considered and conserved the charm of the deshabille in many of her spring evening models—silly, adorable little dresses in thin black, quite immodest and so pretty. The flimsy loose back and front are held up, but not in place, by tiny inconsequential shoulder straps of the same material as the dress. A line of sheer black lace shows for no logical reason at the bottom of nearly all her skirts.

New Back is Careless.

Jean Patou has an unlimited variety of tailleurs, wraps, and one piece day dresses. Almost without exception they are both smart and desirable. In evening clothes he has an evident "beguin" for the new back. A low, loose effect—a careless, drooping, revealing drape, saved from a complete tumble to the waistline by the same chemise-like shoulder straps affected by Chanel. His salons were crowded with buyers the day I was there, and the procession of models lasted several hours. But he has too much to show to the nonprofessional eye, and I came away bewildered and totally incapable of any final choice.

One always sees at Paquin's extremely elegant women of the best French or international society, for Paquin's clothes are designed rather for the private individual than for the trade. She is never extravagant in her effects, and has perhaps the surest touch of any one in Paris.

During the winter there has been the greatest latitude in sleeves. Occasionally one even saw women in the middle of the day, who to relieve the monotony of their dead black dresses wore no sleeves at all. A woman lunching at the Ritz with the Princess Christopher of Greece, formerly Mrs. Leeds, a woman of the extreme Italian type, showed her beautiful bare arms up to and above the point of the shoulder. But the sleeve this spring has been distinctly moderated. In street dresses the new sleeve is tight fitting to the elbow and loose and flaring from the elbow to the hand.

They Agree About Belt Lines.

There isn't a belt line above the hips in Paris today. The dressmakers have united on this so that we shall be forced to either lengthen our skirts or look as if we were wearing the male national Greek costume.

The conventional buckled, patent leathered slipper is worn a great deal Toes are round or pointed as one prefers; slippers are slashed and strapped in a variety of fashions, and heels are universally high.

Stockings are gossamer thin, and of a gray beige, never black.

Brown is so far the only fashionable color actually seen, brown up and down the scale from beige through golden brown to the color of dead autumn leaves. Black and beige are combined a great deal together. Bright red is predicted, navy blue is shown, green is recommended. But black is still the foundation of many of the smartest models.

There is nothing extremely new in hats. One is told vaguely they will be clôche and large—exceedingly. But up to the present the small turban, twisted and draped with its deep crown, is the smartest headgear to be seen.

The best French milliners try on hats through their various stages as if they were frocks. Each customer is supposed, with the aid of her vendeuse, her vendeuse's assistant, and the woman who actually makes the hats, to create on her own head, with strips of the chosen material, the type of headgear she happens to fancy. I watched a woman at Reboux's the other afternoon, sitting bolt upright, surrounded by three or four attendants, directing the cutting out on her head of a stark, plain felt turban, where each snip of the flashing scissors meant an unalterable change of line. I watched her with admiring and apprehensive interest, as one watches a woman in the swinging trapeze at the circus. But for one, like myself, who is no expert in the art of dress, our American custom of buying a hat off the stand, wearing it home, (and nine times out of ten, trying at least to return it next day) in the long run registers fewer failures.

Shorn Locks Passé.

Bobbed hair is no longer in vogue. A great deal of half grown hair is seen. It takes a Frenchwoman to arrange these unruly locks with charm; but somehow she manages it by curling them and fluffing out the short ends over the ears, and twisting what is left into the semblance of a chignon at the nape of the neck.

No one wears face veils any more, I was told upon arriving in Paris, and it is true; one sees but few. Still, occasionally a woman no longer quite, quite young—the beautiful Mme. Letellier, for instance—appears in a light lace or mesh veil just reaching to the tip of her pretty nose. In Rome, last week, where the women still cling to the ancient charm of mystery, I noticed a great many of these half veils and behind them drooping, darkened, provoking eyes—annoying "a la longue."

The fashion in gloves is interesting. Black has been the universal favorite, but few were worn at all this winter. Not long ago I went to lunch with some French people, and, hoping to be correct—for the French do not dress up in the middle of the day—I wore neither velvet nor crepe, but a plain robe manteau of cloth, and a hard, plain felt hat—smart and rather unbecoming. But my hands in shiny, impeccable white kid suddenly seemed to me to be growing sizes and sizes larger; in fact, to be among the more conspicuous objects in the drawing room, for all the other women present, French, with the exception of one Russian lady, drew beautifully kept, jeweled, bare fingers from the recesses of their satin lined muffs.

"Still," I reasoned, driving home, "I like white gloves. They protect my hands, and they are more exquisitely thin and pliable than any other shade. French women wore them, too, before the war"—and I felt a little twinge of shame for the moments of embarrassment I had just passed through.

Overanxious to Please.

For, are we not a young people, still imitative and impressionable and occasionally a trifle overanxious to please? An Englishman is always an Englishman; a Frenchman always French, but sometimes one meets up with an American abroad who has patiently eradicated, like weeds from a beloved garden, every vestige of distinctive Americanism—clothes, speech, manner, even trick of thought and feeling, all devoutly dedicated to the newly adopted country. True, he may have acquired in exchange a variety of delightful qualities; but they are never quite his own. He is in fact constitutionally ashamed of himself, and nothing American remains to this type of individual but his income.

"Insist on yourself. Never imitate. Your own gift you can present at any moment with a cumulative force of a whole life's cultivation, but in the adopted talent of another you have only an extemporaneous half possession."

It is quite beyond any ability of mine to create a bridge of words between Emerson and the young thing of 50 in Paris today. Please, therefore, permit me to fly through space and come to an old friend who almost upon greeting, after an absence of fifteen years, made this most arresting observation: "Why, darling, you

Chicago Hostess to Annual D. A. R. State Conference

By Adelaide H. Sisson.

[Chairman Publicity Committee, Twenty-sixth Conference Illinois Daughters of the American Revolution.]

THE twenty-sixth annual conference of Illinois Daughters of the American Revolution will meet on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at the Hotel La Salle. The five chapters of Chicago—the Chicago, Henry Dearborn, Kaskaskia, De Walt Mechlin, and the newly organized Austin chapter—will be the hostesses. The conference will open at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning for credentials and preliminary work, and the program will start at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, followed by a reception at the Chicago Historical society from 4:30 until 6 o'clock.

The state society numbers over 7,000 members, of which approximately 1,200 belong to chapters in Chicago. The national organization now numbers 125,000 and is growing rapidly. The activities of the Daughters of the American Revolution are many and varied, but all for one purpose—"to foster true patriotism and love of country and to aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty." The work may be classified as historical research, education, and Americanization.

In Chicago the field for Americanization is large, and the chapters individually cover a great deal of territory. Classes in English for adult foreigners, social service among groups and families, patriotic exercises in the schools, particularly on flag day, work in the naturalization courts, and friendly coöperation with the women of foreign lands—these are some of the activities of Chicago members.

The New American shop, located in room 1409 Stevens building, and operated under the auspices of the state board of the society, is declared by an authority to be "the best piece of Americanization work done in this city." To this little shop are brought, for sale or exhibit, the handicraft arts of foreign born women. Here an opportunity is given for an acquaintance between "old" and "new" Americans, and through the medium of this friendly exchange many a homesick and disheartened woman has taken fresh courage for the perplexities of her new life. The Chicago Daughters endeavor to coöperate with other societies in Americanization activities whenever possible. Among these are the Immigrants' Protective league and the United Americans.

The state work for the last year has embraced the gathering together of almost forgotten lore and traditions of Illinois, compiling of town and county histories, and biographical sketches of Illinois pioneers. Another important work is the marking of the Lincoln circuit over which Abraham Lincoln traveled while practicing law in the Eighth judicial district, between the years immediately following his term of service in congress and proceeding his election to the presidency. Granite and bronze markers are being placed at all county seats and other guide posts at all cross and diverging roads within this circuit.

The scope of the work of the national society is far reaching. During the last year the reconstruction work in Tilloloy, France, has been completed; a memorial fountain erected in Provincetown in honor of the Pilgrim mothers; an immigrants' manual, in several languages, published and distributed for Americanization work throughout the country. Educational work among the southern mountain people has grown in rapid strides. Tomassee Industrial school in South Carolina is the first mountain school established and owned entirely by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Many other southern mountain schools receive their chief support from this organization.

So long as there continues to be a need for the early work of the society, the acquisition and preservation of historic spots and records, the marking of old roads and trails, and historical research of all kinds, that work will continue. For the future the great work of the Daughters of the American Revolution would seem to be among the foreign born, the uneducated native born, and for the righteous cause of the "first Americans," the American Indians, from whom the rights of citizenship have been withheld.

The twenty-sixth annual conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Illinois will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at the Hotel La Salle. Mrs. H. Eugene Chubbuck of Peoria, state regent, will preside at the sessions, and acting as hostesses will be the regents of the five Chicago chapters—Mrs. William L. Pattison of Dearborn, Mrs. George L. Cragg of Kaskaskia, Mrs. Charles E. Herrick of Chicago, Mrs. H. C. Furneaux of De Walt Mechlin, and Miss Edith Buxton of the recently organized Austin chapter.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

The Chicago Woman's club will meet on Wednesday at 2 o'clock in Recital hall to transact the following business: Nominations of first vice president, recording secretary, treasurer, and chairmen of the following committees: house, hospitality, revision, and legislative. The Sunday open door program this afternoon at 3 o'clock will be under the direction of Sig. Beduchi. The garden scene from Faust will be sung. Dr. Alexander Irvine will address the art and literature department tomorrow at 11 o'clock in Recital hall; his subject will be "Victor Hugo and His Message." At 2:15 o'clock tomorrow Prof. Addison W. Moore will speak before the philosophy study class on "Religious Aspects of Philosophy." Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock the literary class will meet to hear Miss Florence Beckett speak on the subject, "As Others See Us." Thursday at 11 o'clock the class in public speaking will meet with Prof. Bertram G. Nelson. Friday at 11 o'clock the class in public affairs will meet to discuss the question, "Should Women Go Into the Primaries?" led by Mrs. Ira Couch Wood, affirmative; Mrs. Elbert Ellis Smith, negative.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

are a mere child. It is only at 50 that women in Paris begin to have success." And after visiting most of the theaters in town, I have come to believe that my friend spoke with no more than the usual exaggeration.

Bridging the Years.

"La Danseuse Rouge," for instance, is played to packed houses by a stout woman, somewhere between 60 and 70, in the role of the beautiful half caste Javanese, Mati Sari, who was in reality shot as a spy during the war. The elder of the two women principals in "Cheri," Collette's delightful and vicious little play, is well over 50; fasque, heavy haunched, twice too big for the tiny stage. But her public loves her, has loved her, doubtless, for close on half a century. The famous Mistinguette of the music halls, adored by all Paris, to the last urchin in the street, is an acknowledged 52. It did seem to me that she no longer gets around quite on time in her dances, but if I were to express my opinion, people here would merely put me down as "pas aimable"—the severest criticism, perhaps, of all in this country, where the art of living is the art of living pleasantly. The superb Cecil Sorel is still a professional beauty at no one can calculate just what age.

Mme. Pierat, who plays at the Comédie Française an exquisite woman, is distinctly no longer young. There are shadows on her throat, round the corners of her mouth, under her eyes, even at the nape of her neck. Mme. Pierat, one of the most perfect actresses on the French stage today, will go far, one is told.

"Watch her," they say. "Some day you will hear of her; she will be great." Physically she has passed her prime; but her art, her penetrating charm and fascination are not sentenced here in France to eclipse with the fading of her beauty.

Mme. Pierat, by the way, and Eleanora Duse are the only actresses I have ever seen who use next to no makeup on the stage. At the beginning of the third act of "Aimer," for instance, Mme. Pierat comes on pale, extinguished, weary. But at the end of her passionate climax her face and neck are suffused with rose, her eyes are brilliant, she is electrified by the force of her own emotion. A few minutes later one sees the color ebb from her face again. She draws her little wrap about her shoulders, and one feels that the nervous chill with which she visibly trembles is more real than simulated.

Accepting Woman's Decision.

Balzac, when he wrote "La Femme de 30 Ans," is supposed to have added a few years of grace to the lease of a woman's full life. Now twenty more have miraculously been granted unto her. We women forgive man his wrinkles, his bald head, his distorted waist line, his loss of agility, and his diminished fire. We find him charming, desirable even, at almost any age. We have, in a word, always taken him at his own valuation. But it remained for civilized France to first accept the decision of the modern middle aged woman as to the rôle she shall keep for herself in the world.

Seven weeks in Paris, and not once did the sun frankly shine, although occasionally a wan, watery light filtered through the heavy gray. In former years the sparkle and gaiety of the French radiated and effervesced even through these winter weeks of lowering gloom, as if it were perpetual May time. But France today is a convalescent. She is irritable and she is lasse, and her hatred of Germany and her thirst for revenge are born of fear. Under the lash of this the whole nation is uneasy, bitter, and complaining.

The articles by Mme. X, who has sailed for Italy, will be resumed in an early issue of The Sunday Tribune.

MRS. HAROLD D. LAIDLEY.

ROME DeLuxe QUALITY

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

Poor Beds are Robbers of Energy

"We grow so accustomed to some discomforts that we fail to realize them," points out a great physician. As an instance he cites the modern bed equipped with the ordinary coil, woven wire or national spring. These bedsprings, even when we are young and strong, gradually rob us of strength and vitality. It is in middle age or during illness when we become acutely conscious of the discomfort that has been sapping our energy.

These springs do not allow the body to rest naturally; the hips and shoulders sink down, and there is no support for the small of the back and the neck. Hence backache and stiff neck which are often mistakenly attributed to other causes. In order to lie on such a bedspring the body must always be under tension—there cannot be complete relaxation. No matter in what position one may attempt to compose oneself, he must soon shift in his sleep to correct the spine-twisting tendency or suffer pain and stiffness which will soon wake him up. No wonder one feels tired and unrested after a night on such a bedspring.

The escape from such conditions is, or should be, obvious. Select a bedspring scientifically designed to conform to every contour of the human anatomy. Select a bedspring that literally molds itself to, and supports all parts of the body easily—a bedspring that will not sag into great depressions but will always remain resilient. Such a bedspring is the Rome De Luxe—designed to conform to the exacting standards of physicians, anatomists and hygienists.

Examine the Rome De Luxe at your dealer's. Prove for yourself that it surpasses in luxurious comfort any bedspring at any price. See why it eliminates wear and tear of mattresses. You will know the Rome De Luxe by the Rome Quality trade-mark on the side rail—the trade-mark which indentifies and certifies all Rome products. The Rome De Luxe is interchangeable—fits either wood or metal beds.

A LITERARY JAG

By Guy Lee

The English novel is a treat:
  The hero calls; his lady fair
  And he a draught al fresco share,
Then amble in the house to eat.

The pater beams; essays a quip,
  Then crooks his elbow, presto! and
  The demijohn's reply is grand,
And everybody takes a nip.

And while the cook with pan and pot
  Is wrestling, in the butler comes
  And fondly the decanter thumbs,
And everybody takes a shot.

The servant's an obliging gink,
  For after every bite or two
  He's at your side with soothing brew
And everybody takes a drink.

There is no bottom to the jug—
  The villain may horn in, but hah!
  They soon dispose of him, ta ta!
Then everybody takes a slug.

They eat and drink, and drink and eat;
  A ripping literary jag—
  What though its other action drag
The English novel is a treat!

The Best Joke I Ever Heard

What is the best joke you ever heard? Share it with The Tribune readers. One dollar will be paid for each joke published. Address the Jokes Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

To Gain Time.

The colored preacher had successfully concealed the fact that he had served a term in prison, but long years of upright living had not destroyed his fear of exposure. One Sunday on rising to begin his sermon, his heart sank on seeing in one of the front pews a former cellmate. Quick thinking was necessary. He fixed his eye on the stranger, and delivered himself slowly and impressively as follows: "Ah takes mah text dis mo'nin' from de sixty-fo' chapter an' de fo' hundre'th verse of de Gospel of St. John, which says, 'Dem as sees me, an' knows me, an' says nothin', dem will ah see later.'" A. T.

Cause for Gratitude.

A political rally was being held in a large hall in London. The speaker was a man who had a rather weak voice and similar political policies.

A cockney up in the gallery cupped his hands behind his ears in a vain effort to hear, then shouted, "Oi cawnt 'ear! Oi cawnt 'ear!"

Another cockney down in front of the platform rose to his feet, and shouted back:

"Ya cawnt 'ear? Well, thank Gawd, and sit down!" E. R. S.

To the Point.

Tom Callahan got a job on the section, working for the railroad. The superintendent told him to go along the line looking for washouts.

"And don't be as long winded in your next report as you have been in the past," said the superintendent. "Just report the conditions of the roadbed as you find it and don't use a lot of needless words that are not to the point. Write a business letter, not a love letter."

Tom proceeded on his tour of inspection and when he reached the river he wrote his report to the superintendent: "Sir, where the railroad was the river is." K. P.

Hard on the Patient.

A professor in a medical school asked a student, "What is a dose of croton oil?"

The student replied, "A teaspoonful."

The professor said nothing but looked at his watch. The work of the class went on. Some minutes later the student attracted the professor's attention and exclaimed, "O, professor, I made an error. A dose of croton oil is one drop."

The professor quietly looked at his watch and dryly remarked, "Yes, and your patient has been dead just twelve minutes." W. R.

He'd Seen Worse.

Mrs. Jones was entertaining some of her son's little friends.

"Willie," she said, addressing a 6 year old, who was enjoying a plate of cold beef, "are you sure you can cut that meat?"

The child, who was making desperate efforts with his knife and fork, replied, "Yes, thanke; I've often had it as tough as this at home." M. M.

None Could Better That.

A minister approached a group of quarreling boys and inquired the cause of their trouble. They showed him a dog and explained that the boy telling the biggest lie should be its owner.

The conscientious clergyman remonstrated: "When I was a little boy I never told lies."

This assertion was considered for a few seconds; then one of the urchins ordered, "Give him the dog." V. S.

Parting with His Pennies.

William's grandfather was a wise but eccentric old man who was always expressing his disapproval of the present generation by quoting some proverb or well known phrase. In consequence of this William had a great many of the old man's sayings at his tongue's end.

On children's day in Sunday school William was chosen as the representative of his class to carry up to the pulpit the birthday box containing the contributions made by the children on their respective birthdays. Each class representative had to recite a Bible verse as he delivered the box to the superintendent. But poor William, as he passed up the aisle, became frightened at the crowd and forgot his verse.

However, as he approached the superintendent he knew he must say something, so he bravely sang out one of his grandfather's pet phrases, "A fool and his money are soon parted." F. S.

THE STARS AND THE PLAY THAT ARE MAKING ALL CHICAGO LAUGH AS IT HASN'T FOR A DECADE!

INA CLAIRE AND ARTHUR BYRON IN "BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE"

The Gayest, Most Original French Farce of Our Time.

Adapted by Charlton Andrews from the Parisian original of Alfred Savoir.

Presented by William Harris Jr., producer of Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," "East Is West," "The Bad Man," "Madame Pierre." With a supporting cast of sparkling quality that includes Barry Baxter, Jules Epailly, Echlin Gayer, Philip Tonge, Judith Vosselli, Gladys Wilson.

Chicago's Journalistic Cognoscenti Say:

"Immensely entertaining. . . . Miss Claire delicious; Mr. Byron a royal purveyor of mellow, unctuous humor."
—Amy Leslie, Evening News.

"Bright as quicksilver . . . Intoxicatingly played . . . One of the times that Chicago may give thanks."
—Ashton Stevens, Herald-Examiner.

"Audience loved it. . . . Gay French farce in which there is much fancy skating on very thin ice."
—O. L. Hall, The Journal.

"You will be delighted. . . . Has moments that will make you gasp."
—Sheppard Butler, The Tribune.

"A brand-new thrill. . . . How those women laughed."
—Paul R. Martin, Journal of Commerce.

CHECKERBOARD PUZZLES

by P. H. Ketchum

SOLUTION TO LAST PUZZLE.

Black men on 5, 13, and 19. Kings on 11 and 26. White men on 6, 21, and 22. Kings on 10 and 12. White to move and win. 10 7, 11 9, 12 16, 26 17, 21 14, 9 18, 16 14, white wins.

A TRAP FOR THE UNWARY.

10 15, 3 7, 25 22, 10 17, 23 18, 22 17, 17 13, 14 17, 29 25, 15 19, 7 10, 9 14, 21 14, 17 21, 18 14, 24 20.

Now the white game looks solid as a rock and you would hardly suspect there was any danger of a trap, but black proceeds to win as follows: 19 23, 26 19, 6 9, 13 6, 1 26, 31 22, 11 16, 20 11, 8 31.

Look as Young as Your Daughters

Grandma used Sage Tea to Darken Hair

GRANDMOTHER kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied, with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through the hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color, and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE VERNAL EQUINOX.

Today one ought to sing of spring,
And birds a-wing, an' ev'rything;
Of tulip buds and swelling crocus,
And how the Easter garb will soak us;
Of peas and bees, and grass and trees,
Of robins, Dobbins—all of these;
Of onions, bunions, bugs, and hugs,
Greens and beans, and slugs and rugs.

Today one ought to sing of love,
Of nests and pests, and stars above;
Of purple dusks and silver dawns,
And angleworms upon the lawns;
Of mystic tremors in the woods,
And satins, silks, and other goods;
Of sempiternal vernal shades,
Of lusty lads and tender maids;
And hail the vernal equinox
With simple songs of ties and sox.

Ah, yes, a song one, too, might sing
Of little golf balls on the wing;
One ought to chant of Ruth and Schalk,
The furtive pass, the bunt and balk,
The snap to second, double plays,
And all the joys of coming days;
One ought to sing with streaming eyes
The indoor wrestling game's demise,
And hail with lute and saraband
The roque and tennis now at hand.

One may sing these—it has been done;
One may, I say, but I'm not the one.

Varied Activities of Women

Though she is totally blind, Mrs. M. S. Acker of Youngstown, O., does all her own work around her home.

Miss Lillian Anderson, who recently opened a mending shop in New York, has developed it into a flourishing business.

The census of 1920 shows that there were 7,748 Chinese women in the United States at the time of the taking of the census.

Mme. Kaji Yajim, the "grand old woman of Japan," was the first Japanese woman permitted by the government of that country to teach school. She was past 40 years of age when she undertook to acquire a modern education.

Vaudeville Wit

PALACE.

Dave Kramer and Jack Boyle:

"I am going to sing a song which John D. Rockefeller wrote."

"Is he writing songs?"

"Yes, indeed. Why, he's just in the prime of life."

"Of course. He's only 102."

"What is the title of the song he wrote?"

"It is entitled, 'Oil by Myself in the Morning.'"

"I ordered a ham sandwich in our hotel today, and they charged me $15 for it."

"What! Fifteen dollars for a ham sandwich!"

"Yes, and it's $21.90 with mustard. And don't you ever order huskleberry pie there, either."

"Why not?"

"They charge you $20 a huck."

Why Do Men Build Bookshelves in Their Homes?

A fair question, isn't it? Why does a man when he builds his own home carefully provide space for bookshelves in his living room, in his library or den in the same manner as he builds pantry shelves, closet shelves or shelves in his medicine cabinet? The answer is a simple one, the obvious one. To put books in, of course, in the same manner as pantry shelves are to put food on, closet shelves to put clothes on and shelves of the medicine cabinet are to put medicine in.

But there's more of an answer to the question. A man puts bookshelves in his home or buys bookcases because he knows that either are as necessary in his home as pantry shelves or closet shelves. He knows that books are as vital a necessity to every man and his home as his food and his clothes and medicine.

The Corner Stone of Every Home Library

In the same manner as a man chooses his food for the good it is going to do his body, and his clothes for their serviceability, he chooses the books to put in these shelves for their ability to feed and strengthen the mind; books that clothe the man and his family with knowledge and give protection against ignorance. He probably has not unlimited means, so he must choose with utmost care to give his family such books as will be of the most value day in and day out. He is not interested in having books that simply look nice on the shelves. He insists that the books he selects must represent a worth while investment in knowledge, books from which he and his family can obtain a definite, material and lasting benefit.

He selects and purchases first the Encyclopaedia Britannica and builds his library around this great work. Why?

Because it furnishes him with authoritative information on every conceivable subject written by the greatest authorities the world affords.

Because it gives to every woman information which she needs to keep posted on the events of this intensely interesting world.

Because it furnishes the son and daughter of the family the information to satisfy the children's expanding minds and supplements their school studies.

Because the Encyclopaedia Britannica has been for generation after generation, since 1768, the standard encyclopaedia of the world.

The Luxury of India Paper

He chooses the Encyclopaedia Britannica because it is well made from the physical standpoint. It is printed on the genuine India paper which makes the Britannica far more usable than any encyclopaedia ever was before. The beautiful and serviceable bindings make it a book that he is proud to have in his library.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica is sold on easy terms of payment, a small amount with the order and moderate monthly payments. Every family can thus afford the Britannica and have in the home the greatest means to knowledge ever put in the hands of mankind. Send for the large illustrated booklet describing the Britannica, and giving prices and terms of payment.

AVIATION

U.S. Air Service Offers Youths a Flying Course

Class of 150 Men to Be Called Soon.

BY MORROW KRUM.

IN the aviation queries department in the aviation section of last SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE it was stated that the air service is not now accepting enlistments of flying cadets for flying training. This assertion was technically true, but could be misconstrued, because the service is now accepting applications with the promise that approximately 150 men will be called during the next three months.

The promise that that number of men will be given an opportunity to learn to fly will no doubt be good news to Chicago youths. The flying training of a cadet at the present time is thorough and valuable. The student is given a thorough course in all branches of flying and is taught to pilot practically every ship in the service.

The qualifications for this course will not prohibit the average youth from enlisting. A high school education is necessary. A candidate must be unmarried, between the ages of 20 and 27 years, and of sound physique and in excellent health.

It is necessary to go to Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill., to make application. If the application is satisfactory and the candidate measuers up to the requirements, his name will be placed on the list, and if when the class is called he is within the number he will be called to a flying field.

The pay of a flying cadet is $75 a month. When the training is completed the cadet will be commissioned in the officers' reserve corps and be discharged to civilian life.

'Easter Airways' Is New Figure in Flying Sphere

EASTER AIRWAYS, INC., a Maryland corporation, with offices at Baltimore, has been organized to enter the field of commercial aerial transport on a permanent basis, the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America announced March 15. The stock of the company has been entirely subscribed and the subscription books are now closed.

For the present the company will confine operations exclusively to seaplanes. The first of these, an aeromarine HS2L six passenger open boat, will start this week on a flight along the Atlantic seaboard to Key West and Havana, returning to New Orleans, thence up the Mississippi river to St. Louis, along the Ohio to Pittsburgh, returning to Baltimore via the Great Lakes and the Hudson river to New York. On this trip the ship will be piloted by P. Ewing Easter.

New English Wing.

A new type of wing which is of the utmost importance to aviation has just been perfected in England after more than ten years of experimenting. The new wing is built with the object of increasing the lifting power of machines, and the first tests have been satisfactory. An airplane fitted with the new wing, seen from a distance, looks like a huge seagull with wing tips depressed. Instead of two rigid, horizontal straight planes, a single rigid plane is used, which from the center curves outwards and downwards to the tips. No fabric is used in the manufacture of the wing. Its surface is of mahogany veneer, thus making it better able to withstand all kinds of weather.

DAVE BEHNCKE

David Behncke, proprietor of Checkerboard airdrome, in a statement at the Aero club's weekly meeting last week, predicted that the forthcoming season will be the most successful in the history of Chicago's aeronautics. The public is losing its fear of flying, he says, and aerial transportation systems will be blooming this summer. They will meet with financial success, he believes.

Moves to Chicago.

Steffen Paul Nemeth, formerly on the engineering staff at the United States air service experimental station, McCook field, Dayton, O., has moved to Chicago and intends to continue his experiments with the Nemeth heliocopter. The Nemeth machine, as proposed by its inventor, differs greatly from the usual vertical rise machine. On this ship the air foils will revolve, and a patented device will make it possible to spread linen over a wing in case the motor stops, thus permitting a glide to the ground, according to the plan of the inventor.

Chicago and K. C. To Be Linked By an Airline

CURTISS "Eagles," aerial limousines carrying nine passengers and flying at 120 miles an hour, will connect Chicago with Kansas City after May 1, according to the present plans of the Curtiss-Iowa company, which makes its headquarters at Des Moines. One ship will fly each way every day.

The first stop on the air line west of Chicago will be Monmouth, where a new aero club has just purchased and leveled a flying field. The division point of the system will be Des Moines. All cities of any size that have flying fields on the route will be intermediate stations.

The Curtiss Eagle is one of the largest airplanes built in America. It is powered with two Curtiss motors, has a cruising radius of five hours, and a cruising speed of 120 miles an hour with ten persons—nine passengers and a pilot—aboard.

Meteorology.

For the last three years a course in weather science applied to aeronautics has been given in the University of California at the southern ranch, located in Los Angeles. The present year at the university started with a large enrollment of freshmen and sophomores and bids fair to eclipse the preceding years in interest and accomplishment. The majority of the members of the class are students in the engineering department of the university. Sixty-nine members are taking the course in aeronautic meteorology. The object of the course is to make the students thoroughly conversant with the principles and practical application of meteorology applied to aeronautics.

Books.

Lieut. G. A. Schoemaker, parachute jumper, has announced that he will take up flying and jumping again this summer. At the close of the season last year Schoemaker asserted that he would never fly again. The lure of the air has conquered, and he will commence the work with the 'chutes early in June.

IF you were in quest of knowledge, you would go to the source and fountain head of enlightenment, the great writers and thinkers of the past and present.

If you were in search of pictorial beauty, you would go to the museums where large collections of the works of great masters are to be seen in great quantities. You would not be satisfied with the cheap reprints of catalogues or the laborious copies of mediocre artists.

In all things, you would naturally go to the beginning, the source, the origin—where inspiration and execution were fused into the product of genius, thus avoiding imitations.

Lane Bryant originated the idea of adapting designs that accentuate slenderness. This idea has developed into an INSTITUTION with magnificent stores in New York, Chicago and Detroit where we outfit more stout women in a week than others do in a year.

Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:

"If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson.

"Maria Chapdelaine," by Louis Hémon.

"To the Last Man," by Zane Grey.

"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.

"Mirrors of Washington," anonymous.

"The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.

By Fanny Butcher.

OCCASIONALLY a book appears which has the hallmark of a classic on it, which leaves a reader with the feeling that he has read something which his grandchildren will read.

"Memoirs of a Midget" is such a book.

Walter de la Mare has written some of the loveliest poetry which I know. His "Peacock Pie" is fairy-touched, elfin-gay, as many colored in its unsuspected beauty as a bit of ugly fuzzy cloth or a strand of dun-colored hair when the sunlight catches them and breaks their dullness into dancing prismatic beauty. I suspect that few busy mortals know all of the tricks of sunshine. I suspect that few of us have seen that tiny miracle performed on a wisp of hair. It is a much more convincing one than the horse's hair and the snake! Hundreds of gay fairy balloons of the most wondrous colors . . . But Walter de la Mare has seen it. He knows all the machinations of the sunlight, of the elves, of the fairies, of the little folk of life. He sees all the beauty overtones of life, and he, unlike most of us, has the power of catching those overtones in words.

In "Memoirs of a Midget" he has written a book bubbling with overtones—if one can use such an expression. Sometimes they drown out the theme. Sometimes one thinks that they ARE the theme. It pretends to be the memoirs of a tiny little woman, the record, especially of one year of her life when, with protecting father and mother both dead, she faces regular sized life alone, and finds it—what every spiritual changeling knows it is.

There is a mystery about the Midget, a mental mysticism which leaves one with a sense of having looked into the heart of a fairy.

Miss M. is, for the more practical, just a midget whose experiences are not too bizarre, but for those who believe that in the flittery shadows of moonlight the little people dance, it is a book almost of magic. There is in it some of the most exquisite writing in the English language. That alone should endear it to readers whose ears must have lost much of their cunning by the too gaudy cacophonies of much modern prose.

It is not a book which can be read at a sitting. It is a long book, a demanding book. To the person who takes his literature "bottoms up," "Memoirs of a Midget" will give little pleasure. It is a seductive, delicate thing. It must be sipped. Keats, mayhap, who sprinkled cayenne pepper on his tongue that his claret might be the more appreciated, would have tasted its full beauty, as much for the sheer poignant beauty of its word harmonies as because he would feel the answering rhythm of a fellow immortal in Walter de la Mare.

Making It Unanimous.

Pity the poor reviewer. She has just finished "Vandemark's Folly" and she thinks it's a good book and she'd like to be able to say why she does without plagiarizing any of her fellow reviewers, but—the pity of it—they've used up all the adjectives and nouns and verbs of praise that exist. They've called it everything that it could be called from a "rousing story of adventure" to "an epic of pioneer life." She thinks that Herbert Quick has written a man's book de luxe, but John V. A. Weaver has already said that it's worth twenty of the usual red blooded stories. She'd like to point a gentle finger to the fact that it is history in pleasant doses, but Harry Hansen has already said that it's a great historical novel, one of the best American romances in many years, and Richard Burton says that "all of our school children ought to be made to read it," and William Allen White that it's the best historical novel he ever read.

Herbert Quick.

And all the other sincere things that she'd like to say have been said by judges, governors, members of congress, professors in colleges, assorted east and west, not to forget William Lyon Phelps.

The poor reviewer evidently read it a couple of weeks too late.

Another Side of the War President.

"Woodrow Wilson prefers not to be written about. His enemies may, and of course will, say what they please, but he would like to have his friends hold their peace," says Joseph P. Tumulty in the preface to his "Woodrow Wilson as I Know Him." "He seems to think and feel that if he himself can keep silent while his foes are talking his friends should be equally stoical."

Because so many of his foes have been talking and so many of his friends have kept silence Mr. Tumulty has written this book, though he does not say so in actual words. His deep devotion to his chief and his own really fine powers of observation have evolved a book which is—naturally—prejudiced in favor of Woodrow Wilson, but which gives one a feeling of his humanness which has not been celebrated much before.

"I did not invent this character," Mr. Tumulty says somewhat sharply. "I observed him for eleven years."

Dissecting the Sense of Humor.

In his really very serious and scientific study of "The Sense of Humor" Max Eastman sets down these eight rules of a code for serious joke makers:

Law No. 1: "There must be a real engagement of the person who is expected to laugh."

Law No. 2: "The feelings aroused in the person who is expected to laugh must not be too strong or too deep."

Law No. 3: "Both the negative and the positive current of feeling must be simply and naturally induced."

Law No. 4: "The identity of the positive current with the negative must be immediate and perfect."

Law No. 5: "Practical jokes should not be poetically told nor poetic jokes practically told."

Law No. 6: "The disappointment involved in a practical joke should be genuine."

Law No. 7: "The interest satisfied must not be too weak in proportion to the interest disappointed."

Law No. 8: "The interest disappointed must not be too strong in proportion to the interest satisfied."

"One of the Finest Gentlemen that Ever Lived."

James Oliver Curwood had a companion who shared with him all of his excursions into the north woods; "one of the finest gentlemen that ever lived," he says of him. One day, not knowing that he had returned to civilization, where not only man is vile but all his works, he ate of the tree and died of knowledge. To leave poisoned bait around in Michigan is illegal. The death of one magnificent English setter, whose name was, ironically, "Joker," has impelled Mr. Curwood to offer a reward of $10,000 for the conviction of dog poisoners in his county.

You Know What Macauley Said of Prize Poetry.

Henry Lee, author of "High Company," a book of soldier sketches in verse, is the winner of the William Lindsay $500 prize which was offered by the Poetry Society of America for a poetic drama. His play is called "Il Poverello". The judges were George P. Baker, George Arliss, Jessie B. Rittenhouse, Jane Dransfield, and Stuart Walker.

A Padre Plus Passion.

"Simon Called Peter," by Robert Keable, is creating no end of discussion because a chaplain in the great war has a love affair, and is torn between his official beliefs and human passion. Mr. Keable is himself an Anglican priest. He was a missionary to South Africa and a chaplain of a native labor contingent during the war. His father was a clergyman. With such a background, England—and America now—is shocked at his admission that although God's in his heaven, all's not right with the world.

Grace Ravlin Work Brings Color to Architects' Show

A garden of flowers splotched with sun,
 Warm where the feet of night have trod.
Dreamed of fields where the fairies dance—
 And of highroads yellow with goldenrod.

A garden of flowers—so cloistered cool—
 Adventure seemed far from its quiet breast.
Its blossoms swung to a slumber song.
 And birds sought its fragrant boughs to nest.

Still, down its paths, one night, they say,
 Romance stole in a monk's disguise,
Wrapped in gray cloud, when the moon was low—
 Love found adventure in some one's eyes.
E. J.

By Eleanor Jewett.

PROPERLY speaking, in an architectural exhibition the emphasis should be laid, from the opening paragraph of a criticism, upon architecture. The thirty-fifth annual Chicago Architectural exhibition opened last Sunday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute—and this story does not start with a description of it.

To swing for just a moment from the straight and narrow path of doing the expected is not, however, in this case as much of a transgression as it appears. The paintings by Grace Ravlin (now we are coming to it) make one of the most attractive pauses in the outline of architecture as shadowed forth in the surrounding galleries. They are a part of the exhibit and, for the brighter touch they bring to the more studied photographs and details, not the least important feature of the show.

Miss Ravlin has not exhibited here in some time. For the last three to five years she has been mostly abroad, painting. In the present exhibition we are introduced to many of the beauty spots that have kept her and her brush busy for so long. The majority of the pictures are of scenes in warm—one might say tropical—countries. Morocco yields one lovely canvas, "The Garden of the Bahia, Marrakesh." Spain also has been plundered of some of her fascination. Tunis, Tangier, Palma—the names read suggestively enough.

The quality of Miss Ravlin's work may be felt through all the paintings, whether those of flowers cut and prisoned in a vase, or the broader vistas of market place and harbor, limned with green trees and brilliant with the colored coats of strange peoples against the white, sun snowed, background of ancient buildings and courts. A sincerity and warmth of feeling run through them all. The sunshine is mellow; the people are unhurried; the spirit of old, time tested countries hovers in the air. A beauty that is beauty rules the entire room.

Among the paintings are "Street in Kairouan, Tunis," "Franciscan Cloister, Palma," "Port of Palma," "Grand Staircase, Raxa," "Blue Hydrangeas, Tangier," "Double Poppies," and "Vase of Carnations."

One enters and leaves the Ravlin paintings by means of the architectural exhibit. Retracing our footsteps, we find the first room of the east wing entirely devoted to architecture. The chief innovation of the exhibition is staged here, too. This is the exhibiting of completed interiors in small space. They are most attractive.

In the "Pilgrim" interior, evolved by William Laurel Harris, are found distinct evidences of our forefathers' good taste. The furniture is plain and distinctive in character, rugged, but not unpleasing. The simplicity of the New England colonist is emphasized in the banishing of all unnecessary ornamentation, but the sterling quality of the furniture and decorative details left us prove the wisdom of this selection.

There are other as attractive interiors, however, to be seen. The Italian dining room is one such, and beyond it the tiny library and comfortable living room, where a particularly comfortable feature is the broad fireplace. Other bedrooms and living rooms, in decoration varying from the stately mural to the cozy chintz, make one spend many more minutes than had been at first intended upon the outskirts of the exhibit.

In further galleries have been arranged enlarged photographs of residences and business structures, each of which illustrates some excellency in architecture. One imposing conception is that of the proposed convocation and office building for Protestant centralized religious activities, designed by Bertram G. Goodhue. If it were built it would rival the Wrigley tower in beauty.

The model for the United Daughters of the Confederacy memorial, to be erected in Shiloh National park, is the work of the Chicago sculptor, Frederick C. Hibbard, and is one of the strongest pieces of modeling shown. In the same room with this is a charming tiny model of an ancient English chapel done in softened colored brick, apparently, and exquisitely finished, down to the lattice windows and grotesque gargoyles grinning from the roof.

"Minerva," a figure in old English luster from the Buckingham collection, now on view in Gunsaulus hall of the Art institute.

Charles L. Morgan has three mosaics, illustrating the beauty and practical value of this medium as an aid to architectural adventure. These mosaics are equally possible on the exterior and interior of a building. One, a portrait of Roosevelt, is now to be seen in the Roosevelt theater. Others have been purchased for private residences, and their introduction into the domain of interior decoration marks an advance to be appreciated by those tired of the customary painting or print.

The pieces of sculpture in the architectural exhibit are interesting. The "Bronze Figure for Fountain," by Malvina Hoffman, showing a little girl shudderingly laughing at the calm pool before daring a dip, is one of the most attractive. The "Fairy," a detail from the proposed Eugene Field memorial, by Edward McCartan, is another lovely thing. "The Rising Sun," by A. A. Weiman, is impressive, being the winged figure of a youth on tiptoe for the dawn. The wood carving by Alois Lang has much beauty in it, too.

Among the architects who are represented in the exhibit are David Adler, Alfred C. Blossom, Lewis Colt Albro, George W. Maher, Mellor, Maigs & Howe, Howard Shaw, Clark & Walcott, H. T. Lindeberg, Donn Barber, Cass Gilbert, Alfred H. Granger, Holabird & Roche, Marshall & Fox, Pond & Pond, Paul Cret, and Welles Bosworth.

The mural paintings and room motives by the National Society of Mural Painters is another division of the architectural show that has its own appeal. Murals, generally speaking, are too abstract in subject to compel particularly vivid attention from the average person. The murals in the present exhibit are somewhat of this kind. They make a striking background to the other figures in the rooms where they are hung, but in themselves they have not the attraction of the tiny interiors, the sculpture, or the photographs.

The Art institute announces gifts in new prizes totaling $1,000. Mrs. George W. McKinlock has given two prizes, one of $300 and one of $200, to be awarded the two students among the 100 sent to the institute by the United States government who shall show the greatest excellence in work displayed at the final school exhibition of the year.

Brown & Bigelow of St. Paul have given $500 as a prize to be awarded the best work shown at the international water color exhibition that begins April 15 at the Art institute.

An exhibition of paintings, water colors, and drawings by Carl Springhorn is at present on view at the Arts club.

TO THE LAST MAN

By Zane Grey

THIS is Zane Grey's greatest story. More than 150,000 copies were ordered before publication. Although only published two months ago, it is among the best sellers. It has added thousands to the great American audience which "reads everything Zane Grey writes."

To The Last Man is a ripping story which chronicles the struggle, the fight, the blood and the romance of the pioneering of the West.

Dominating the stirring action, the exhilarating atmosphere of great spaces, and the fine character portrayal of desperate men, is a story of young love which plumbs the depths of the primitive and soars to the heights of idealism.

Here is a tale of men and women for whom life was stripped to fundamentals. As one reader says, "It is a book to help you keep your bearings in the storm of flapper fiction and fiction of disillusionment."

N. Y. Eve. Post: "The author has the laudable ambition to enshrine in fictional form before they are altogether obscured by encroaching civilization all these picturesque aspects of early Western life which are already becoming legendary. . . . Here is a good adventure story, full of blood and bravery, with enough of love and cruelty to season it. . . . A swiftly moving tale, skillfully concocted and well written."

gained its volume and power from the faith of those who believed that a new social order could be introduced, and were willing to work to achieve that perfection which was their ideal.

These pioneer Christians were moved by their grand faith in the "Kingdom of God" as Jesus visualized it and they strived to realize it. The tragic story of Jesus' death, the claim of his triumphant resurrection, were not pertinent to the progress they sought.

It is this faith, which Jesus inspired in them and later generations have gained from him and other great religious leaders, that is giving volume and power to the growing Unitarian movement.

RUSSIAN OPERA APPROACHES CITY WITH NOVELTIES :

By EDWARD MOORE

ENTER Russian opera.

The Russian Grand Opera company, whose romantic Odyssey was narrated in this column last Sunday, approaches the Olympic theater. Tomorrow night it will begin unfolding a series of works unknown to Chicagoans unless the said Chicagoans have chanced to hear them presented elsewhere.

MARIE MASHIR.
[Grady Photo.]

For many years those who claim to know have been maintaining that Russian opera is a vein of great richness, that it is colorful, joyous, and imaginative to an extraordinary degree. With the facts still awaiting disclosure, there is an argument or two with some visible bearing on the case.

One is that no one realized what could be made out of ballet until the Pavlowa and Diaghileff organizations came here to demonstrate; also that when Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra play a Russian symphony, the event frequently becomes a cause for rejoicing. That is the comparative method.

The other, or historical argument, is that the company has been playing out in San Francisco, where they are a bit exigent over their music. Unless a person has something really musical and entertaining to deliver in that city he runs a serious risk of having unkind things said about and to him. The company made friends there.

Little Known Hereabouts.

Apart from such matters as these, the attempt to garner advance information yields a scant harvest. There is little present reaction to the names of Marie Mashir, Ina Bourskaya, Vladimir Daniloff, or Vladimir Radeeff, four of those who sing, or to M. Feurst and M. Fexelsky, who conduct. Also the operas are little known hereabouts, though they are standard items in Russia. New York has heard a few at the Metropolitan, and the Chicago Opera company bulletined "The Snow Maiden" in its prospectus, but did not get any further with it.

But there are ninety-six persons in the organization, principals, chorus, ballet, and orchestra, and they have been associated together for seven years. That being the case, one may reasonably expect an ensemble. The mere fact of novelty is enough to make the season attractive.

This is the first week's répertoire:

Monday—"Tsar's Bride," by Rimsky-Korsakoff.

Tuesday—"Pique Dame," by Tschaikowsky.

Wednesday afternoon—"Demon," by Rubinstein.

Wednesday night—"Mermaid," by Dargomizsky.

Thursday—"Boris Godounoff," by Moussorgsky.

Friday—"Eugen Onegin," by Tschaikowsky.

Saturday afternoon—Repetition of "Mermaid."

Saturday night—"Snow Maiden," by Rimsky-Korsakoff.

The Chicago String quartet will make an appearance in the city for which it is named, and to which its members belong next Wednesday night in Kimball hall. The members are Herman Felber, Carl Fasshauer, Robert Dolejsi, and John Lingeman; and the four, with John Doane, ex-Chicagoan, made up the Great Lakes quintet, one of the musical manifestations of the boys in blue at the great naval training station at Lake Bluff, Ill., during the world war. When Woodrow Wilson, then President, went to Paris for the peace conference his personal entourage on the George Washington included the quintet, which gave nightly programs in the main salon of the steamer.

Mr. Doane is now located in New York City; his associates are acting on the theory that there is room in the United States for another string quartet, despite the fate of the Kneisels and the Berkshire or the slow acquirement of support by the Flonzaleys. The program for Wednesday night consists of Mozart's quartet in B flat, the fragment by Rimsky-Korsakoff usually billed as Allegro Russe and Ravel's quartet in F.

Recitals and Concerts.

Other events of interest have to do mainly with recitals and concert matters. Harold Bauer, the pianist, and Pablo Casals, the cellist, will give their only joint recital of the season at the Grand this afternoon. They are both personages in music, and past experience has indicated that their occasional conjunctions are important.

HAROLD BAUER.
[Apeda Photo.]

Their program is considerably more specialized than most, being confined to the works of Beethoven. It is not calculated to create riotous acclaim, probably, but it will illustrate Beethoven at several phases of his career. The separate numbers are announced as a sonata in G minor, op. 5, No. 2, another in C major, op. 102, No. 1, the variations on a theme by Mozart, and a third sonata in A major without opus number.

His First Concerto.

That astonishing band of young players, the Civic Orchestra of Chicago, is listed among today's concerts. Weber's overture to "Oberon," the third movement from Tschaikowsky's "Pathetic" Symphony, and Victor Herbert's "Irish Rhapsody" are in the program. Eric DeLamarter will appear as soloist, playing his own first concerto for organ and orchestra. A. del' Aquila and D. de Caprio are also in the soloist list, playing Saint-Saëns' Tarantelle for flute and clarinet.

The Chicago Artists' association will give a program at Fine Arts recital hall tomorrow afternoon. Jane English, soprano; Alma de Gramont Spengler, soprano; Anne Hathaway, violinist; René Lund, baritone; and Arthur Lang, pianist, will appear. Harrison M. Wild, honorary member of the club, will speak on "The Apollo Musical Club, Past, Present, and Future."

Jascha Heifetz is to be the soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra this week. He will play Elgar's concerto for violin, a piece that for one reason and another has never succeeded in becoming popular in this country. It has not been heard since Albert Spalding played it on the same stage and with the same orchestra, Dec. 8 and 9, 1911. Mr. Stock and his men will present Rachmaninoff's second symphony, which always flames, and Wagner's "Faust" overture, which does so sometimes.

JASCHA HEIFETZ.

Sometimes during a busy musical season at a time when many events are likely to be occurring simultaneously, a deserving attraction may be perforce though not intentionally ignored. The Beethoven trio has just finished a season in which it wrought valiantly for its ideals. Its members M. Jennette Loudon, pianist; Ralph Michaelis, violinist, and Theodore du Moulin, 'cellist, have presented music that is little heard—good organizations of the kind are not numerous—and have done it well. The trio by Guillaume Lekeu at the final concert is about as interesting a specimen of chamber music as has come up this season, with only structure imagination to command it.

The three artists played it, as at all other times when they have been heard, carefully, studiously, and also enthusiastically. They are entitled to credit on several counts.

A Course of Wagner.

Sinai temple will present a course of Wagner's music beginning tonight. Prof. Bertram G. Nelson of the University of Chicago will give a recital of "Lohengrin," and the Sinai Symphony orchestra, conducted by Jacques Gordon, will play the music. "The Valkyrie" will be presented tomorrow night, and on the next two Monday nights successive numbers of the Nibelungen Ring will be heard. On tomorrow night's program Prof. Nelson will read, Rose Blumenthal-Mendelssohn, soprano, and Burton Thatcher, baritone, will sing, and Adelaide Anderson and Gaylord Sanford will appear at the piano.

The Harmonic society and the Central church chorus announce a concert for Friday night at Hyde Park Congregational church under the direction of Daniel Protheroe. Max Bruch's cantata, "Fair Ellen," is a featured item of the program, with Helen Bickerton Cole, soprano; Stephen Jenkins, tenor, and René Lund, baritone, as soloists. Dorothy Denham Eichenlaub will play a group of piano solos.

Charles Hackett, the tenor, for three winters at the Metropolitan and for two summers a member of the company at Ravinia, is liked in Europe. He has been singing at the Scala, Milan, appearing as Almaviva in "The Barber of Seville." From there he went to Monte Carlo to sing Cavaradossi in "Tosca," and when that engagement is over he will go to Paris to sing at the Opéra Comique.

Among the other American peripatetics in Europe is Albert Spalding, who is giving many violin recitals. By the time his present tour is over he will have made over 100 appearances in England, France, Italy, Egypt, Spain, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland. He is now in Rome. By May he will be back in England, where he will give a second series of recitals in London and make a tour of the country.

A spring festival for this week is announced by the united choirs of the New First Congregational church under the direction of George L. Tenney, Sullivan's "Golden Legend," dramatized in six scenes, will be given on Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday nights, with Mrs. George L. Tenney, Lucy J. Hartman, Dr. Leon Jones, and Rollin Pease as soloists. Next Sunday Haydn's "The Creation" is promised, with Ethel Benedict, Dr. Jones, and William Morse.

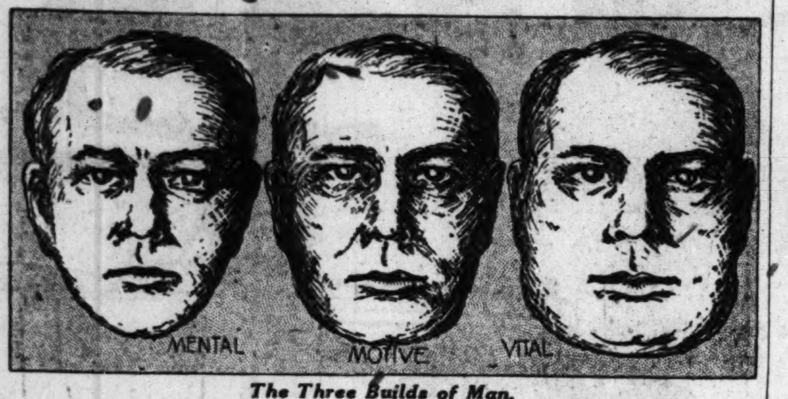
POPULAR SCIENCE By S. F. Maxwell

MAN

THREE BUILDS OF MEN.



The Three Builds of Man.

IN all races of men there are three plans of build, the man of brain, the man of brawn, and the man of fat. These life plans affect our inner natures. Heredity gives us the substance with which to think, race determines our reactions, environment warps our beings to fit some external mold, but these three builds, mental, motive, and vital, occur in every heredity, and in every race, and under every environment. No people are lacking in them; no people are predisposed to a monopoly of any one of them. They are universal. They color a person's mind after their own nature, and act as modifiers on what heredity, race, and environment have made of him.

The mental people are slight of build, weak of muscles, and strong in brain. This is the thinker type, and those who are built to it find thinking, imagination, and reasoning their easiest acts. You can recognize mentals. Their large brain cases and slender bodies are an index of what they are.

Then there is the motive type. His body specializes on muscle. This is the athletic man, the person who lives by and enjoys exercise. Persons of this build are strong boned and strong muscled. They have square faces and heavy bodies.

The vital type is the fat type. Vital folks are the enjoyers of life. They know little of the nervousness of the mental or the impatient straining of the motive. They are quiet, calm, and of good temper. Did you ever see a fat man who was a chronic grouch? Fat and unhappiness do not dwell together in one body.

It is rare to find a person who is the perfect embodiment of any one plan. These life types are extremes toward which we tend but seldom reach. A motive may be plump and tend toward vital, or he may be lean and tend toward mental. There once was a mental student who was thin and undernourished from bad food. He was extremely nervous. His fortune changed. He grew quite stout and became a mento-vital. He still had the keen mind of a mental, but with it was the clamness and even temper of a vital, and the two made him more successful than he would have been with either alone.

Vital types are themselves seekers after the blessings of life, and often they devote their energies toward making these available for others. Successful hotel men are mainly vital. Many politicians are of this type, and when they are Celtic in the bargain they are most gifted for their calling. A vital Semite makes a successful merchant.

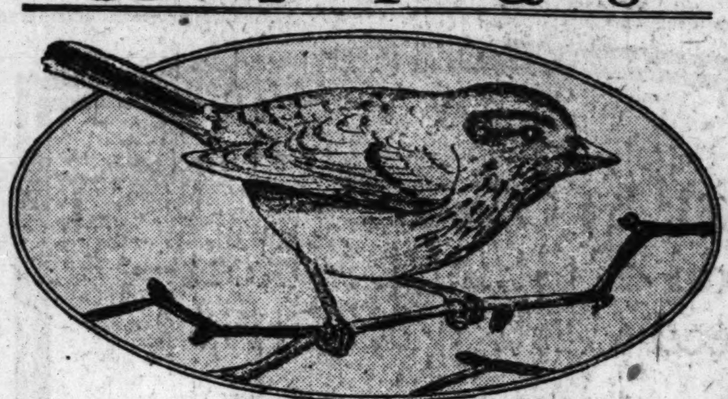
The best skilled craftsmen in the world are motive Alpines. An Alpine is always phlegmatic in temperament and lacking in imagination. A maker of small, fine machinery once said that his motive Alpines, who could hold themselves to an even pace, were the best workmen in his factory.

A motive Nordic is an adventurer. If he stands high in the social scale he is an explorer, a salesman, an athlete, or a fighter; if low, he may be a tramp, a thug, or a floater.

A mental Nordic makes an inventor or a professional man; a mental Celt furnishes the foundation for a statesman; a mental Cromagnon is an administrator, a humanitarian, a student, or a critic. And so it goes. Watch these types in action. If you are discontented with yourself and are not making a success of what you undertake, a knowledge of life plans may help you.

Talk reason to a mental and he will understand you; invite the motive to action with you and he will respond; present benefits to the vital and he will surely take them.

Birds



A SINGING SPARROW.

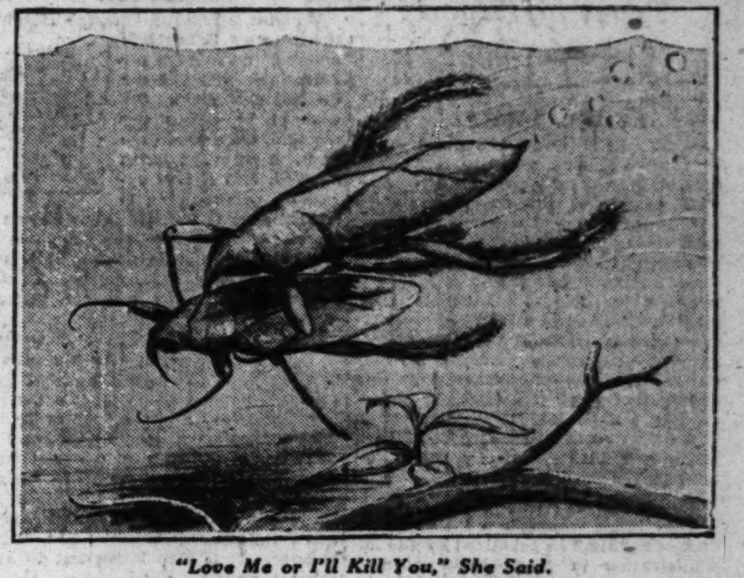
THE song sparrow is one of the sweetest singers that there is. No canary ever rivaled his clear notes. He is an unobtrusive bird, too, content to live with plain brown wings. His only vanity is his rich buff breast, set with vertical chestnut bars.

Song sparrows are among the first birds to appear in spring, and so they furnish pleasant targets for hunters on Sunday afternoons. Song birds are protected by statutes on the books, but I have never seen any one who had been actually fined for killing them.

Do you know of a justice who penalizes song bird killers? Please send me his name. I wish to compliment him.

INSECTS

ROMANTIC FATHERHOOD.



"Love Me or I'll Kill You," She Said.

THE male of the species lay on a bit of weed at the surface of the pond. There was hate in his buggy soul. He hated the sunshine because it was too bright; he hated the shadows because they were not bright enough. He hated food when it came too easily, because it was contemptible; he hated prey when it was too wary. In short, he hated himself because he was a bug. It is hemipterous nature to hate. The beaks of the order are against all creatures, and all creatures are against them.

The day was calm, the waters were warm and green in the pond, and Sir Belostoma had a full belly, quite full, indeed, considering the last minnow he had killed. He had not really needed that minnow, and had barely touched it. His appetite had not been good because he had not yet digested the tadpole he had caught two hours earlier. The two carcasses were floating on the water now, and many more that this weasel of the insect world had slain. It made him angry to think of them. He hated his appetite because it could not keep pace with his killings. Most of all, he hated the nature that had made him a water bug.

While he lay absorbing warmth from the light, his slant eyes, half in the water and half in the air, beheld a something coming up from below. It came slowly on, looking, feeling, smelling as it rowed itself toward him, like some tiny submarine skiff. He recognized the shape. It was a Lady Belostoma, but the recognition failed to give him pleasure. It thrilled him, though. It sent a shiver through his frame. His being was moved by a great, overpowering urge to get out of her way.

The lady did not will it so. Brooding time was near, and she needed a father for her family. She was out to get one, even if she had to kill him in the attempt. She saw the male of her species, and lunged.

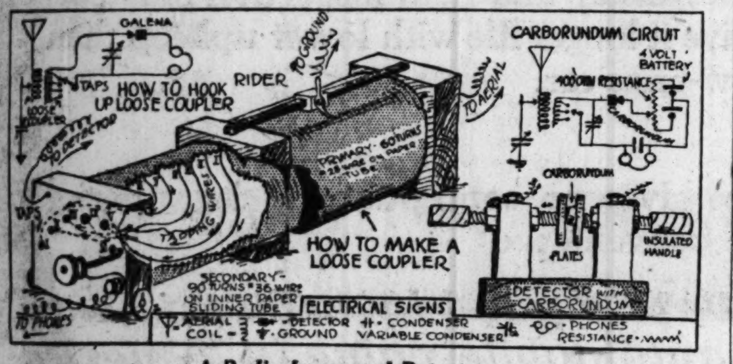
"Love me or I'll stab you to death," she probably said, as her talons closed on him. He saw her cruel, staring eyes; he saw her conelike beak; he felt her needle sting in his neck; he was squeezed by her powerful claws; he knew that if he resisted her she would finish him on the spot.

The eggs were ready. But did she let him go? Most certainly not. She held him firmly in her talons, turning him round and round while she laid her family on his back. Eggs needed a frequent change of water, and males were practically useless creatures, you know. Let father carry them. She did not consult his wishes, she only threatened him with destruction if he so much as moved. Her duty done, she gave a happy twirk to her swimmers, and off she darted, care free and unincumbered.

If there had been hate in the Sir Belostoma's breast before, there was murder now, rank injury and beaten pride. To carry eggs upon one's back! A little water boatman chanced by. He sprang on it and killed it, his beak making a horrible scraping on its armor as it sank home. He would be ruthless. He would slaughter every creature that came within his grasp.

Days passed, and the hour of hatching came. Wee, colorless creatures, the size and shape of bedbugs, burst their lids and began emerging from the shell. Their parent felt his load coming to an end. He kicked the brood loose from his wings, to live or die, as chance might say; then, climing up a twig into the air, he spread his wings and flew, to seek some puddle far away, where females and their babies never trouble one.

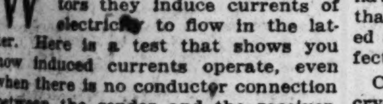
RADIO



A Radio Luner and Detector.

THE WORK OF DETECTORS.

WHEN electromagnetic waves pass over electrical conductors they induce currents of electricity to flow in the latter. Here is a test that shows you how induced currents operate, even when there is no conductor connection between the sender and the receiver.



An Induction Circuit.

Remove the magnets from an electric buzzer. Connect one of them in a circuit with a key, and hold the loose wires from the other in your mouth. Set the two end to end, with a short air space between. Click the key up and down, opening and closing the battery circuit. Do you taste electricity in your mouth? If you have performed the experiment right, you will. But how did it get there? There was no connection between the circuits. Why, then, did you taste a current every time you clicked the key.

The battery current, called the primary circuit, induced electricity to flow in the secondary circuit, whose ends you held in your mouth. Where the primary was closed, the coil became an active electromagnet, with lines of magnetic force pouring out from its poles. Try picking up bits of iron or steel when the magnet is activated. See how it drops them when the current stops. When the secondary was put near the primary, some of the magnetic force of the first traveled across the gap between and activated the core of the second. The core, in fact, became a magnet merely by its being near another magnet. The act of assuming magnetism sent a wave of electricity through the coil about the core. When you released the key the primary magnet was demagnetized, the lines of force in the secondary collapsed, and a current of electricity shot through the secondary coil in the reverse direction. You have here, then, a little wireless set, sender and receiver, although its radius of action is only a quarter of an inch.

As radio waves thread through an aerial, they induce currents in it of an oscillating nature. Ether waves are somewhat like water waves. They have troughs and crests. When a crest passes over the aerial, a current plunges in one direction, when its trough follows, the wave is induced to flow in the reverse manner. Radio waves travel with the speed of light, or 186,000 miles per second. The currents they induce alternate too rapidly for any mechanism yet devised to register directly. A detector, therefore, is essential in all radio work.

A detector usually acts on the principle of a rectifier. It permits one phase of the alternating current to pass, but refuses to allow the reverse pulse to pass. A great many chemical substances have the property of rectifying alternating currents. Galena, a sulphide of lead, is one. It is believed that as the current flows in one direction it partially decomposes, or electrolyzes the crystal, separating a minute amount of lead and sulphur, with the absorption of heat. The return current would make them combine again and absorb more heat, but this the molecules refuse to do. They will either be decomposed and absorb heat or be combined and give off heat, but not both.

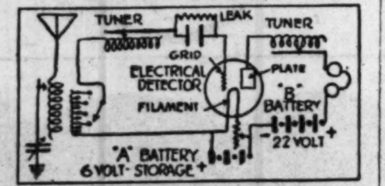
One phase or the other of the current is therefore to be resisted. Only one phase is allowed to pass, and the current issues from the crystal in direct pulses. All crystal detectors must have contacts which are fine points, so that the current can all be concentrated at one spot to make its heating effects apparent.

Carborundum makes another good crystalline detector. Galena requires a light contact, but carborundum is exceedingly hard, and its crystal will not break even if it is tightly clamped between plates.

Zincite, or natural oxide of zinc, iron pyrites (fool's gold), bornite (copper-iron sulphide), and other crystals work well.

Selecting a crystal is always a gamble. No two act just alike. Some are poor and some are excellent. Some poor ones are made good by heating them, and sometimes good ones deteriorate. The great advantage of a crystal is that it is cheap.

There are a number of electrical detectors on the market that work better than a crystal, but are more expensive.



Hookup for a Vacuum Tube.

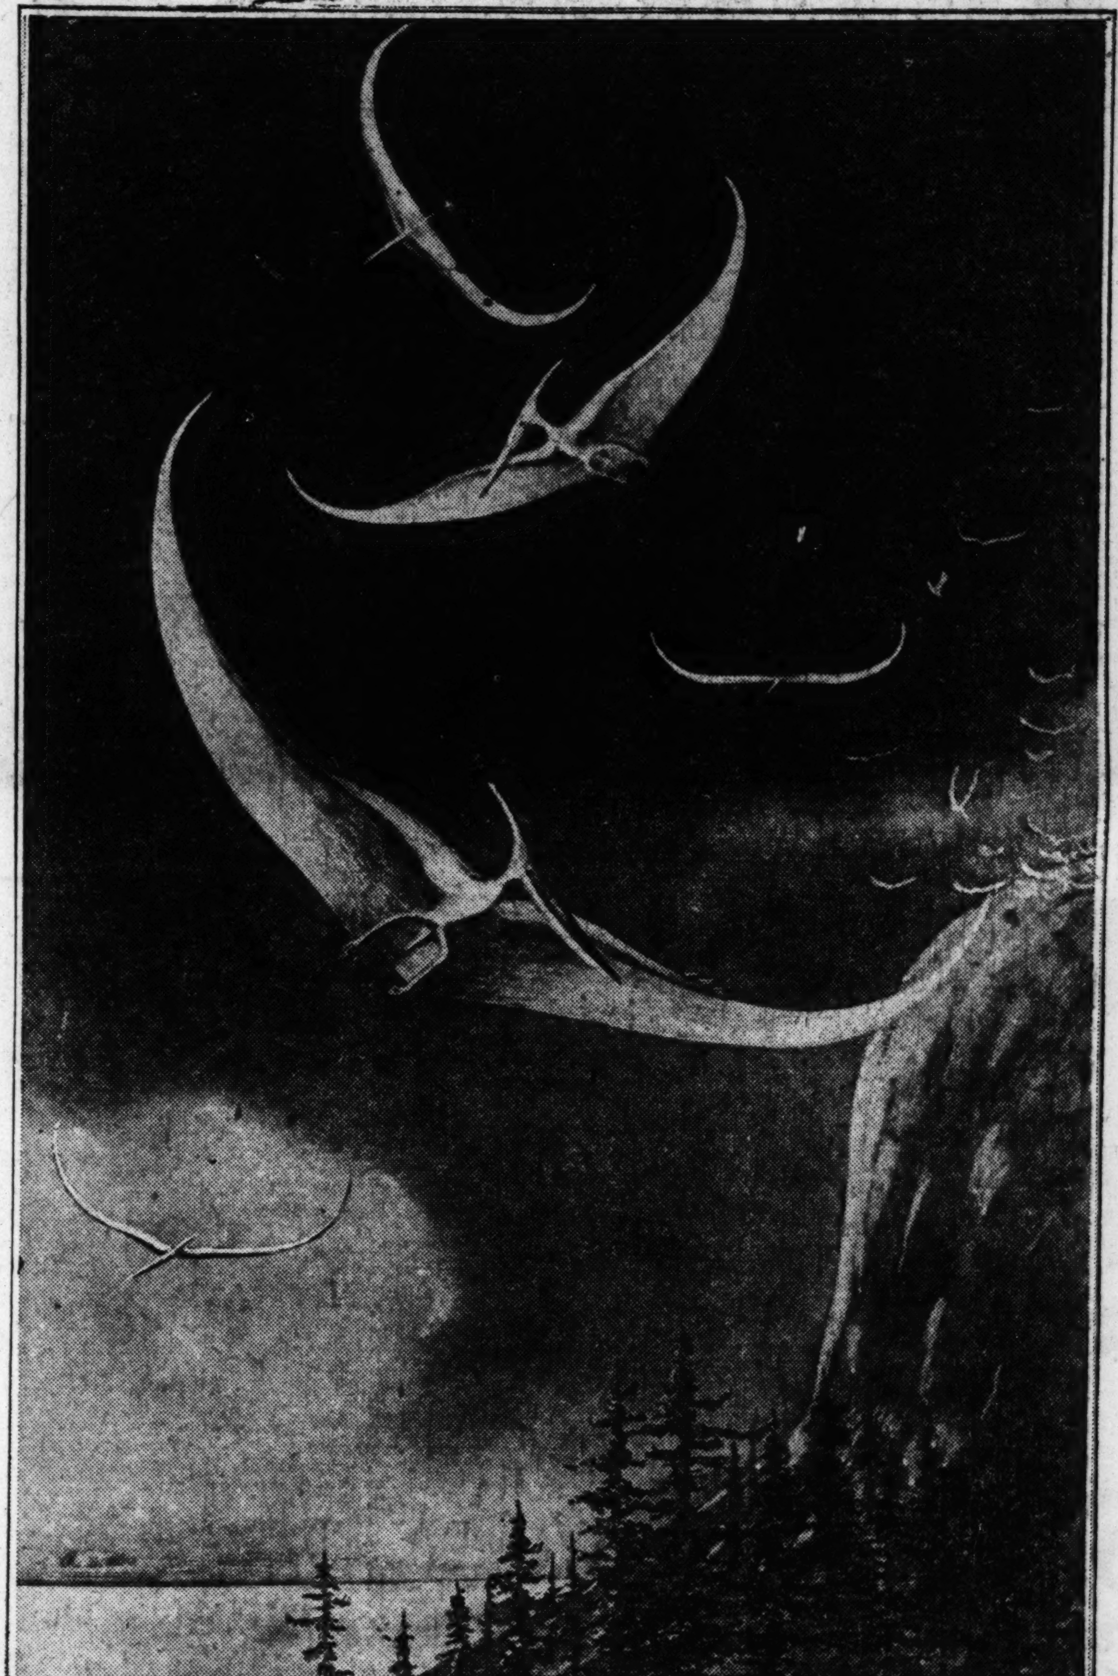
These are mainly of the Audion type. They are incased in glass bulbs, and somewhat resemble an electric light.

The essential parts of an electrical detector are a hot filament lighted by a storage battery and giving off electrons, a charged grid of wire, and a receiving plate. The flow of electrons from the filament is in effect a current of electricity. When oscillating currents pass through the bulb they find it easy to travel with the flow of electrons, but difficult to go against them, and the emerging current is therefore rectified.

The receivers respond to direct pulses. Each pulse excites their magnets to pull on the armature, and the latter, as it pounds on the air, sets up air waves, or the sounds that you can hear.

GEOLOGY

FLYING DRAGONS OF THE PAST.



Winged Lizards in the Air.

A PTERODACTYL. What does the name mean? "Fingerwing," you say. It gets its name in scientific parlance from the fact that the little finger on each hand was enormously elongated and served as the forward edge of a wing of stretched skin.

Pterodactyls were flying reptiles. They traveled in the air, yet they were as far removed from birds as bats are. They were related to crocodiles, turtles, and snakes. Can you imagine a flying lizard? Come while we turn back the pages of history. Yesterday was the Pleistocene, the day before that was Pliocene, before that Miocene, then Eocene, and before that Mesozoic. Have you found the page? Can you see the record written on it?

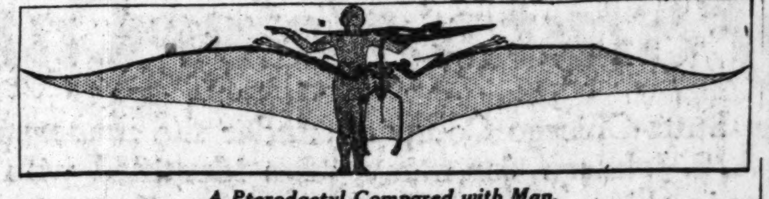
The story of the earth is not inscribed on sheets of paper but on blocks of stone. Books at best can convey only a little meaning, for they were written, edited, and printed by human effort. The strata of the rock tell everything. Nature laid them there, and put between their layers samples of each day's work. The process is still going on. You throw your broken crokery away. Some day, perhaps, a higher race of men will sift our trash dumps as we sift those of the ancient world, and will know us by the things which we discard. And surely if the trash dump lies untouched, it will eventually be turned to stone, with all the broken cups and plates imbedded in it.

Pterodactyl bones are usually found in limestone. They reveal a race of creatures varying in size from a sparrow to a small aeroplane. Their bones are marvelous in mechanical design. The shoulder girdle, collar bones, shoulder blades, breast bone, and spine are often fused into one solid ring, and to this ring long arms are set. The upper arm was fashioned to bear large muscles, while the bones of the long fingers were both light and strong.

You can settle all doubts as to whether a Pterodactyl could fly. Cut out a tissue paper model with the same proportions as the picture given on this page. Load the forward edge of the body with bits of wax or paper, extend the long bill, turn up the wing tips, and balance the model carefully for flight. Let it fall. It will right itself automatically even if dropped by one wing, assume an even keel, and sail off in graceful curves. It will even right itself if started upside down. Airplane constructors might learn a great deal from the bones of pterodactyls.

We call the skeletons in the rock to life. Let us stand on a rocky cliff, looking out over the ancient sea. A storm is rising. The hot air is moved by breaths of humid wind; the pines in the forest below us sigh and rustle in the stillness. Great birdlike things are wheeling about the cliff, coming to rest. Here is their roosting place. It is in this eyrie that they lay their eggs, bask and sleep in the sunshine. See them lying on the brink. On land pterodactyls are almost helpless. They have no legs to stand on. Their after limbs are weak and small and only serve as stiffening in the wing. So they lie, half on earth and half in air. Throw stones at them to scare them. See them all give ponderous flaps. They dive into the air, extend their wings, and soar.

Pterodactyls live on fish, on flesh, on carrion, on insects, and on each other. We watch them flying. They sail and glide like buzzards, with outstretched, almost motionless wings. Let one sight a bit of prey below and he swoops down, catching it up gracefully while on the wing. They know the air, these beasts! No animal has ever been evolved since their time that was so preëminently aerial. Then what made them die? You ask.

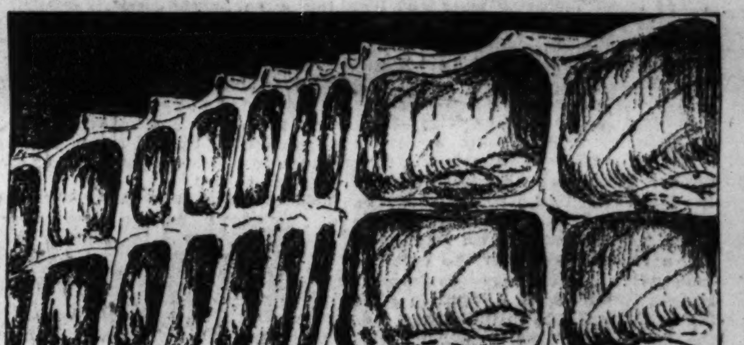


A Pterodactyl Compared with Man.

The day when stupidity was permissible has passed. The reptiles, one and all, lacked brains. Fancy a fifty ton dinosaur had only one-tenth as much sense as a crocodile. These animals are not noted for their brilliancy of thought. A reptile with a mind like this was too stupid to follow the changes of its environment. The pterodactyl's flying mechanism was largely automatic. It was so simple that he did not need to think. It was so easy to fly that he followed least resistances. He went on evolving himself for the air, and quite like those of us too specialized in any line, he forgot that there could ever be a change.

The earth is not constant. Geological revolutions punctuate time. The Laramide disturbance came down with its cold and snows; the pterodactyls were naked and could not change to meet the new conditions. We must all bend to meet our environment. The pterodactyls could not, so they died.

BOTANY



Cells in an Annual Ring.

IN CEDAR LAND.

LET us take a trip through the microscope, and see the pencil in your pocket at close range. The microscope carries us down, we grow smaller and smaller until we are no larger than microbes. There is an expanse of white nothingness all about us; there below, like a brown haze, the cedar wood appears. The microscope is moving by the fine adjustment now, micron by micron, lest it crash us into our goal. We reach the pencil, and step out upon it.

The knife cut where we stand is the size of a city park. Each cell of wood is as large as a small culvert. What a peculiar place it is! The cells are ranged in compact rows, like a field of large clay pipes, all tightly end to end.

After walking a short distance over the jagged sides of the cut wood we find an opening into the interior of a complete cell, and creep inside.

The chamber where we find ourselves is roomy enough for progress on hands and knees. It has four sides and rounded corners. Its walls are a smooth, glassy, hornlike substance, made of cellulose, or true wood material. The cellulose is arranged in three layers, wound in spirals, like a puttee legging. It is these spirals which give the wood its strength and help it to resist attempts to tear it apart. On the sides facing out and in, but not on those facing sileways, are the pits. There are several rows of these to each cell. Each pit is the size of a dish pan, and is bowl shaped, inclosing a wheellike form inside. Air and water surge through the holes between the "spokes" in the living wood. This is the way circulation is maintained in the tree.

After crawling a few yards down the hollow of the cell, we find the chamber narrowing sharply. Through the transparent wall we perceive the next cell beyond narrowed into it in a similar manner. All the cells are joined end to end in this fashion to give the tree great tensile strength.

Coming out of the narrow confines we explore the wood farther. The cells which grew in spring are large and thin walled; while those of summer are very much compressed and have walls so thick that we cannot squeeze inside. From a distance these alternate rows of light and heavy cells constitute the annual rings of the wood and show the tree's age.

Here and there, running radially across the annual rings, are hard bundles of transverse cells. In life they help carry food and give strength to the wood against a sideways split. They are called medullary rays. In the oaks they are particularly large and give the peculiar figure to quarter-sawed lumber.

CHEMISTRY

Crystals of Sal-Ammoniac.

CHEMICAL TRACERY.

CRYSTALS are geometrical shapes assumed by practically all chemical substances. Every solid has at least one definite shape that it takes when passing out of a liquid or gaseous condition.

Crystals have some of the properties of life. They can grow. Little crystals attract molecules from the mother liquor and become larger.

Many beautiful experiments can be performed with crystals. When they form rapidly they are small, but when they grow slowly they are large.

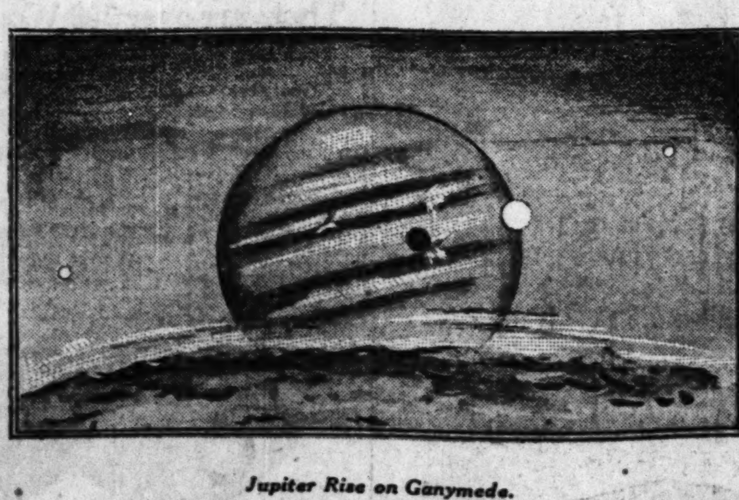
Set a dish of nitrate of lead solution away in a closet for a few weeks. Beautiful diamondlike shapes will appear on the bottom of the vessel.

Mix a strong solution of copper sulphate and potassium bichromate. Hang threads in the liquid, and set it away in a cool dry place. In time handsome shapes will develop on the strings; some red and some blue, but never mixed.

Dissolve some sal-ammoniac, or ammoniac chloride, in water; add a little white of egg, and flow the liquid over a clean piece of window glass. Set it away in a perfectly level position. The sal-ammoniac will develop a myriad of forms, like a forest of snow and ice.

ASTRONOMY

MOONS OF THE PLANETS.



Jupiter Rise on Ganymede.

A MOON is an attendant that circles about the planet of a sun. It is the satellite of a satellite. The distinction between moon and planet is not one of size. Two moons in the solar system—Titan of Saturn and Ganymede of Jupiter—are larger than the planet Mercury, and rival the planet Mars. Many moons exceed the asteroids, or tiny planets.

A satellite is held in sway by both sun and planet. It is ruled by two masters, and of these the sun is always the stronger partner.

Suppose we were on Mars. Two moons would light the desert landscape, gleaming through the thin cold air. The nearer would look about half as large as our moon, but would rush along in its orbit so rapidly that, as seen from the surface of Mars, it would rise in the west, race backward through the sky, set in the east, and in four hours would bob up in the west, ready to count off another of its months. This inner moon, called Phobos, makes a complete run of phases three times a day. Phobos is a little globe only about ten miles in diameter, and revolves 3,800 miles above the ground of Mars. Deimos, the farther moon, is larger, thirty miles across. It appears about as bright as Venus does to us, and lazies through the sky at a snail's pace, taking two and one-half days to travel from horizon to horizon.

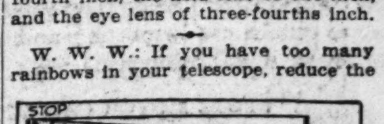
We are quite familiar with the phases of our moon. Its short distance from the earth—only 240,000 miles—makes it our next door neighbor. Telescopes reveal the naked surface of our satellite in all its harshness. Our moon is dead, a world that was scorched and burned before it ever saw life.

Far different is the third moon of Jupiter, named Ganymede. This world has air and water and seems alive. Cloud banks obscure its surface and tinge its reflected light gray, white, and green. The sun's heat at Jupiter is feeble, but the giant planet quite makes up for it. The whirling ball pours out an overpowering, sultry, invisible heat. Looking up through the mists of Ganymede, we behold Jupiter spinning in the sky. He is as large as our moon looks at rising, and is resplendent with a myriad of soft, tertiary colors. While he turns, three inner moons lace back and forth in front of us, passing across his face with their shadows trailing on Jupiter below as they fly.

Questions and Answers

B. Z.: A microscope tube should be about seven inches long. The object lens should have a focal length of one-fourth inch, the field lens of one inch, and the eye lens of three-fourths inch.

W. W. W.: If you have too many rainbows in your telescope, reduce the area of your object glass with a ring of black paper.



Stopping Down a Lens May Improve Vision.

L. B.: The sending radius of a loop aerial on one dry battery is small, but the receiving radius of such an aerial, the detector being first class, should be effective over fifty miles.

C. W.: An ohm is a unit of electrical resistance. A winding in ohms is usually determined by the resistance per foot of the wire. Copper has low resistance, iron and lead high.

A. C. W.: The essential parts of a condenser are a metal surface, a thin nonconducting substance, and another metal surface, the thin in close contact. In the stove pipe variable condenser the inner pipe makes one surface, the paper about it the conconductor, and the outer pipe the third surface. You can close the ends if you wish, but it is not necessary. Putting a condenser across the circuit means that a wire from one plate is connected to the outgoing wire and a wire from the other plate goes to the incoming wire.

Set 3 Million as Cost of Latest Highway 'Saving'

State Invites Bids on All Types of Road Surfacing.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

GOV. LEN SMALL'S promise to save $1,000,000 on concrete roads this year may cost motor vehicle owners of Illinois more than $3,000,000 because of the building deadlock, according to practical transportation authorities who are leading the national highway campaign.

This actual loss to automobile users may be expected as a result of the governor's refusal to carry out the state's highway construction program for 1922 unless material manufacturers and contractors meet the arbitrary prices he has set for road building. It is based on figures carried in the sworn affidavit read recently in the Small trial in Waukegan.

This latest example of the "high cost of saving," as practiced by the administration in road building, may seem somewhat contradictory at the first glance, but it is plain as the transportation experts demonstrate it, thus:

The 1922 program, as promised in all political speeches made by the governor and his aids and in the affidavit, calls for something over 1,000 miles of new roads. A total of 572 miles is yet to be built on last year's contracts and 732 miles are to be contracted for this year. To build this mileage in 1922 a total of 4,000,000 barrels of cement will be needed.

To date the state has bought 900,000 barrels at the prescribed price of $1.30, and it is estimated that there is a small supply of cement in storage, the exact number of barrels unavailable. Also, since the new 900,000 barrels were bought, cement prices have been raised to approximately $1.50.

If the state has as many as 900,000 barrels in storage, the total working supply for the year is now 1,800,000 barrels, or less than is needed to complete the contracts awarded last year. This supply will build about 529 miles of new road, and thus 778 miles of the 1922 program will remain unbuilt.

The United States bureau of public roads has found that it costs $3,000 more each year in gasoline alone to operate automobiles over a mile of unpaved road than over a mile of pavement where 500 vehicles (less than the Illinois average) use the road daily. The 1922 gasoline costs to Illinois motorists on the state's 778 miles of unbuilt roads will amount to $2,334,000. Added losses including wear and tear on tires and motors, time and mud delays, and extra maintenance costs will bring the "bad road" costs well over the $3,000,000 mark.

Builders point out many other losses to the state in the building delay. Each estimate on road building submitted to the state highway department, they declare, costs the county a large sum in engineers' fees, detailed surveys, office work. Constant rejection of the plans and estimates in an attempt to cut a few dollars from the cost per mile adds to the huge engineering budget. Contractors, delayed in starting work until late in the season, find the labor and material market more costly, while the gigantic road building organization built up in the state eats into highway funds daily while marking time on new work.

Wisconsin builders took these real costs into consideration last week when they broke from the road material "boycott" and announced that the Badger program is to be carried through at once. Other states, including Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Texas, where huge programs are already well under way, have based their construction principles on the modern "cost of bad roads" rather than the old policy of initial building economy.

Illinois builders see the possibility of an attempted change from concrete to some other type of road surfacing in the official advertisement for construction bids issued from Springfield last week. It announced that the state will receive bids for 94.65 miles of highway on March 31, the bids to include all types of surfacing. Under the new plan, it is declared, contractors can offer to build with "Wilhite" and all types of bituminous material.

Residents of Elgin and people living along the Lake street road threatened an injunction against the state last year rather than allow a patent pavement to be laid on the road.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Question.

What methods do you use in cutting down the cost of operating your car?

The Answers.

William Gillmann, Chicago Heights, manager Scharbach Lumber company—About the only thing I do to cut down the cost of operating my car is to take good care of it. I go over it once a week, and if any adjusting or repairing is needed I do it immediately. Seems to me too many people pay too little attention to the little things; they run the car as long as it will go. That is not the way in the long run to keep down auto expenses.

S. C. Carver, 4836 Monticello avenue, writer—As a means of reducing general auto expenses I perhaps pay more attention to the quality of gas and oil than any other item. The best gas gives you the least trouble in the way of carbon, gives more mileage, and keeps the engine cleaner. It is also important to keep the car properly oiled.

John S. Brantner, 1152 West 103d place, salesman—There are a number of things I try to keep in mind when driving, but it costs whatever we do. I glide to a stop whenever possible instead of coming to a sudden stop by the use of brakes. I try to take care of the car by keeping it well greased and by watching the oil and water. When buying tires I get high grade advertised makes.

William L. Doll, 6212 South Marshfield avenue, salesman—Instead of relating what I do to keep down auto expenses I prefer to make two suggestions: First, instead of putting on the brakes at every crossing within the city, let's have a law adopted permitting a certain speed, say not faster than twenty-five miles and not less than eighteen miles, and keep on going without having to stop. Second, thoroughly warm the engine before starting so you don't have to use the choke.

Michael Fitzpatrick, 7044 Prairie avenue, Grant park garage gateman — Aside from absolute carelessness about keeping the car properly oiled, the one big cost of operating a car within the city is the necessity of everlastingly stopping and starting at street crossings. It causes a big loss in gasoline, and it is certainly the chief cause of expensive wear and tear. I suppose all we can do to remedy that is to go only at a moderate speed—no racing after crossings are passed.

Lincoln Highway Progress.

When the promoters of the Lincoln highway routed that pioneer trail across the continent, they brought it by the site of the blockhouse where Abraham Lincoln served as a soldier in the Blackhawk war in 1832. Here the highway passes the only scenes of Lincoln's activities along its 3,300 miles across the continent, with the single exception of the battlefield where he made his famous Gettysburg address.

The state of Illinois has purchased title to the ground where the blockhouse stood on the Lincoln highway here, and it is expected that funds will be appropriated by the next legislature to construct a reproduction of the old blockhouse as an other state memorial to Lincoln. Until recently the historic site was the property of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

It is appropriate that during the past year considerable activity was shown in this state towards preserving the scenes of Lincoln's day in Illinois. One of the state's greatest memorials to Lincoln, the Lincoln highway, will be finally completed this year—a paved road from the Indiana line to the Mississippi river.

GEORGE WASHINGTON ESSAY PRIZE WINNERS

Young America Views Heroes Eye to Eye, Judges Declare

THE members of the staff of the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern university, selected as judges of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE George Washington essay contest, have completed the reading of the essays and have arrived at some general conclusions concerning them.

Romanticism is passé, not only in modern art and literature, but in school boy essays, if we may judge from those submitted in this contest. The better essays submitted were keen, human analyses of Washington as he was, not as the school books of fifteen years ago presented him, a paragon of perfection without faults. If the pictures of our national heroes must be falsified in order to win respect for them, it is better that they be left unrespected. But truth in these matters will win eventual and lasting respect that no amount of amiable and false propaganda can bring. It is evident from these essays that American teachers are more and more arming the minds of children with the truth. This is the right spirit, for only a respect for the past based on truth can give power to meet new crises and difficulties.

Chief Faults in Essays.

We have found that the chief faults in the essays are defective spelling and defective punctuation. Less stress should be put upon the production of fine writing and extravagant phrasing and more upon simplicity and correct spelling and punctuation.

The prize essays are simply written and are not dressed up with rubber stamp expressions. The young people who wrote the best essays did not write up to their subjects and they did not try to perform any literary stunts at the sacrifice of clearness. They followed the best rules of punctuation and paragraphing.

Praise Lacks Discrimination.

Many of the essays praised Washington without discrimination. They said he possessed all the virtues in the highest degree and used every possible superlative in speaking of him. While these estimates are probably sincere, they do not lead to a true appreciation of Washington or to a real knowledge of his achievements. These essays make Washington a mythical hero, not a man.

The parochial schools, we found, are better in the mechanics of writing than any other type of school. The spelling, writing, and punctuation are excellent in most all of the essays written by students in the parochial schools, but at the same time they give Washington more blind devotion and take a more standardized point of view than any other type of schools. They regard him as a superman and hero without blemish.

Many Wrote Biographies.

Many of the writers failed to distinguish between a biography and an essay, and they diligently attempted to write in 250 words a life of Washington. The more successful essays enlarged on one or two phases of his character and career, and did not merely enumerate his qualities, but showed the man in action.

The grand prize essay gives a frank as well as an appreciative judgment of Washington and is admirably written and handled. The first Chicago prize essay, written by a Russian girl, is an adventure in patriotism and is an interesting and warming experience, although it is not as well written or as well handled as the grand prize essay.

We found that the essays from Illinois and Wisconsin show most promise.

Being born in Russia I have lived there, until seven years ago, under the rule of the late czar. I was taught that he, the highest in the land, must be respected, but at the same time feared and hated. Then and there I formed my opinion of rulers.

Judge my surprise on hearing of another ruler who was neither feared nor hated like ours but beloved of all; who not only ruled the land but the heart.

Little children on hearing of Washington resolve to be like him. In my estimation that is the greatest accomplishment, to be so good as to have others strive to be like you.

Washington was good in every stage of his sixty-seven years. He was a truthful, upright, reliable boy, a respectable young man, an able, shrewd general, and later a respected and beloved first President. Before his death he freed his slaves.

While dining with one of his friends one day, Washington received a letter from a lieutenant. On reading the letter his face assumed a look of contempt, indignation and anger. He handed the letter to his friend and hastily left the room to quiet his temper. The letter had asked him to be king and he refused positively. Ah! Was he not noble?

But he too had faults. He had a fiery temper, also a great love for ceremony. But his faults make us realize that he was like us and not a story book character.

A greater man has never lived.

George Washington was not such a wonderful man. He had no supernatural genius as so many seem to attribute to him. It is true that he came of a fine family, with good morals and high ideals, but that is nothing to his credit.

He had no remarkable head for military stratagem—there were others in his army who probably had more brains for that than he.

What is the matter with Washington? He was wise, patriotic, kind, just, and true. But nobody loves him, no matter how many school children spill over in writing essays about him. Lincoln had those qualities, and no man ever called forth such spontaneous affection. Why this difference?

Well, that never-told-a-lie fable has a lot to do with it. No one ever reached the eighth grade without carrying a more or less varied collection of lies on his conscience. The child believes the history which tells him that Washington never told a lie, and that's the end of George with the child so far as any human interest is concerned. Washington is thereupon pigeonholed with Hercules and other little tin gods on wheels, and there he stays, and the child has as much enthusiasm for him as for some beetle stuck on a pin.

What's the matter with Washington? Nothing—but O, you fool historians! If you would only substitute for that cherry tree story a pen picture of Washington's losing his temper and cursing like a pirate, he might be saved yet.

The true test of any man is this—has he worked for his own interests or for the general good? What does his fortune and position mean to him, advantages for himself or opportunities to serve his fellowmen? By these tests, then, Washington was surely a man.

You may see he was a man among men by the generosity with which he praised the achievements of his associates and by the willingness with which he not only shared the honor of victory but bore the burden of defeat.

He was unselfish in sharing his time with his country and his countrymen. See how he set aside his personal desire for a quiet country life and obeyed the popular call for him to be a candidate for the presidency. He was not little or bigoted in governing his country. See how he chose for the cabinet and for the Supreme court, not a group of personal friends, but men who could be trusted to serve the cause of the union—men such as Jefferson, Hamilton, and Rutledge.

He was unceasing in his efforts as an administrator. See how he gave himself to the toil of office, receiving no pay, but gaining all one aspires—fame and renown. See how he retired at last to the joys of private life, confessing that his career had not been without errors of judgment, but hoping that they would bring no harm to his country, and asking no other reward for his labors than to partake "in the midst of my fellow citizens the influence of good laws under a free government, the ever favorite object of my heart."

In the department of achievements in the library of human progress is a living book which is an inspiration—a guide to all who read it—"George Washington."

The pages are torn and worn from constant use; it is on a low shelf where even a child can reach it. There are pages red with the story of sacrifice; there are chapters clouded with the gray of utter hopelessness and despair; but there are even more which tell of succes and triumph attained through unfailing perseverance and unflinching loyalty.

The soldier whose loyalty for the moment is almost at the point of failing reads the thrilling story of Valley Forge and sets out with a firmer purpose and a more resolute heart.

The struggling business man wearily closing the book and placing it upon the shelf again promises himself to do better things tomorrow.

The minister seeks also beneath its covers and finds new thoughts and higher ideals which will be eagerly taken up by the people in his congregation.

The children of today are impressed with simple ideals of truth and loyalty, which will make stronger the government when they are the men and women of tomorrow.

No one seeks and is disappointed. There is no one who reads earnestly that is not inspired and encouraged. For generations to come it will be an ever ready reference to a puzzled nation.

The word Americanism is of recent coinage, but the fire of the spirit was kindled long ago in the hearts of the American colonists. Standing out in bold relief against a background of brave countrymen we see a Virginian, George Washington.

Cradled as the colonists were in the forests of America, and surrounded by revengeful Indians, there was developed a physical courage in young Washington. Likewise in later years, when he saw his fellow countrymen overburdened by tyranny and wronged by England, he also attained a strong moral courage.

From boyhood to manhood Washington has been a model of service to others, not for reward, but for the self-satisfaction of being able to assist. Signal among these many occasions was his acceptance of the office of commander in chief of the continental army without the least remuneration, only hoping that he might fulfill his task successfully.

Perhaps the secret of the favorable results obtained in his undertakings was that he depended not upon his own strength but on the power of God. How often we find him in earnest prayer at the time of a crisis!

Let us, as Americans, be ever mindful of the example of true Americanism set us by George Washington.

I am the Washington elm. I am the only thing living today that can boast of having seen George Washington. It seems but yesterday that he stood beneath my branches and took command of the American army.

I can still see the look of high resolve upon his face. Steadfastness of purpose, and honesty were written there. Yet withal he had an expression of vast tenderness. A hero of heroes, he was, and I loved him at once.

From the day he took command of the little band of patriots under my spreading boughs I followed his actions closely. Always eager for some bit of news of him, I listened attentively to the conversation of passersby.

Now he was at Valley Forge enduring hardships. In this situation which seemed almost hopeless he never lost faith in a kind Providence.

Now he was retreating across New Jersey, skillfully, for he was a great general. Then victory followed and he was given the highest honor which the young republic had to offer him. Through two terms as president of the United States he showed his great executive ability.

There followed a period of silence during which I received no word of him. Then it came, the terrible news—George Washington was dead. At first my grief was so great that I longed to die also. But one day a beautiful thought came to me—I would live, that future generations, seeing me, might be reminded of George Washington, the great liberator.

At the time of the American revolution a statesman, George Washington by name, was made commander and chief of the army.

He found butchers, hatters, tailors, grocers—everything except soldiers—at his command; but Washington was not a man of little courage. Under his discipline these men soon became soldiers of the highest degree, for, though ragged and without previous military training, they enlisted heart and soul for the great cause.

In transforming raw recruits into disciplined soldiers Washington demonstrated his rare military genius.

Washington was a greater general by far than Alexander the Great, Caesar, Napoleon, or any of the famous generals of old. These men took up their swords with their own fame and riches in view. On the other hand, Washington, prompted by no selfish motives, entered the war with a purer and nobler ambition. He made the cause of freedom his own; he fought for the cause of humanity.

In his boyhood Washington's education had been neglected, but he possessed common sense, which guided him through his important duties in later life. After studying for a long while Washington became a clever statesman, and he ever proved as wise and good as he was clever.

Washington should be loved and honored by every American, for if it had not been for his leadership, independence might never have been known in America.

We must try to live up to the example which he set for us, considering him America's greatest friend, who led her through the darkest days in the pages of her history.

All through the revolution, Washington fought, starved, and won, with the sole purpose of establishing a country whose motto would rightly and truly be: Equality, Fraternity.

It was Washington's aim that the thirteen colonies should form a land where all people with a good conscience could exercise it and find protection. He struggled to set up a union where every one would be equal, where every one would have a right to lead and a chance to rule, and where birth and age should take no part. He fought for a country that would foster the brotherhood of man, and we know that he fulfilled his highest expectations. He succeeded because his wishes were the people's, his cause the people's, and his loyalty to the people.

Today we have reached the stage of greater conquests on broader fields, with more subtle enemies, but if the principles of our forefathers be maintained and the loyalty of our ancestors continue, our flag shall float over a greater nation, and it shall never trail the dust.

The history of the world is the story of its heroes. Before Washington most heroes were conquerors, and their main business seemed to be conquering for personal gain. The downfall of most heroes started when they began to give themselves entire credit for their successes.

George Washington is the one hero who stands out above all others as the champion of right for right's sake. Although one of the ablest fighters of all times, his battles were never fought for conquest. He was the most modest of men, and his life's record is to us an open book. Truthfulness is the first thing which children remember about Washington. His respect for common people, regardless of the fact that he was born an aristocrat, has made him a model for all mankind.

As a statesman Washington had no superior. The men who drew up the Declaration of Independence, who framed the Constitution of the United States, and all who helped in the formation of our government had the loyal support of Washington.

No man in all history has set as many good examples for us to follow as has George Washington.

To us he is the same as to our forefathers—"first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

I am glad that Washington lived, else I might not be here. I came with my mother and brothers from Russia two years ago. My father came eight years ago. The bad war would not let us come sooner. I did not know about Washington until I went to school here, where I read in a book how he beat the English, and sank a lot of their coffee in the sea.

My father said he worked much in politics, but he never lied. He surely was a good man, else the people would not stop work on his birthday after so long ago.

The boys and girls of America don't know how good they have it. If they lived in Russia a while they would think a whole lot of this country.

Everybody is good to me here and showed me about English. I don't have to go to bed hungry and afraid, and I don't have to dig roots and beg to get something to eat. My father earned money here so we could come, else I know we would be dead.

O, the poor people of Russia! How I wish Washington could come back to help them, so they would be free and happy and have things like the people here.

I can't write like the boys and girls born here, but I feel more than I can write. My mother said I did not know enough about Washington, and I was a foolish girl to write, but I wanted to tell how glad and happy I am that we are away from Russia, and live in this country that Washington made so good to live in.

Ted—The thing I like about him was that he wasn't afraid of nothin.'

Bill—Afraid of nothin'. I should say not. Think of it, and he didn't take a cent while he was in the army or while he was president. Ain't many like that now; and, say, he was the kindest man in the army to the soldiers.

Ted—Sure thing, he was the cleverest general of all. Do you remember when he kept his campfires burning when he and his men crossed the river, while the Red Coats were sleepin' away in their camps? But when mornin' came not a American was in sight.

Bill—Well, say, Ted, I guess I can write about him now.

What a succession of vivid pictures the name of George Washington summons to the mind of every American! His adventurous boyhood, his perilous journey as envoy to the French, the crossing of the Delaware, the winter at Valley Forge, the victory, and finally this unassuming man taking upon himself the leadership of a number of states without established government and as yet but partially reclaimed from the wilderness.

The men whose names stand out most clearly in history are, almost without exception, those who have had the vision and courage to attempt the seemingly impossible, and in the face of all hardships have struggled toward the realization of their dreams. As Columbus ventured forth with his little fleet on the unknown seas with a great faith that his goal could be reached, so Washington with the same faith attempted to lead the new nation through the perils attendant upon a form of government as yet untried. His work laid the foundation for our republic as it exists today.

Washington never allowed his personal ambition to stand in the way of his duty to his country, nor did he become so much elated by success that he lost sight of his great task. His popularity never waned, because the esteem in which he was held by his countrymen was founded upon the sterling worth of his character. Many men, held for a brief time as the idols of the country, are now forgotten, but the fame of Washington remains unchanged.

SO often we find that these demi-gods, these divinities which we worship so devoutly, have, after all, feet of clay. Is it not much more desirable to look the idol straight in the face, and declare that he is all clay—a man? Familiarity does not breed contempt except in the case of contemptible persons. So let it not be considered sacrilegious if we look at Washington without the aid of the limelight.

The father of his country was an aristocrat through and through: formal, severe, ceremonious. His time, his surroundings, all limited him; he who guided this new country to independence, power, and democracy, himself supported the institution of slavery.

As for personal shortcomings, we know that Washington lacked what we, his people, now consider an essential quality—a sense of humor. He had no wit; he seldom laughed. His violent temper, although under control by him at most times, yet furnishes material for interesting stories.

It is only when we catalogue his faults that we realize a man's worth; it is not surprising for a sort of heaven-sent paragon to accomplish miracles; but when a human being like ourselves becomes so truly great, we admire and respect him as he deserves.

Others have praised our common benefactor as a military strategist, as a leader, as a statesman, as an apostle of democracy; I give you the memory of George Washington, his failings, and his virtues; soldier, patriot, and all the rest of the titles of honor on the calendar, but "a man for a' that!"

MOTORDOM

Music and Motors Form Liaison in Ultra Band Wagon

WHEN in 1920 the trade union employés of the English railways talked of going out in sympathy with the striking coal miners the touring actors turned pale. So, presumably, did their managers; but the latter, at least, gave reason to think that it was what Shakespeare might have called the pale cast of thought, inasmuch as they emerged with a solution which worked.

JOHN P. SOUSA.
[White Photo.]

The solution was to use the motor truck for scenery and the char-a-banc for actors. As the sleeper jump is unknown in the tight little isle, the plan proved so practicable that it was held to even after the railway workers withdrew their threat; and today nearly all theatrical touring there is done "on gas."

American theatrical managers, afraid or unwilling to go back to the $2 top for seats until rates of travel subside, have figured on the English plan, but have been deterred from putting it into effect because of the long jumps between the larger cities and the growing uncertainty of bookings in the smaller places. But one seasoned and shrewd showman, John Philip Sousa, is not concerned with the troubles of the men who tour with plays and scenery, and is going in for the motor truck and the motor bus. He makes no long leaps in his goings about. There is an audience for Sousa in any American community where so many as 10,000 reside, and a place wherein to play, if but a tent. His manager, Mr. Askin, thus puts the economic aspect:

"On a basis of this season's railroad costs for the travel of eighty-five persons, averaging $4,200 a week with the tax off, we shall save $2,100 a week in using the big motor wagons. It will be a mobile fleet, independent of any time table save the obligations of the band. If we wish to move on at 9:30 a. m., we shall not be compelled to wait for the next train thither at 10:23. If we prefer a moonlight jump after an evening concert, with sleep in the next stand, we shall go ahead and make it, instead of tumbling drowsily out at, maybe, 5:30 a. m. to catch the 7:02 in order to make a connection at 11:05 which will get us in the next town in time for a matinée.

Bright Future for Rubber.

Akron, the rubber center, sees a bright future, according to a number of statements given out by several leaders in the industry. Finished goods inventories have been decreased to the vanishing point and from now on it looks as though every tire sold will have to be built. The automotive industries now have second place in the industries of thecountry and are continuing to forge ahead.

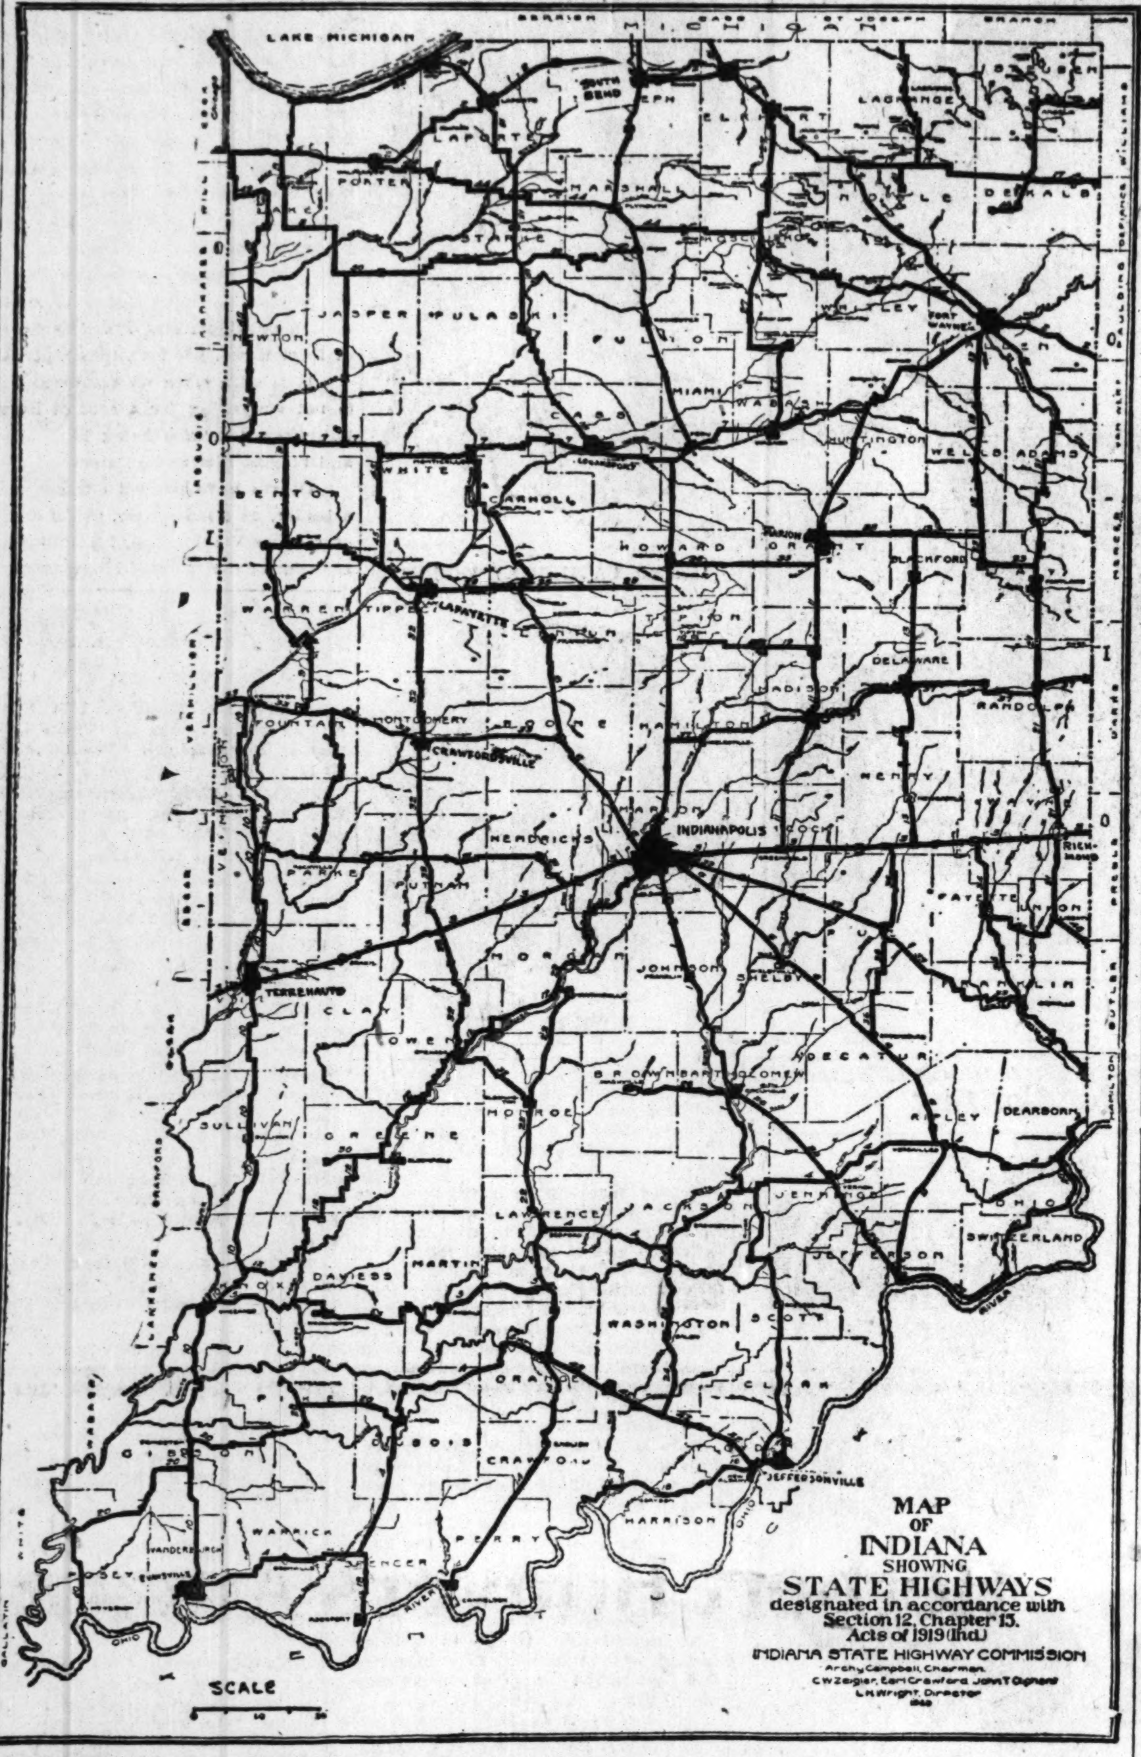
III. INDIANA HIGHWAYS



MAP OF INDIANA SHOWING STATE HIGHWAYS designated in accordance with Section 12, Chapter 15, Acts of 1919 (Ind.)

INDIANA STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSION
Archy Campbell, Chairman.
C W Zeigler, Earl Crawford, John T Oiphant
L H Wright, Director
1919

SAVE THE MAPS

NUMBERED highways of Indiana will be called upon again this year to stand up under heavy punishment from the ever increasing stream of freight and passenger traffic moving east and west. Many of the famous Hoosier stone and gravel roads were pounded to pieces last year, and the state highway department concentrated its efforts throughout the fall and early winter months in dragging and resurfacing for the spring rush.

Comparatively little paving marks the Indiana system as yet, although the National Old Trail, leading from Indianapolis east through Richmond to Columbus, O., and Baltimore, is one of the finest paved arteries in the country. This road west of Indianapolis to Terre Haute will probably be closed for construction work through most of the 1922 touring season. Extensive paving work is also planned on the Lincoln highway running from Dyer through Valparaiso, South Bend, and Fort Wayne, to connect up older pavement stretches, and an important contract will lay down a concrete boulevard between Gary and Michigan City, along the lake shore, to replace the rough main road now in use.

Practically all roads shown on the map will be passable and most of them in fair to good condition after the spring thaws, except those in the south central part of the state, where there is a considerable mileage of dirt roads.

$42,000,000 in Good Roads.

If Lincoln lived today he would perhaps tell us that the three greatest factors in the future progress of the world are good mothers, good schools, and good roads.

There is something which smacks of leadership in the character of the people of California. They invested $42,000,000 in good roads in the ten years following 1910. If all the roads had been destroyed in five years the people of the state would not have lost a single penny.

It happens that in ten years the value of the state's agricultural products increased 300 per cent, and the population adjacent to the state highways, exclusive of the two largest cities, increased 63 per cent.

Beating Winter.

Riding the snow clouds, as skiing is regarded, high in the Rockies, is possible in large measure to the automobile as a contributing factor. Getting there on a gas steed with chains shows how the star of empire is traveling westward from such strongholds of skiing and tobogganing as the great lakes region and New England, for transcontinental motoring is on the increase. Colorado Mountain club members, early in March, will drive by automobile from Denver to Fern lake in Rocky Mountain National park, some seventy-five miles. There may be no sign of winter at the start, but there is the possibility of snow bucking awaiting the steaming, snorting flivver in reaching the greater heights.

Why Oldsmobile Concentrates Solely on Building "Four" and "Eight" Cylinder Cars

For almost a quarter of a century the Olds Motor Works has been engaged in building quality motor cars. A pioneer in the development of the automotive industry, this company has contributed a major share of the experimental and research work necessary to the perfecting of automobile mechanism and to placing motor car manufacture upon a commercially practical basis.

Throughout the entire formative stage, when the basic principles underlying automotive construction were being evolved, Oldsmobile was the acknowledged pace-maker. The highest advances of engineering skill, the most progressive features of design, were in the majority of instances Oldsmobile creations. During this early period the Olds Motor Works built practically every type of car from a one-cylinder up.

Out of the enormous fund of accumulated experience and the extraordinary breadth of technical knowledge acquired through these early years, and those that since have followed, there has been shaped the Oldsmobile policy of concentrating upon the building of Four and Eight Cylinder cars exclusively. The Oldsmobile organization realized the unlimited possibilities that existed in the development of these two types—the Four Clyinder car for lightness and economy; the Eight Cylinder car for the highest degree of motor efficiency.

This firm conviction of Oldsmobile engineers has been substantiated throughout in the cars which the Olds Motor Works is now producing.

The design of the Oldsmobile Four has progressed so skillfully that its power and performance qualities surpass the operation of many multi-cylinder cars; although consistently maintaining the typical "Four" economy, lightness and simplicity.

The Oldsmobile Eights are recognized as establishing a standard for moderately priced cars in motor efficiency, car dependability, and easy riding qualities.

In both the Four and the Eight Cylinder cars, chassis construction has paralleled Oldsmobile motor development. The Olds Motor Works invite a comparison between the frame and chassis construction of their cars and those of any other cars built regardless of price.

This is a simple statement of Oldsmobile policy and the results which this policy has produced. It is a statement which the Olds Motor Works believe will be of interest to the general public.

14 reasons for Auburn's Restful riding

These Auburn features make for exceptional comfort, thoroughgoing dependability, distinctive beauty and remarkable economy. These essentials, combined in the Auburn, set a new standard of Restful riding in a car of Auburn's weight and price! Study them. Test them. Compare with other cars. Then judge for yourself!

1.—Motor—Continental Red Seal Motor—Model 7-R, the finest product of the world's largest motor manufacturers, with its positive-pressure oiling system and four-bearing crankshaft which eliminates vibration. 55 brake horsepower at 2600 R. P. M. Power, flexibility, smoothness and economy.

2.—Velvety Spring Action—Auburn springs are unusually long and strong. They're made right and hung right. 56-inch, nine-leaf, semi-elliptic rear springs, underslung and carried on oscillating spring seats of liberal size. Front springs 38⅜ inches long and provided with snubbers which eliminate excessive rebound when traveling over rough roads, adding to comfort and protecting springs against breakage.

3.—Torque Arm—A torque arm on the rear axle takes up both the driving and braking reaction. The springs are thus relieved of this extra duty. This results in fullest riding comfort, and longer life for the car.

4.—Seat Comfort—Seat and back cushions are deep and soft. Seat cushions built over double deck springs—the upper decks are very sensitive, while the lower decks come into play only under abnormal weights and road irregularities. This construction makes for unusual comfort.

5.—Upholstery—Upholstery is of the finest quality hair and felt, covered with genuine semi-bright, long grained, black leather, French-pleated in soft folds.

6.—Oilless Bushings—Oilless bushings are generously used in all inaccessible places where sound engineering practice permits. Entire system of brake levers and pedals floats upon 14 of these bushings. This construction avoids chassis squeaks, rattles and undue wear at these hidden points.

7.—Frame—Frame is of deep section, wide flange, high carbon steel with FIVE cross members of like material. Taper side bars insuring perfect alignment of entire chassis, eliminating body squeaks and door rattles.

8.—Clutch—Clutch 10" single dry plate, disc type, completely enclosed with accessible adjustment. Annular and thrust ball bearings throughout. Easy operating clutch pedal.

9.—Transmission—Transmission in unit with motor, insuring perfect alignment. Positive shifter lock. Large nickel steel main and countershafts mounted on ball bearings. Gears are of forged nickel steel, case hardened. The teeth in Auburn Transmission gears are not only unusually wide but the face of each tooth is individually ground after hardening, rendering their operation especially quiet. This is a mechanical refinement, rarely found even in high priced cars.

10.—Steering Column—The polished aluminum spider and moulded black rubber composition steering wheel present a handsome appearance throughout the life of the car, as these materials do not show wear. The corrugated grip on the wheel prevents slipping and aids in the ease of steering. Steering column and wheel set at proper angle for maximum comfort to driver.

11.—Instrument Board—Instrument board and tonneau cabinet finished in genuine walnut. Instruments sunk into board beneath individual glass dials. Board is bound with polished aluminum binding. These are important details of finish constantly in view of passengers.

12.—Propeller Shaft—Double universal drive shaft with large bearing surfaces which are all hardened and ground steel, the best construction to be had for this service. Ten spline high carbon steel shaft with extra long splines contained in an oil-tight, dust-proof housing being self lubricating for long periods. This shaft is very flexible and light in comparison to others of similar capacity.

13.—Curtains—Curtains completely enclose open cars and are storm tight. Curtains open with doors and are quickly put on and detached. Chafing and marring of curtains when not in use is eliminated by the container fastened inside of tonneau cabinet door where they are always accessible without disturbing any of the passengers.

14.—Body Moulding—The top edge of body is finished with a smart aluminum moulding along its entire length and around the cowl. This moulding permits a neater finish in upholstery on this edge than the conventional binding, and is also the most durable body edge finish ever devised. An original Auburn feature.

MOTORDOM

Police Collect Clever Methods of Car Marking

Make Sure You Can Find Your Own Motor, Says Expert.

BY HIGH SPEED.

IF the average car owner were asked whether he could identify his own car under any set of circumstances his impulse would be to return an unqualified and indignant affirmative. The police of one of our larger cities would disagree with him just as unqualifiedly.

As a matter of fact, most car owners depend for identification on some scratch on the body, some broken screw in the chassis, or some other equally uncertain factor. They do not stop to consider that our big manufacturers are turning out models in 10,000 lots that differ from each other in not the slightest discernible degree. By the time a successful thief has run a stolen car through his "service station" it would puzzle the most careful owner on earth to identify his vehicle.

An instance in point is found in the recent experience of a car owner in a middle western city who lost his car, a touring model of a popular make, and after some weeks of anxious waiting was summoned to police headquarters to see whether he could identify a vehicle answering to his description of his lost car.

Arrived at the police station, he found a small group of other owners who had assembled to try to identify the same car to see which he had been summoned. The hopeful owner had a number of marks by which he felt confident he could prove his ownership of the restored vehicle. There was a bent screw in one part of the chassis, a dent in one fender, a scratch of peculiar shape on the dash. The car with which he was confronted was undoubtedly of the same vintage as his lost boat, but unhappily it was painted a rich ultramarine blue, instead of the dark green that had graced his vehicle. The most earnest scrutiny failed to disclose any of the distinguishing marks on which he had relied. A slight chipping of the new coat of enamel revealed the fact that it had been put on over a previous coat of the dark green that our friend had described, but two of the other assembled owners had put in bids for dark green cars and eventually one of them managed to identify the car by a chip in the gearset housing. The identification was not particularly convincing, but in the absence of anything better it served to give the car to the owner who had been able to describe the imperfection.

As a matter of fact no car owner ought to depend on such casual means of identification as slight imperfections that may have accrued during the operation of the vehicle. When the professional automobile thief steals a car he takes it to what amounts practically to a rebuilding factory. In many cases the entire mechanism is taken down and the different parts redistributed with those from other cars of the same make and model to turn out what amount to new vehicles.

The only safe method of placing identification marks on a car is to place them on all major parts of the mechanism. Perhaps the most satisfactory method of doing so is to place punch marks on the various units. All such marks should be put in places where they will not be readily discernible; for instance, on the inside of the axles, on the flywheel, on the upper side of the gearset housing. After the marks have been made they should be rubbed over with grease until they are nearly indistinguishable as possible. The car owner can have a prick punch made with his initials on it in very fine type and with this it is possible to place identification marks on the various parts that will generally escape notice and yet remain permanently.

The owner whom I know has had the upholstery of his front and rear seat lifted up and has tacked his card on the wooden framework of the seat. This is not at all bad, because the thief would seldom think to look in this location for an identification mark of any sort.

Another clever idea is to bore a few small holes a mere fraction of an inch into the framework at a given place, carefully measured from permanently located landmarks. Then fill these holes with lead and smear the spot well with grease.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

STABILIZATION of automobile prices is complete, according to trade authorities, who point out that the motor industry has led the industrial world in the race back to permanent values. The average price of forty-nine of the principal touring car models is now 22 per cent below the average price on Sept. 1, 1920. A number of manufacturers cite greater reductions, some as much as 42 per cent, brought about by price cuts spread over more than a year. Bed rock was reached, the makers say, by the last, and comparatively small cuts have been announced since Jan. 1, and announcements of slight price increases made by six manufacturers since that date.

Fred Wilson, general sales manager for the Stutz Motor Car Company of America, last week completed organization of the Stutz Chicago company, with A. S. Johnson in charge as general manager. Temporary sales headquarters have been opened at 1428 Michigan avenue, where the new "D H" motor is now on display.

Chicago's row gave "bon voyage" to N. H. Van Sicklin, former owner of Motor Age and Chicago Automobile Trade association official, last week, following his appointment to the post of assistant general manager for Apperson in Kokomo.

H. A. Holder, president of the R. & V. Motor company, announced yesterday that his East Moline factory is working on a twenty-four hour schedule, employing three shifts a day. Company business in 1921 exceeded records for the last eighteen years, he declared.

Wheels of the Stewart plant in Bowling Green, O., are revolving at full speed in the initial production of the new Coats steam automobile, according to word received by the Coats company, 2337 Michigan avenue, which, as exclusive selling agent, has contracted for the entire factory output.

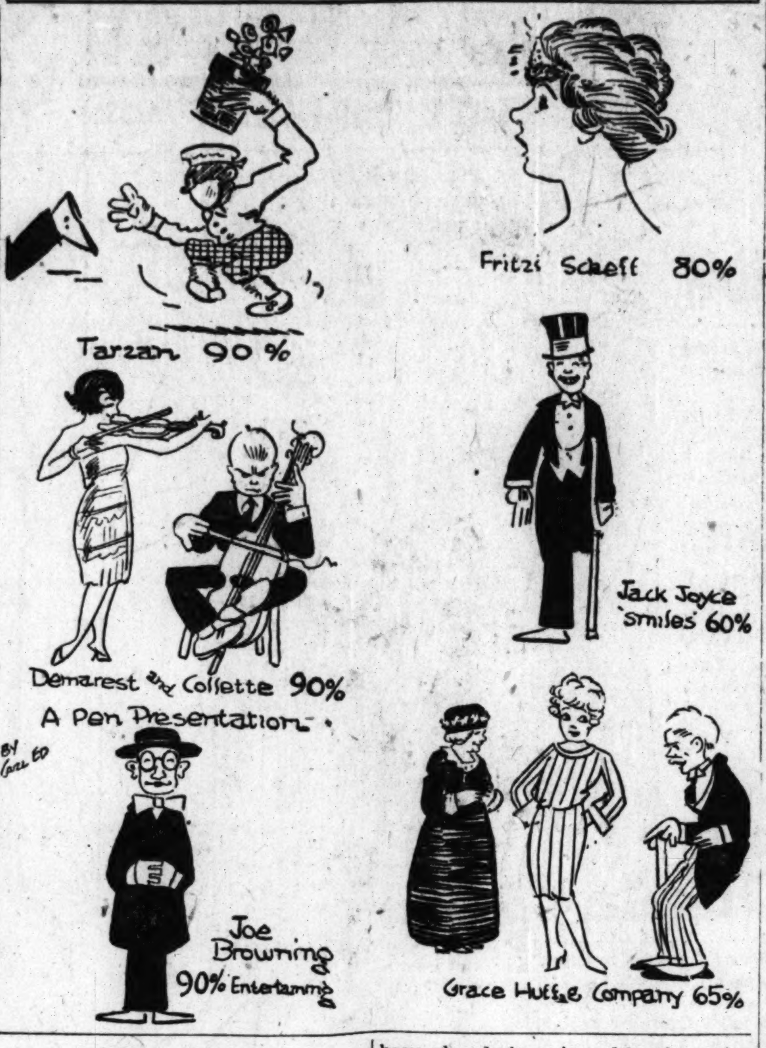
A Pen Presentation By Carl Ed



A New Record.

When all is said and done—and the final returns are in—it looks as though California is going to come pretty near leading America in the number of autos owned.

More than 700,000 license plates have already been issued by the motor vehicle department, and at the end of last year the nearest competing state boasted only 744,000 automobiles. It is considered possible by local authorities that the total registration, before closing in March, may reach more than 750,000 cars.

THAT ZION ROAD.

Work on the central half mile Sheridan road pavement through the heart of Zion City will be started shortly, according to W. H. Clendenin, mayor of Zion City. It is planned that the central two blocks will be seventy-six feet wide, the north block fifty-two feet wide, and the south block thirty feet wide, and this should be finished within a comparatively short time. This will complete the pavement through Zion City and will make a solid concrete road from Chicago to Milwaukee. Forty-one modern posts and lamps will form a lighting system through Zion City.

Varied Resources of Alaska Offer Chance to Worker

This is the first of a series of articles by Thomas B. Drayton outlining some of the agricultural and commercial possibilities of Alaska, its transportation and other problems, and other phases of Alaskan life.

The average American's idea of the territory, a once remote part of his country, has been of a land of snow and reindeer and gold mines, and not much else. That there is much else is gradually becoming a fact to him.

There are thousands of miles of mountain ranges, tremendous stretches of no human use, but there are also immense river valleys, larger than many of the states, suitable for cultivation and stock raising. Wheat flour is grown and milled north of the 64th parallel.

Other articles will appear in later issues of The Sunday Tribune.

By Thomas B. Drayton.

[Special Correspondence of The Tribune.]

SEWARD, Alaska, Feb. 25.—Alaska is really an unknown country beyond its own borders. This ought not to be so, seeing it was discovered in 499 A. D., if Chinese legends be accepted as facts; but it is true that Alaska is unknown to the outside world, and for the peculiar reason that most spoken and written accounts of the country are either absurdly flattering or else absurdly derogatory.

The unmerited applause comes from tourists and other transitory visitors who at most see but little of the country and its real life, and who quite naturally fall into the habits of speech suggested by custom and the tourist's habitual away from home politeness. Then, too, much of the "charm" credited to Alaska has its source in "booster" literature issued by local clubs in former times. Fortunately for Alaska the clubs have learned at last that exaggerations and inventions have a most harmful flareback, and in consequence their present day literature has come to be more dependable.

The disparaging stories occasionally heard originate mostly from disgruntled persons whose Alaskan ventures have proved unsatisfactory and thus impaired a proper perspective.

Thus between the versions of the enthusiasts and the unfortunates the truth about Alaska is obscured by a haze of contradiction.

Vast Expanse of Waste Land.

It is a fact, as often declared in the written accounts of visitors, that Alaska has just under 600,000 square miles of land, or 384,000,000 acres. But it is not mentioned that in this vast area, one-fifth the size of the United States, tremendous expanses consist of unscaleable mountains and other immense reaches of rock and ice and bottomless morass unsuited to animal or vegetable life. The $7,200,000 paid to Russia for Alaska in 1867 means less than 2 cents an acre computed in total acreage, but computed in acres of any possible value the price would be greatly increased. Nobody who knows Alaska will deny that mankind would be the gainer if much of its surface were open salt water, available to shipping, or capable of producing sea products for human use.

Northern Alaska, a region about 200 miles wide lying between the Endicott mountains and the Arctic ocean and extending from the Canadian border through to Kotzebue sound, is not properly an asset. A few stunted, inaccessible trees grow on the north slope; a few Arctic caribou, an occasional marmot or whistler, and a limited number of Arctic hares may be found there, but otherwise the region is a total loss without insurance. South of the Endicotts there is a different story to tell, as it is potentially a rich mining country, and of more interest to sportsmen, much of it is abundantly supplied with game. The winters are long and severe, the summers short and much warmer than nearer the coast.

Alaska has four immense mountain ranges and many subordinate groups. In the aggregate they account for many thousands of square miles of territory inaccessible to man, and almost inaccessible to sheep and goats. Glaciers also cover immense stretches of territory and by their proximity and influence render yet greater stretches uninviting at best and uninhabitable at worst. A thousand miles of continuous mountain chains extend from northern Alaska to southeastern Alaska, and this without taking into account the thousand miles and more of barren volcanic lava shown on the maps as the Aleutian islands.

Mountains Rich in Minerals.

That's the dark side of the picture. The bright side is in the fact that many of these desolate mountain fastnesses are mineral bearing districts, a few of them known to be of great richness in gold, copper, and other metals. Others are heavily timbered, particularly near the sea.

Much exaggeration has been indulged in respect of Alaskan timber. It is really suitable for the rougher kinds of lumber only, if a small amount of white birch and an even smaller amount of red and yellow cedar be excepted. Its potential value for the manufacture of pulp and paper is undoubtedly great. The timbered regions of Alaska consist of something like 2,000 square miles of forests, all reserved by the forestry bureau. Aside from these reserved forests Alaska generally has enough timber of small growth for firewood and minor domestic uses, excepting the coastal region north from Bristol bay, and the larger part of the great Seward and Alaska peninsulas, which are mostly treeless.

Southeastern Alaska, or the panhandle, is the most densely populated. It is a narrow strip beginning just north of the fifty-fourth parallel and continuing to about the sixtieth. It is so entirely mountainous that one would have difficulty in finding a hundred acre tract level enough to be cultivated. Surrounding islands form a perfect network and constitute the outer barrier of what is known as the inside passage; the Alaska known to the tourist. Hereabout the shores are so precipitous and the waters so deep that any vessel afloat could scrape the bank with safety, or in local parlance "tie up to a tree." There is also more timber, and a greater variety, than elsewhere in Alaska. This is perhaps the greatest fishing region of the world and the territory round about is highly mineralized. It has been justly described as a scenic wonder land.

Farming in Southwest.

Southwestern Alaska, with which the Nenana and Fairbanks districts also may be properly considered, is the land of potential farming and grazing. While tremendous stretches are too rough and precipitous for human use there are immense river valleys, larger than most states of the union, suitable for cultivation and stock raising. Farming in Alaska was long considered a stock joke, a source of jest and merriment, like glacier worms and Irish-Alaskan snakes, and similar imaginary rubbish. Those of us who then came to mock are to day remaining to pray. The unthinkable has happened. The bread on the writer's table at dinner was made from wheat flour grown and milled in Alaska north of the 64th parallel.

Southwestern Alaska is also a richly mineralized region, although the oft-heard boast that its surface has scarcely been scratched, and that vast stretches are as yet unknown, will not bear examination. All of Alaska has in fact been prospected up and down, crosswise and roundabout. The rich gold placers were all found and staked. The low grade was seen but passed over when first discovered. However, these great low grade deposits will yet produce vastly more gold than all the rich grounds combined, once transportation and other mining costs permit of their being worked, or worked in a large way.

Immense Coal Area.

Southwestern Alaska is also the greatly advertised coal bearing section of the territory. It embraces known coal lands greater in acreage than the coal lands of the United States. The value of the coal is still an open question, but with strong probabilities that it will eventually justify the reports spread broadcast by the most optimistic. This section and southeastern Alaska together are known to have more copper than Arizona and Michigan combined, in addition to large deposits of silver, lead, gypsum, marble, and more or less tin and nickel.

Southwestern Alaska waters, like those farther south and east, also supply a great fishing industry, particularly salmon, halibut, and herring. Salmon have been greatly depleted within recent years and practical fishermen predict the ultimate extermination of the salmon unless present methods of fishing be abandoned in favor of a less destructive process.

The rivers and other fresh water streams are still abundantly supplied with trout, grayling, and other edible fish. Rainbows running up to twenty pounds or more have occasionally been hooked in some waters.

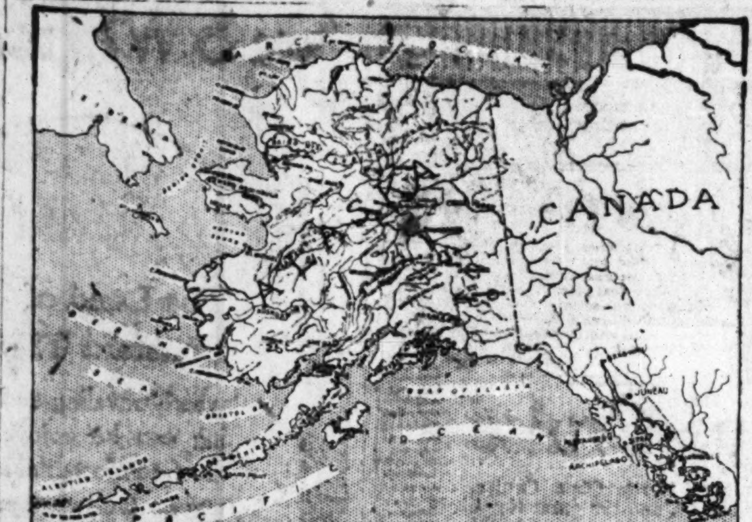
Big Game Plentiful.

Trapping is at present at a low ebb in Alaska, although it was never so important as young people are apt to believe. The money in the fur business and the romance surrounding it center about the big buyers and dealers, not the lonely wilderness hermit, whose annual catch is but a trifling contribution to an individual buyer's collection.

Big game, such as moose, bear, and caribu, is as plentiful as ever. Indeed, there are probably more bears in Alaska than twenty years ago. For some reason the mountain sheep are less plentiful than formerly, except in the Mount McKinley district. Deer, which are indigenous to southeastern Alaska only, are still plentiful, but not so numerous as in former years. Feathered game varies in quantity from year to year, much as do the smaller fur bearers. Land furs taken in Alaska average in money value about one-eighth the aquatic fur corp.

In a business way Alaska is today at about the lowest level in her history, but the signs of improvement are renewing hope and enthusiasm.

ALASKA—IT CALLS TO WORKERS



Illinois Farmers Take Stock of Spring Needs

With most of the old wheat crop off the farms and the time approaching for the fields to become green, Illinois farmers are becoming interested in the coming wheat crop. During the last few weeks they have been out examining their fields and speculating on the prospects for this year's harvest. Reports from A. J. Surratt, agricultural statistician of Illinois, say that winter wheat has been damaged to some extent in scattered acres from the freezing and thawing of the ground, and roots of some of the wheat have been exposed by the high winds blowing the soil over the fields. Rains in the central and southern part of the state have benefited the winter wheat, and the crop as a whole is still in good condition.

The fact that there is a heavy demand for clover seed over the entire state indicates that farmers are getting land back in legumes to give it a rest and build up the fertility.

Farmers are not worrying much about the labor problem this spring. Reports indicate that farm labor is plentiful, and farmers are planning to do as much work as they can in order to cut down expenses.

Illinois will have a big pig crop next fall if farmers continue increasing their herds of brood sows by picking out the best gilts in their herds and bringing sows in from all parts of the middle west, as they have been doing for the last month.

They're Going to Count Their Pigs by the Ton

Farmers are getting ready for a big pig crop in the corn belt. They do not intend to be caught with another big surplus of corn on hands if growing pigs will help the situation. They used to count pigs by the number; now it is by the ton.

At least, that is true in Indiana, where they have organized the Hoosier Ton Litter club, sponsored by the Indiana Live Stock Breeders' association and the agricultural extension department of Purdue university. From fifty-eight counties 550 hog raisers have registered and are now struggling to get a litter of pigs to weigh a ton within six months from farrowing date.

"Big litters—big profits" is the slogan of the Ton Litter club. Records have been kept on fifty-two Indiana farms in connection with the farm bureau and the university which show that a weanling pig in a litter of four costs twice as much as a weanling pig in a litter of seven or eight. The man who markets a litter of seven makes a dollar more a hundred than the man who sells a litter of four.

They Call Free Seed "Campaign Cigars"

Free garden seed is not wanted by farmers, according to J. W. Coverdale, secretary of the American Farm Bureau federation. In commenting on the agricultural appropriation bill, which provides $360,000 for government free seed, Mr. Coverdale said: "Farmers do not want free seed. They view with disgust the action of any congressman in sending them a lot of free cucumber seed, designed primarily to take the place of campaign cigars. This little item of $360,000 for government free seed would be a good place to begin governmental economy. The farm bureau is unalterably opposed to free seed and has gone on record time and again to this effect."

Fighting Cattle Disease.

The government has set aside $1,728,800 for the payment during the next year of indemnities on cattle tested and found to be infected with tuberculosis. Besides this $850,000 has been appropriated for testing and administration work.

FARM AND GARDEN

Soy Bean Crop May Offset Illinois' Surplus of Corn

By Frank Ridgway.

HOWARD LEONARD.

Illinois farmers are trying out a new scheme this spring. They are going to shape their policies in accordance with the new order of business. Instead of producing a crop and then searching for a market they will start at the other end of the horn, creating a market before producing the crop.

The soy bean committee of the Illinois State Farm Advisers' association is developing a market for 2,520,000 bushels of soy beans to be grown and sold in Illinois this year. This will make it possible for farmers to diversify their crops and utilize 168,000 acres of land in the growing of a legume that is not only a profitable crop commercially but will aid in cutting down corn acreage and at the same time build up the fertility of soil.

County Agents Back Plan.

Soy beans would probably never have been of much importance in the Illinois farmer's crop rotation system if it had not been for the enormous surplus of corn that producers found piled up in their cribs at the end of the harvesting season last fall. This became apparent in October and November, resulting in the appointment of the soy bean committee. It was appointed by I. S. Brooks, president of the Illinois State Farm Advisers' association, and began its work only a few weeks ago, headed by Sydney B. Smith of Macon county. Other members are C. E. Hay, Christian county; C. H. Oathout, Champaign county, and B. W. Tillman, St. Clair county.

Ninety-five county agents in an equal number of counties in this state are backing the movement.

Corn growers, recognizing the depressing effect the corn surplus was having on the market, decided the acreage this year should be reduced, but when it came to practicing what they were preaching they soon realized they could not cut down their acreage unless some other crop could be substituted that would be more profitable or equally as profitable as corn. Soy beans seemed to meet the need, providing a market could be found.

Furnishing a Market.

The committee found that before the crop could be grown to any great extent a market must be created, and its first job, accordingly, was to investigate all angles of the manufacturing and marketing business connected with the industry. Through personal interviews and conferences with various manufacturers arrangements have been made with three oil manufacturing concerns in Chicago, East St. Louis, and Decatur to take care of this year's crop. These three concerns have agreed to furnish a market for 2,520,000 bushels, showing the possibilities of production here in Illinois.

Although there is a big demand for soy bean products, particularly oil, in this country, Illinois farmers have had to create their own market. Oil extracting plants had to be established to prepare the oil so manufacturers could use it. Manufacturers of paints, varnish, soaps, and similar products are extensive users of soy bean oil, and up to this time they have had to depend upon growers in Manchuria, a division of China.

In 1918 the net importation of soy beans into this country amounted to 336,380,914 pounds. This was the peak of importations, dropping back to 14,628,501 last year because of industrial conditions.

Will Ask Tariff Protection.

The Illinois committee will not only encourage farmers to grow the bean and aid in supplying the domestic demand which has heretofore been met by foreign growers but will wage a fight to secure tariff protection which will enable the American farmer to compete on equal terms with the cheap coolie labor of the orient.

Illinois farmers will be strongly supported by the farm bureau in securing this tariff. According to L. J. Montross of the Illinois Agricultural association the officials of his organization believe a duty should be placed on imported beans. The large amounts exported from Manchuria before the war, they say, show the dangers to which growers in this country are exposed.

Uses Too Little Known.

"The surplus of corn can be greatly relieved by planting more legumes, such as soy beans, clover, and alfalfa, and the farmer's income and the fertility of his soil will be increased," said Howard Leonard, president of the state farm bureau. "In view of the fact that a market is now being created for soy beans, I believe this crop can be safely and profitably grown in sections of Illinois where it is adaptable."

Wherever they can be grown successfully in this state county agents, crop experts, and men who have already grown the crop are urging farmers to substitute at least a few acres of soy beans for corn this spring.

The committee points out that soy beans have never been fully appreciated in this country because people are not familiar with the many different ways they can be used for human and animal foods, as well as commercially. Up to this time American farmers have only made three principal uses of this valuable crop—seed, hay, and supplementary feeds. One of the common ways to use it in the corn belt has been to plant it in the row with corn, and then turn the hogs in the field to harvest both in the fall.

Has High Protein Content.

The soy bean is of particular value to farmers as feed because of its high protein content, containing 33 per cent protein and 17 per cent oil. Last year farmers in Macon county tried out corn and soy beans which ripened successively, and by hogging down the crops 600 pounds of pork to the acre was produced.

Here are the points held by the committee as being the chief production advantages of soy beans from the corn belt farmers' standpoint: They relieve the surplus of corn; fit economically into the organization of farm labor because planting and harvesting come when there is no peak load of farm labor; the plants are immune to attacks of the chinch bug, and add nitrogen and improve the physical condition of the soil.

At Decatur, where the enthusiasm runs highest, farmers, in conjunction with the Decatur chamber of commerce, held a banquet recently in which soy beans were the "piece de resistance." They had baked soy beans, boiled soy beans, soy bean soup, and soy bean muffins. Soy beans were even parched and ground and used as a substitute for coffee, and a delicate salad was made of them.

Diners Looked Suspicious.

That was a rare banquet for people in Decatur, as well as the farmers who came in for miles around to attend the big feast—every one was suspicious and timidly tasted the first few bites of each dish served. They liked the food so well that ever since the banquet soy beans have been served in a variety of ways in the homes in and around Decatur.

People in some of the countries of the orient would chuckle if they should hear of the Decatur dinner, for the soy bean has been one of the principal articles of human food for more than 5,000 years in many foreign countries. It is an annual leguminous plant, native of southeastern Asia, and has been cultivated in India, Japan, and China for more than fifty centuries. It is the most important legume crop grown in these countries.

It was introduced into the United States as early as 1804, but has made little progress until the last ten years. Today Illinois is far in the lead in its production.

The plant is used as a green manure, pasture, and forage; the seeds are used as stock feed, fertilizer, and meal, and as human food it is used to make crackers, macaroni, flour, infant, breakfast, and diabetic food. The oil is used in glycerin, explosives, enamel, soaps, varnish, paints, etc. The green beans are used as a vegetable, or they may be canned or used in salad.

Big Demand for Oil.

There is a great demand for seed this season. One eastern firm has placed an order for five carloads of seed in Champaign county. Evidence of the demand is shown by the fact that in 1918 the oleomargarine industry used 5,921,000 pounds, lard substitute industry 56,517,000 pounds, soap factories 124,058,000 pounds, and other industries—principally paint, oil, and linoleum concerns—used 149,884,914 pounds of soy bean oil. Practically all of it was imported and could easily be supplied here.

Just how profitable the production will be depends upon how well manufacturers and farmers work together.

FARMERS' MEETINGS

The U. S. Grain Growers, Inc., will hold its first annual convention next Tuesday and Wednesday at the organization's headquarters here in Chicago.

The annual live stock and grain judging contest of Iowa High schools will be held at the Iowa State college, March 23 and 24.

Reports on tentative plans for the organization of the fruit industry in order to secure better distribution of fruit and fruit products will be made at the meeting of the Fruit Growers' marketing committee of twenty-one, which is to begin here April 24. The meeting will be held in the general offices of the American Farm Bureau federation, 58 East Washington street.

His position in importance is second only to that of the archbishop and bishop of the archdiocese. The chancellory is located at Cass and Superior streets. He was a cousin of the late Archbishop Riordan of San Francisco and is a brother of the Rev. P. W. Dunne of St. James' church, Chicago.

The united choirs of the New First Congregational church, Ashland and Washington boulevards, George L. Tenny, director, will give Sullivan's "Golden Legend," dramatized, next Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings at 8. Free tickets may be had by addressing the church, Lyon & Healy's, or the Lewis institute. The solo parts will be taken by Mrs. George L. Tenny, Miss Lucy J. Hartman, Dr. Leon Jones, and Rollin Pease. Next Sunday evening the choirs will sing Hayden's "Creation." No tickets required.

Here is good living and comfortable prices. F. J. Kihm

Any apartment hotel can promise good living or comfortable prices. The thing is to get both, as you who have "looked around" know only too well.

Here at the Rogers Park Apartment Hotel we promise, and do deliver, good living and comfortable prices. Our apartments are fair in price, especially moderate under present circumstances. Our restaurant charges are lower than merely fair, so our guests constantly tell us.

So, we say, to paraphrase Mr. Packard, "Ask the man who lives here."

Write or telephone me (Sheldrake 2000) for information as to available suites and locations. I will be glad to tell you, too, all about "L" service from Loyola, the bus service, where your church is, something as to stores, schools, garages and country clubs. I am yours to command.

HYDRO-TORON

Guaranteed 10,000 Miles Against Stone Bruise - Rim Cut and Blow Out

Two distinctive processes—one mechanical, the other chemical—are used in making Hydro-Toron Tires.

Our Internal Hydraulic Expansion process, vulcanizing with water under pressure heated to the proper temperature, eliminates the unseen defects, which are the real cause of stone-bruise, rim-cut, and blow-out.

The scientific chemical process of fabric treatment—the Toron (no-rot) feature—proofs the tire against the damaging action of moisture, decay, and all forms of oxidation; insures greater tensile strength in the fabric, greater holding power, and an increased affinity for rubber.

The result is a better tire—backed by a fearless guarantee of 10,000 miles against stone-bruise, rim-cut, and blow-out.

Better tires—representing two processes that build unusual mileage into them—guaranteed to serve—as big as cords—better than cords—costing less than cords.

These advantages should prompt you to specify Hydro-Torons the next time you buy tires.

FOR SALE—ANSWER FROM YOUR HEART.
"C'mon now—confess! Down deep in your heart, you would like to own a home—every good husband and father does."

That is the way our new circular on Beverly Hills Homes starts. It gives you a bird's eye view of the section. Tells you about the community, the churches, schools, etc., and above all, shows you how you can own your own home. It's really a very valuable circular to those interested, or who may become interested in Beverly Hills. One man, a golfer, said: "Campbell, it's the best piece of literature about Beverly Hills that has ever been published." It shows the location of the Beverly Golf Club, Ridge Golf Club, Forest Preserve, and a lot of interesting data. Every reader of this ad should have it. It's yours by mail. Ask for it.

TWIN SIX PHAETON.

A
DE LUXE

$2,750

The very atmosphere of this swagger looking car suggests Palm Beach or Sunny California. It's just the sort of an automobile you would select to take with you on your vcation both on account of its very distinctive appearance and dependability. Even for an expert [by the most detailed examination mechanically and otherwise] it would be difficult to distinguish this fine car from new. A model similar to this one at the present reduced price would cost over $4,500. From this quiet, smooth running car years of dependable service are to be obtained, and with it we give a written standard new car guarantee.

The blending of colors shows the touch of an artist. The body, fenders, chassis, and tire covers are finished in tropical blue, with wheels, rear door panel, and spare tire cover bands in orange color. The hand tailored top and seat covers are of beach sand tan imported Burbank cloth with leather trimmings. A livening touch is added by the nickel silver lamps and radidator. New cord tires. 2 spares.

You will never be able to purchase a car of the high grade quality of this Packard for so very low a figure as we are offering this one. Come down and see it today!

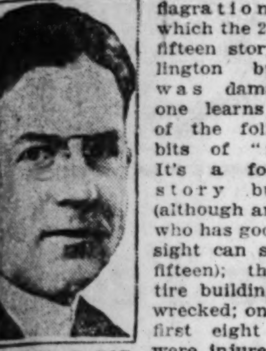
TELLS WHAT FIRE ACTUALLY DID TO BIG SKYSCRAPER

Architect of Burlington Gves Facts.

The Burlington building unquestionably saved the entire west side from being destroyed.—Fire Marshal Thomas O'Connor.

BY AL CHASE.



CHARLES E. FOX. [Morrison Photo.]

After reading the maze of conflicting stories about Chicago's first big sky scraper conflagration—in which the 200 foot fifteen story Burlington building was damaged—one learns some of the following bits of "news." It's a fourteen story building (although any one who has good eyesight can see it's fifteen); the entire building was wrecked; only the first eight floors were injured; the top eight were wiped out; the fire entered through the roof and crept down floor by floor; the Burlington uses the upper floors only; the lower floors only are used by the railroad; one alderman was quoted as saying the building is 150 feet high, and so on indefinitely.

And now comes Architect Charles E. Fox of Marshall & Fox, who designed the building, and tells a few facts about the fire that are worth listening to, especially when such a large percentage of Chicago citizens work in sky scrapers which might at any time go through the same experience.

Lucky for Chicago.

"The fire was bad luck for the Burlington building, but certainly was good luck for Chicago," said Mr. Fox. "The Burlington has contributed the whole cost of saving the entire west side. If it hadn't been in the direct path of the fire nothing on earth could have stopped the flames from wiping out the whole west side."

And right here let's interpolate the suggestion of one of the best known loop office building managers, who inspected the building with Mr. Fox: "The property owners west of the Burlington building, who were saved tremendous losses through the barrier that structure made against the fire, should chip in and pay for the rehabilitation of the Burlington."

Like a Huge Blow Torch.

"The Burlington road used the entire fifteen stories, as well as basements and attic, with the exception of the bank on the first floor," continued Mr. Fox. "The building across the street acted as a huge blow torch and blew a blast of heat and gasses into the six upper floors against which nothing could stand. Wire glass windows melted and draped themselves over rediators like handkerchiefs.

"Of course, everything inflammable burned, and in some rooms metal melted, but yet this terrific blast failed to get through the cast iron elevator shaft coverings or to break through the ceilings into the attic floor, where tons of railroad records were stored. The roof, of course, was not injured at all. The elevators were in operation the next morning, all of the machinery in the attic being in perfect condition.

"The steel skeleton of the building, imbedded in concrete and covered with hollow tile, was not hurt, even in the path of the fiercest blast. Some of the tiles cracked off, but that was all. Floors were damaged slightly, in some offices not at all. Practically all of the outside terra cotta on the east side of the building will have to be replaced on account of its cracking.

Stuck to Their Posts.

"On the floors below the tenth most of the east windows are broken and in many offices facing on Clinton street furniture was burned or scorched and considerable water damage done in putting out small blazes.

"Watch Engineer J. A. Knecht and Fireman Joseph Nohava were in the building when the fire started and stayed to the finish. Chief Engineer J. O. Batzer arrived shortly after the blaze was discovered and also stuck to his post.

"These men kept the dynamos going and engines running, and as floor after floor caught fire, turned off the lights on those floors. When the great flood of water began pouring down into the subbasement they opened a shaft into a deep draining well extending down to an abandoned water tunnel. In this way they kept the basements dry and their engines and dynamos going.

Well Equipped for Fire Test.

"This feature and others, such as the inclosed elevator shafts, unusually heavy floors, three and one-half feet thick, every fifth floor, made the Burlington unusually well equipped to go through a fire test.

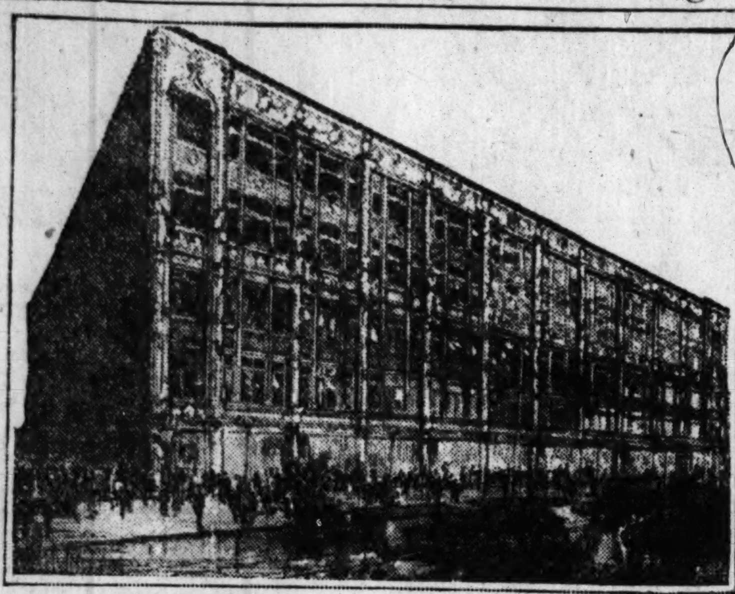
"The fire has again shown what already is well known that the window is the weakest point in a skyscraper. Wire glass in metal sash is better than plain glass in wood sash, but at a certain heat even wire glass melts. Even iron shutters would buckle and melt in such a blast of heat as was blown across to the upper floors of the Burlington."

Mr. Fox is sending an invitation to the various engineering and architectural societies of Chicago to make an exhaustive study of the Burlington fire.

The Burlington building was built nine years ago at a cost of $1,500,000 and probably couldn't be duplicated for less than $3,000,000 today. It is 200 feet high, the legal limit at the time it was built, but has foundations for six more stories. It will probably cost around 25 per cent of its replacement value to rehabilitate the building.

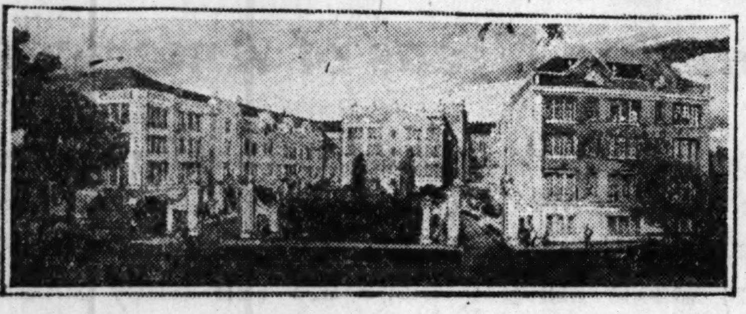
"We can have it ready for use in ten days," said Mr. Fox, "and the interior completely rehabilitated in three weeks."

Proposed Uptown Office Building



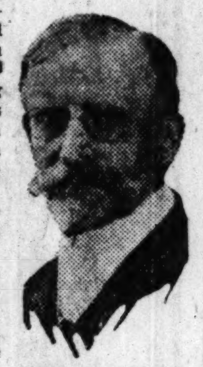
Above is the proposed five story $250,000 building to be erected at the northeast corner of Broadway and Leland from plans by Walter W. Ahlschlager by Arnold Schlachter, John C. Bowers, Edward Lundstrom, and Louis Schwartzman of the Sheridan Realty company. It is said work will start in ninety days, with October as completion date. There'll be seventy-five offices and eight stores.

More Big North Side Apartments



A $225,000 thirty apartment building containing four, five, and six room suites is to be erected from plans by Walter W. Ahlschlager on the east side of Lehman court 125 feet south of Diversey parkway. A spacious court with motor driveway around it is provided for. It will have 216 feet frontage and 135 feet depth. Work will start within thirty days for Sept. 1 occupancy. Otto and Walter Schmidt of the Rienzi garage are the owners.

ARCHITECT TO TELL GLEN ELLYN OF CHICAGO WOES



F. E. DAVIDSON. [Matzene Photo.]

F. E. Davidson, president of the Illinois Society of Architects, has entirely recovered from his recent sickness, and will journey out to Du Page county tomorrow evening and tell residents of Glen Ellyn about Chicago's building and labor situation. He will speak before the St. Mark's Men's club in Guild hall and all Glen Ellyn residents are invited. Mr. Davidson, who has been one of the most aggressive fighters against present conditions in Chicago, was scheduled to speak in Glen Ellyn last month, but illness prevented. William Shirer, president of the club, will introduce Mr. Davidson.

Plans $100,000 Building at Irving Park-Crawford

Another important addition to the rapidly growing business center at Irving Park boulevard and Crawford is announced. George W. Prassas has under contract to buy the 100 feet of vacant adjoining the southeast corner of those two streets. Plans are being drawn by Architect Jens J. Jensen for a store and apartment building to cost $100,000.

Mr. Prassas has sold to Nicholas J. Asvos the three stores and two flats under construction at 3940-44 Irving Park boulevard, a block and a half east of Crawford, for $53,500, subject to $23,500. He also has sold to George J. Katsigiannis the northwest corner of Irving Park and Harding, 75x125, for $25,000, which will be improved with a $75,000 store, office, and flat building.

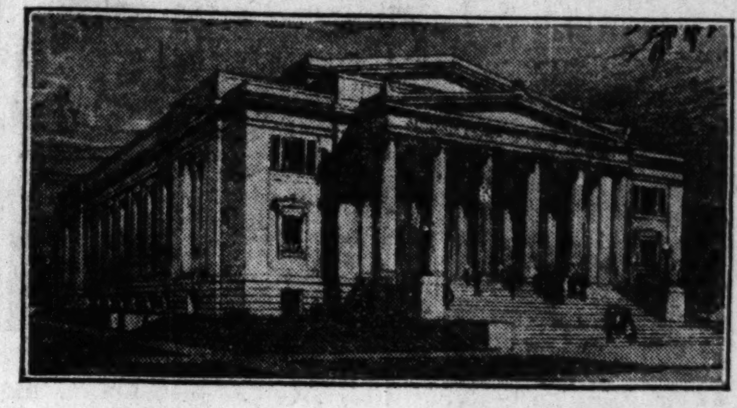
PLANS GOLD COAST TEA ROOM.

Miss Mercedes Graeme Stewart of the Ambassador hotel, daughter of Graeme Stewart, has leased the old Pardee residence at 1218 North State for five years at $15,000 for the term and will use it for studio apartments and tea room. Fred Brons of Crowe Bros. & Co. was broker.

ARCHITECT SELLS RESIDENCE.

Benjamin H. Marshall of Marshall & Fox, architects, has sold the residence at 4730 Drexel boulevard, lot 50x214, to Paul V. Colianni for a reported $30,000 through James J. Parker & Co.

Science Temple for Rogers Park



Work will start the latter part of next month on the $200,000 fireproof Sixteenth Church of Christ, Scientist, at the northeast corner of North Ashland boulevard and Kenilworth avenue. Architect Howard L. Cheney has designed one of the most attractive church edifices in the Rogers Park district, or in the city, for that matter. It will be of light brick with Bedford stone trim, with 1,000 seats in the main auditorium and Sunday school rooms to care for 675, and will be in a conventionalized classical style of architecture, using the Greek Ionic order. The site is 110x164. The main entrance will be from Kenilworth. It will be ready in about one year.

Physicians' Building to Oust North Side Landmark

One of the north side's oldest landmarks, the Kemper homestead, a frame residence at 644 Fullerton avenue, erected nearly seventy-five years ago, has been bought by Dr. G. L. Kaufman from Miss Kemper and will be wrecked at once to make way for a three story brick building to contain five suites of doctors' offices. Architect Henry J. Apfelbach has drawn plans for a 25x125 structure to be completed June 1. Dr. George L. Apfelbach, his brother, is part owner with Dr. Kaufman.

Illinois Building Shows 59% Gain Over Feb., '21

Illinois building figures for February, according to the F. W. Dodge company, showed a 15 per cent increase over the preceding month, and 59 per cent over the corresponding month of last year. Total building contracts awarded during February totaled $14,288,600. Forty per cent of this was for residential and 27 per cent for business buildings.

This is the eleventh of Joseph O. Kaplan's series of advertisements on Business Property.

Mr. Frank Cuneo

and the Wilson Avenue-Sheridan Road Business District

The remarkable development of Mr. Cuneo's properties in the Wilson Avenue and Sheridan Road neighborhood is of unusual significance to other business property owners.

This development was foreseen and planned many months before this neighborhood had gained its reputation as an active, flourishing business center. Mr. Cuneo, deeply immersed in his commission business, realized that his realty enterprises deserved the attention of some one thoroughly familiar with business property development.

As a result of Joseph O. Kaplan's services to Mr. Cuneo, the following eminently successful concerns were brought into the Wilson Avenue and Sheridan Road district:

O'CONNOR & GOLDBERG
LYON & HEALY
REGAL SHOE COMPANY
WASHINGTON SHIRT CO.
WALGREEN'S DRUG STORE
THE ONTRA CAFETERIA

This is a partial listing of approximately twenty retail stores that have secured locations in this neighborhood through Mr. Kaplan.

It is generally conceded that the development of business property is seldom a natural occurrence. It is usually a scientifically planned procedure—the result of expert analysis and vision.

What Mr. Kaplan has accomplished in the development of the Wilson Avenue-Sheridan Road district—he has also achieved in the loop and at 63rd and Halsted Streets. Thus his vast experience in business property transactions enables him to offer invaluable service to both owner and tenant.

Mr. Kaplan's booklet, "A Brief Study of Business Property," should be on the desk of every man interested in business property. It will be sent to you gratis upon request on your letter head.

NATION-WIDE CONTEST ON FOR CITY BEAUTIFUL

Bankers Offer Prizes to Owners.

JOHN ALDEN CARPENTER.

ALBERT MOORE SAXE.
[Matzene Photo.]

What leading local architects believe is one of the most important moves ever taken toward making Chicago a city beautiful, both on boulevard and back street, is contained in the announcement made last night by Albert Moore Saxe, president of the American Institute of Architects, Ilinois chapter, of the S. W. Straus & Co. annual prize competition for the best architectural design in the city.

A jury of award will decide at the end of each year what it considers is architecturally the most meritorious, in each of four classifications, office buildings, hotels, apartments, and industrials.

"Meaning by that," stated Mr. Saxe, "a building of the most pleasing esthetic qualities, combined with its suitability for the purposes for which it was intended and not overlooking its earning power as an economic unit."

Diploma for Architects.

According to Straus & Co. a bronze tablet will be given to each of the four owners whose buildings rank first in their classes, with the stipulation that it be placed in some location in the structure suitable to the jury of award. A parchment or embossed diploma telling of the award will be given to the architect designing the prize buildings.

Mr. Saxe yesterday named the following men on the jury of award: Charles E. Fox, chairman; N. Max Dunning, Alfred Granger, I. K. Pond, and John Alden Carpenter. All but Mr. Carpenter are architects.

"Straus & Co. haven't confined this project to Chicago," explained Mr. Saxe, "but have offered it to all the large American cities. It should give tremendous impetus toward the beautification of practically all building in Chicago, however, and I expect to see results as soon as owners hear of the plan."

Two Other Competitions.

Two other architectural prize competitions, each on a smaller scale, already are under way. Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company last year offered an annual bronze tablet to the owner of the most artistic building for dwelling purposes, whether bungalow or flat building. The Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank some time ago instituted a competition for Boul Mich buildings and also for the north central district, but as it has never officially notified the architectural bodies supposed to handle the awards nothing has yet been done.

Will Improve Madison St. Between Cicero and Harlem

The Madison Street Merchants and Property Owners' association of Austin and Oak Park has been formed and a move is now under way to boom Madison street between Cicero and Harlem avenues. New lights will be installed and the sidewalks extended to the curb. The new body announces it will coöperate with the Austin and Oak Park business associations.

John J. O'Connor was elected president; William C. Haiges, secretary, and Frank Funnell, treasurer. Meetings will be held Wednesday evenings at 8 at the Jackson Express & Van Co. building, Austin, until further notice.

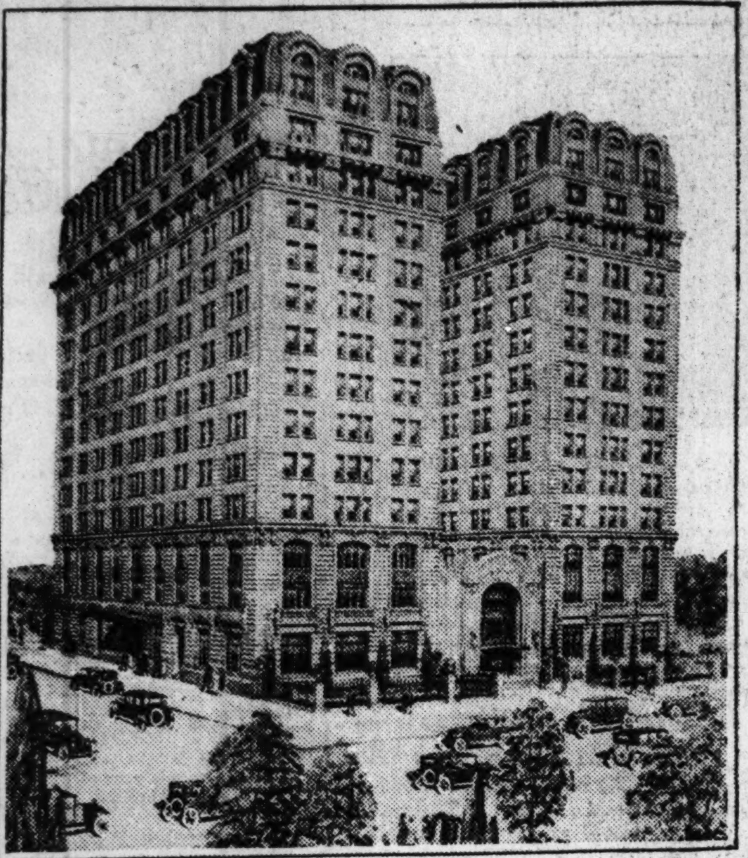
The Belden—City's Newest Hostelry



Fridstein & Co. designed the proposed new $4,000,000 Belden hotel, shown above, to be erected this summer at the northwest corner of Lincoln Park West and Belden avenue by the G. H. Gottschalk company for the Lott Hotel company. The Greenebaum Sons Investment company has underwritten a $2,500,000 loan.

NEW $4,000,000 BELDEN HOTEL TO OPEN IN 1923

Novelties Galore for the Housewife.

Lincoln Park West is to have another palatial hotel, the third of a trio of hostelries owned and operated by the Lott Hotel company, the other two being the Parkway and the Webster. The latest is to be at the northwest corner of Belden, fronting 170 feet on that avenue and 152 fet on Lincoln Park West. It'll be called the Belden, will cost $4,000,000, and will have 650 rooms. The eleven story Parkway has 350 rooms, the sixteen story Webster has 450, so the Lott Hotel company will have a total of 1,450 rooms in its three great structuses.

Smallest Unit Four Rooms.

Architects and Engineers Fridstein & Co., who also designed the Webster, planned the Belden in the French type of architecture, in various periods. The smallest apartment unit will be four rooms, including a kitchenette. These can be increased by any number of bedrooms.

There'll be a commissary in the basement where guests can buy everything from live poultry to sausage. Also a completely equipped delicatessen. So it appears the guests may do all their marketing inside the Belden. Cooking may be done in the kitchenettes by the housewife or a chef will do it for her—if she's not an expert. Of course there'll be a large hotel dining room. All cooking in the hotel will be by electricity.

Here's a feature that will seem to the average housewife too good to be true, but Mr. Fridstein says it's so. Each bedroom will have two closets the average size being 5x7 feet.

Work to Start in June.

Work will start June 5 and the Belden will open about July 1, 1923, according to the G. H. Gottschalk company, the contractors.

Plan $225,000 Apartment Building for Lehmann Ct.

Plans have been drawn by Architect Walter W. Ahlschlager for a $225,000 thirty apartment building, containing four, five, and six room suites, on Lehmann court, just south of Diversey, with a west frontage of 216 feet. Work will start within thirty days with Sept. 1 set as date of completion. Otto and Walter Schmidt are owners.

LEASE WOODLAWN CORNER.

The MacLean Drug company has leased from David Schetnitz the 40x100 store at the southeast corner of 63d and Drexel for fifteen years from May 1 at a term rental of $180,000. H. G. Howard & Co. were brokers.

NEW NORTH SIDE BANK TO HAVE $300,000 HOME

Work started during the week on the new $300,000 bank and office building of the newly organized Builders and Merchants' State bank, of which G. Hallbom, vice president of the Union Bank of Chicago, is president. It will front 80 feet on North Clark and 135 on Foster, being at the southeast corner. Architect John A. Nyden has drawn plans for a three story building with sixty offices, two large stores on Clark street, and the rest of the first floor to be occupied by the bank.

Title was taken to the site by Carl J. Johnson, Hjalmar J. Lind, and Eric E. Skoglund on behalf of the Clark-Foster syndicate, which is erecting the building. The new bank has a capital of $200,000 and will open for business in the new building in August.

Realty Notes

COL. EDWIN M. HADLEY.

Col. Edwin M. Hadley of the Illinois National guard, vice president and general manager of the Chicago-Cleveland Car Roofing company and vice president of the South Shore Country club, will be the speaker at Tuesday's real estate market of the Cook County Real Estate board, held in the realty board rooms on the seventeenth floor of the Conway building. Col. Hadley will talk on "The Personal Equation in Business." Speaking will begin at 2:30 p. m. President William H. Loehde will preside.

"What to name the darned thing" is the problem creasing the brows of the members of the firm of N. W. Winefield & Co., agents for the new skyscraper at 10 North Clark street, designed by Walter W. Ahlschlager, and already 65 per cent rented. It'll be completed in May and will be devoted almost entirely to attorneys. The name Lawyers building has been thought of. Any one's suggestion will be welcomed by Mr. Winefield, who is in the Hartford building.

William H. Babcock, formerly with Walter H. Wilson & Co., has opened an office in the Marquette building with his son, Frederick M. Babcock, under the firm name of William H. Babcock & Son.

NEW BUILDING FOR BOUL MICH.

Work has started on another medium sized but important improvement for Upper Michigan avenue, at the southeast corner of Ohio. John W. Keogh of 1311 Astor street, president of John W. Keogh & Co., and now in Florida, has had plans drawn by C. A. Eckstrom for a two story brick and terra cotta store and office building, to front sixty feet on the boulevard and 100 feet on Ohio. It will be completed the latter part of June. This is directly across Ohio street from the new Lake Shore Trust & Savings bank.
